$6000 SHORTAGE DISCLOSED AFTER CLERK ENDS LIFE

C. W. Rayburn, East Alton Official, Killed Himself April 3 Just Before He Was to Make Report.

"JUGGLED" ENTRIES DISCOVERED IN AUDIT

Small Amounts Apparently Taken Over Period of More Than Two Years—Bonded for $8000.

A shortage of $6000 in the accounts of Charles W. Rayburn, village clerk of East Alton, who killed himself April 3, on the eve of a meeting of the Board of Village Trustees at which he was to make an annual report, was announced yesterday by Mayor Charles A. Van Preter.

The Mayor, who reported the situation to the board after receiving a report from an auditing firm engaged after Rayburn's death, said it appeared that the money was taken in small amounts over a period of nearly two and a half years, beginning a few months after Rayburn first took office in May, 1932.

Transfer of Funds.

Examination of the clerk's books, the Mayor reported, indicated entries had been "juggled," funds transferred from various accounts in order that reports of separate accounts might be made satisfactorily at different times.

Rayburn, who was 46 years old and is survived by a widow and five children, the oldest 19, was a candidate for re-election. The election was held April 16, just 13 days after he was found dead of monoxide poisoning from his automobile engine.

Major discrepancies, the Mayor disclosed, occurred in the accounts of business license fees and water receipts. After Rayburn's death the board of trustees postponed its meeting until April 9 when it found his books in a "chaotic state", the Mayor said, and decided to authorize an audit.

Asked why the discrepancies were not discovered sooner, when the clerk made periodical reports to the board during his two and a half year tenure in office, the Mayor said it appeared that some entries had been withheld.

Irregularities in Fees.

The report of the auditors has been placed in the hands of a bonding company, which issued an $8000 bond covering the office of Village Clerk.

Besides the shortage in the village accounts, Mayor Van Preter said that about 84 automobile license applications, involving about $773 in fees, had not been forwarded to the Secretary of State. Irregularities are also evident, he said, in receipts from hunting and fishing licenses.

FRENCH CLASH WITH NAZIS AFTER THEY CROSS BORDER

Leader of Storm Troop Detachment Arrested; Others Driven Back With Pistols.

By the Associated Press.

METZ, France, May 11.—French gendarmes with drawn pistols arrested a German Nazi storm trooper tonight and forced the rest of the detachment back across the frontier after the Nazis crossed the border near Freyming to go to a cafe in French territory.

The officer in charge of the Nazis, named Haslingen, was arrested, whereupon his companions sought to release him by force.

The gendarmes drew their pistols and the troopers quickly retired, leaving the officer in the hands of the French.

GASSAWAY DARES HUEY LONG

Congressman Says He Hopes Kingfish Will Stump Oklahoma.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Oklahoma's cowboy Congressman, Percy L. Gassaway, "dares" Huey Long to come to Oklahoma to oppose him in the next campaign. To reports the Louisiana Senator would seek revenge for Gassaway's ridicule by waging a personal word battle against him, Gassaway replied today:

"My only hope is that the Louisiana Kingfish will do me the great service of coming to my congressional district and talking against me. There are some people in my district who have not found out just what a fraud Huey P. Long really is. I know of no better way for them to find out than to have him presented to them in person."

Indiana Mayor in Jail, Won't Give In to Utility

Huntington Executive Defies Court in Campaign for Municipal Plant; 1000 Signatures On Petition Backing Him Up.

By the Associated Press.

HUNTINGTON, Ind., May 11.—Mayor Clare W. H. Bangs repeated from his cell in the Huntington County jail today that his campaign against the Northern Indiana Power Co. would not end until the city wins the right to operate a municipal utility.

Judge David H. Smith sent the Mayor to jail Thursday for refusal to pay $1500 damages to the power company which contended extensions of municipal power to residences and business houses violated a Circuit Court injunction.

Meanwhile, persons circulating pledges to use kerosene or other lighting facilities until municipal service is made available to all citizens said they had obtained more than 1000 signatures.

Judge Smith ordered the Mayor and five fellow citizens locked up.

From his jail cell the Mayor issued this statement:

"I will not under any circumstances post bond."

His five codefendants provided bonds and went home.

More than a year ago the company discontinued electric and gas service to Bangs' daily newspaper, the Huntington News, and filed suit to collect $670 for bills alleged to be unpaid. He contrived to continue publication by having his type set by hand and his press run with power from an aptomobile engine.

He then gained the Republican nomination for Mayor and was elected after a campaign in which he declared for municipal ownership of public utilities.

Soon after his inauguration in January he began extension of service from the municipal power plant, previously used only for street lighting, to patrons of the Northern Indiana Power Co.

In defiance of a court order the Mayor sent city linemen out at night and connected several homes with the municipal plant.

GREECE'S EX-KING ASKS EX-QUEEN TO COME BACK TO HIM

Deposed Monarch, Confident of Restoration, Wants Her to Annul Divorce.

By the Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, May 11.—Former King George of Greece, confident of being restored to his throne, has made overtures to former Queen Elizabeth, from whom he recently obtained a secret divorce, to return with him, it was learned tonight. To do this, Elizabeth would have to agree to an annulment of the divorce and renounce per present Rumanian citizenship, which was restored to her by a Rumanian court only a few months ago on her own application.

Elizabeth, it was said, is ready to accept these conditions provided her brother, King Carol, approves.

Shortly after a conference of Balkan pact states here Foreign Minister Demetrius Maximos of Greece, a pronounced monarchist, called on Sir Reginald Hoare of Great Britain to discuss the question of George's return to the throne..

Questioned by newspaper men, Maximos admitted the issue of restoration of the monarchy would be submitted to the Greek people shortly after the June elections. Former Queen Elizabeth, who has been living here three years, recently sold her house.

ROOSEVELT IN BLUE RIDGE, TALKS TO AIDS AROUND FIRE

Congressional Leaders Accompany President on Trout Fishing Trip to Maryland.

By the Associated Press.

HANCOCK, Md., May 11.—President Roosevelt and congressional chieftians talked tonight around a blazing wood fire high in the Blue Ridge Mountains. After an afternoon of fishing, they assembled in the Woodmont Rod and Gun Club for a chat which had no fixed subject matter but was considered sure to include current issues.

Grouped about Mr. Roosevelt were his advisers on legislative affairs — Vice-President Garner, Speaker Byrns, Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, and Senator Harrison, chairman of the Finance Committee. Also in the circle was Postmaster-General Farley, the Democratic national chairman.

The President led the field in catching fish, netting the limit of 10. Marvin H. McIntyre, a secretary, was second with eight. Unconfirmed reports said Col. E. M. Watson, military aide, was last, but his catch, if any, was not disclosed. Venison steak was served at lunch and tonight the group enjoyed broiled pheasant.

Others in the party included: Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, head of the American Red Cross; Stephen T. Early; and Commander Ross T. McIntyre, White House physician.

The dead: Lorraine Metz, 6 years old; Thelma Metz, 8; Esther Metz, 3; Ida May Blower, 7.

EX-TRAIN ROBBER SHOT IN HOLDUP; $4000 RECOVERED

Driver of Auto Wounded by Police in Memphis and His Companion Caught After Robbery.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 11.—Two of three robbers were caught, one of them wounded, and a $4000 payroll recovered less than five minutes after the Anderson-Tulley Lumber Co. had been held up here today.

Police Officer J. J. Jeffries fired a sawed-off shotgun into the automobile in which the robbers were fleeing at 80 miles an hour, shattering the driver's left arm. Police described the wounded man as Felix C. Cutcher, 42 years old, former Missouri and Arkansas train robber, and paroled Federal convict.

As Cutcher's arm was shot from the steering wheel of the car, he lost control and the machine jumped the curb. The two robbers surrendered. A third man who had aided them, had disappeared. The man arrested with Cutcher said his name was Lawrence Barnes, Memphis. Police said Barnes was registered at a hotel as Roy Lawrence.

After questioning Barnes, police took a third man, Odell Smith, 23 years old, into custody for questioning. Smith denied knowledge of the robbery. As he lay wounded on the sidewalk Cutcher begged the police: "Shoot me between the eyes."

J. D. Brooks, an employe of the lumber company, took the number of the automobile in which the robbers drove away after the holdup and police were notified immediately. Three squad cars got on the trail of the robber's automobile.

TAXABLE INCOMES UP $26,700,000 IN COUNTY LAST YEAR

SIX PERSONS LISTED IN $100,000 BRACKET

18 Pct. Gain for This Class—3.5 for 68.7 Pct. Reporting Less Than $2000 Subject to Levy.

(Copyright 1935 by the Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

Taxable income of residents of St. Louis County, reported as individuals for 1934 on State income tax returns, was $26,702,413, an increase of 26.2 per cent over that of 1933, but the number of income taxpayers increased only 11.5 per cent, from 8982 in 1933 to 10,014 in 1934.

A striking increase, 18.2 per cent, took place in the average income of the few in the highest bracket—that of $100,000 and over of taxable income. The increase in average income of those in the lowest bracket, less than $2000, was 3.5 per cent.

These and other interesting facts about the incomes of St. Louis County residents are disclosed in an analysis of 1933 and 1934 State income tax returns, prepared for the Post-Dispatch through the cooperation of Assessor Martin L. Neaf.

Taxable Incomes Under $2000.

As shown by the table printed elsewhere in this edition, those whose taxable income was less than $2000 constituted 68.7 per cent of the total filing taxable returns in 1934, and 71.1 per cent in 1933. Their income was 18 per cent of the total last year and 20.4 per cent the year before.

Taxable income as considered in this analysis is that on which tax is assessed after personal exemptions and allowable deductions, such as tax and interest payments and donations to charity, have been subtracted from gross income. Obviously it does not reflect the actual income of the included groups and it gives no information on the incomes of those who annually received amounts too small to require reporting or payment of income tax.

The personal exemption is $1000 for a single person and $2000 for the head of a family, with additional exemption of $200 for each dependent child under 18 years old.

There were six with taxable income of $100,000 or more in 1934 and five in 1933. They had aggregate taxable income of $791,901, or an average of $131,983, in 1934, and $557,974, or an average of $111,594, in 1933.

The total number of persons reporting taxable incomes for 1934—10,014—is slightly less than 5 per cent of the county's population of 211,593. This percentage would be reduced somewhat in proportion to the increase in population.

4.8 Pct. Receive 39 Pct.

The analysis for 1934 shows that those with taxable incomes of $10,000 and over received 39 per cent of the reported income, but constituted only 4.8 per cent of the taxpayers. The group having taxable income of $5000 and over, which, of course, includes those with $10,000 and upward, received 59 per cent of the income and constituted 12 per cent of the taxpayers.

The analysis provides the following statistical record of the larger income groups:

Taxable Income of $2000 and Over.

No. of returns	2,587	3,140
Pct. of total returns	28%	31%
Amt. of income	$16,842,663	$21,906,218
Pct. of total income	79%	82%

Taxable Income of $5000 and Over.

No. of returns	1,011	1,268
Pct of total returns	11%	12%
Amt. of income	$11,956,498	$15,975,264
Pct. of total income	56%	59%

Taxable Income of $10,000 and Over.

No. of returns	364	491
Pct. of total returns	4%	4.8%
Amt. of income	$7,497,134	$10,528,105
Pct. of total income	35%	39%

These figures, of course, include the personal returns of many St. Louis business men whose homes are in the county.

The figures do not include corporation income tax returns. The final date for filing State income tax returns was March 15. The tax is payable on or before June 1.

(A table showing details of the county income tax returns will be found on Page 4 of this section.)

WALLACE CALLS ON FARMERS TO DEFEND THE AAA

Gains of 15 Years in Danger, He Asserts at Alexandria, La., in Appealing for United Support.

REPLIES TO ATTACKS ON PROCESSING TAX

It "Should Be Retained as Agriculture's Tariff Until Industry Abandons Its Tariffs," He Says.

By the Associated Press.

ALEXANDRIA, La., May 11.—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace today returned the visit of Senator Huey Long who recently attacked the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in Wallace's home town, Des Moines, Iowa.

Addressing an applauding and cheering luncheon meeting in Long's own Louisiana, Wallace called on farmers to stand firm "behind the President" in support of the AAA.

Five of Louisiana's eight Congressmen sat at the table with Wallace and in their speeches praised Roosevelt and his Secretary of Agriculture. Two of them criticized Long, although not by name, for his attacks on the national administration, and received loud applause from the 300 persons present.

Wallace had announced on his arrival here today that he would not assail Long.

"I am more interested in the betterment of the farmer and in the prosperity of the farmer than in politics," he said.

Holiday Atmosphere.

Alexandria, a city of 20,000 population, which Long has never carried in an election, gave Wallace a rousing welcome. He was escorted through crowded streets decked with bunting. A holiday atmosphere prevailed for every highway, railroad and bus line had brought citizens in for the speaking.

After the luncheon in his honor, attended by officials and leading citizens, Wallace addressed the crowd on the city square in an open-air meeting. He urged the farmers to "get up on their hind legs and fight for what they know to be simple justice" and to make a united stand for the cause of agriculture.

"The next few weeks will be crucial," he said, "and if the ranks of agriculture are divided, it is almost a certainty that what farmers have battled for for 15 years will be lost."

Attacks on the AAA, he said, had not weakened its prestige and farmers are "stronger for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration than ever before."

Answering attacks by those who he said wished to abandon the processing tax under the Hamiltonian policy of "unity achieved by the grant of Governmental powers to a relatively few and powerful groups," he asserted the tax should be retained as the farmer's tariff until industry abandons its own tariffs.

"Betrayed by Corporations."

"The Republicans and some Democrats," he said, "say farmers should do nothing for themselves, but should break the big corporations. It is awfully easy to arouse farmers this way, for they have been betrayed again and again by corporations. But making speeches against corporations, even passing anti-trust laws against them, doesn't get us anywhere. The only sensible alternative is for agriculture to obtain and to use Governmental powers comparable with those already used by corporations."

Wallace declared the farm situation changed when Roosevelt became President.

"Since the farmer has to buy in a protected market, the farm program of the New Deal found a way to help him sell in a protected market. For the first time, through the device of the processing tax, the majority of farmers had a tariff that actually worked for them.

"Because of surpluses so huge as to overshadow our whole national economy, because of the limited amount of food the human stomach can consume, because of a shattered foreign market for farm products, agriculture in 1933 won the right to adjust its production to the market that actually existed.

"The Agricultural Adjustment Act borrowed the centralizing power of government so that agriculture might at least begin to win back a little of its fair share of the national income. . . . Now that these governmental powers have

BARBARA HUTTON MDIVANI TO SEEK DIVORCE TOMORROW

Completes Term Required to Establish Residence in Reno to Begin Action.

By the Associated Press.

RENO, Nev. May 11.—Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani completed her residence requirements tonight. She prepared to file suit for divorce from Prince Alexis Monday. Her complaint states the ground in this paragraph: "That since the marriage of the parties, defendant has treated the plaintiff with extreme cruelty."

The complaint alleges there is no community property owned by the parties in the suit, indicating none of the princess' estimated $40,000,000 is involved in the hearing.

It is thought a settlement has been made out of court. Prince Alexis will not contest the case. He will be represented by Attorneys John S. Belford and George S. Brown of Reno. They are expected to merely file a general denial.

AMERICAN SPY SUSPECT FREED

With Two Companions He Was Held a Week in Japan.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, May 11.—An American and two companions who had been held for more than a week on charges of violating maritime laws and suspected espionage were released today after paying a fine of 200 yen (about $57) each on the maritime law count.

They were W. S. Gates, retired lieutenant in the United States Navy, whose home is Lancaster, Pa.; H. G. Wrede, a German, and Gene Rubin, a Russian. They were detained when they landed in a ketch on Formosa's north coast.

Japanese suspected them of photographing the coast and became especially suspicious when they learned Gates was a former naval officer.

BULLET HITS WOMAN AS SHE WAITS FOR BUS

Wounded, Apparently by Shot Fired From Passing Auto in East St. Louis.

Mrs. Nettie Herderhorst, 41-year-old laundry employe, 324A South Fourth street, East St. Louis, was shot in the right arm last night, apparently by someone in a passing automobile, while she was waiting for a bus on the northeast corner of Fourth street and Bond avenue, East St. Louis.

Police think the bullet which hit Mrs. Herderhorst may have been intended for occupants of another car, which she said was pulling alongside the first at the time the shot was fired. Mrs. Herderhorst, a widow, said she knew of no reason for an attack on her.

She was standing with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Alma Jennings, also of the South Fourth street address, when the car, a gray Model T Ford coupe, moved by, southbound, about 25 feet away. She was unable to describe the other machine, which moved between the coupe and the women.

Mrs. Herderhorst said she thought the shot was a backfire until she felt a sting above her elbow and discovered her arm was bleeding. The bullet passed through the fleshy part of the arm and dropped to the sidewalk. Police said it apparently was fired from a .32-caliber pistol.

The injured woman was treated at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, and taken home.

Ruler Comments Laughingly as Hostile Banner Is Torn Down on His Visit to North London—Cheered by Children.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 11.—More than 500 persons were injured tonight when King George V and Queen Mary made the last of their nightly jubilee appearances under floodlights on a balcony of Buckingham Palace before a surging crowd estimated at a quarter of a million.

Dozens of persons were knocked down and many men and women fainted as the throng pressed against the palace gates. Ambulance corps from Victoria Memorial, picked up fallen men, women and children.

Twelve persons were removed to hospitals while more than 500 were treated at the field ambulance station.

The King and Queen remained in view for seven minutes, waving to the cheering crowd.

Half an hour later, the King and Queen appeared again for three minutes in response to persistent demands of the populace. The King in evening dress wore a black overcoat and bowler hat. The Queen wore an ermine coat.

Hostile Banner Torn Down.

Earlier in the day, arriving at Marlboro town hall for a jubilee ceremony, King George laughingly commented on a banner which bore the legend: "25 Years of War and Unemployment."

"Well, it has not remained up very long," the King told the Mayor of Marylebone with a laugh. "Workmen are either tearing it up or are trampling it."

The banner, which was hung from a building across the street, was torn down soon after it was put up.

This was the only untoward incident of the King's drive with the Queen to North London through lanes of 70,000 cheering school children.

Events of the jubilee will be continued until July. Today Wales, Scotland and Ulster gave rousing welcomes to three of the King's sons. The Prince of Wales was at Cardiff, the Duke of Gloucester at Belfast and the Duke of York at Edinburgh.

Prince of Wales Receives Welcome at Cardiff.

By the Associated Press.

CARDIFF, Wales, May 11.—Wales paid homage to its Prince of Wales in celebrating the King's jubilee today. Five hundred women who marched over the mountains to lay a protest against armaments before the heir to the throne were turned back at Pontypridd by police before they reached the city.

The Prince of Wales gave his personal promise he would do his utmost to alleviate unemployment.

"In South Wales your main industry (coal) is suffering from a period of unparalleled depression," he said in an address. "Not only do I share the King's deep concern, but as your prince I regard it as a personal and urgent obligation to do anything in my power to help toward restoration of normal conditions."

Crowds applauded the Prince when he drove through the streets in a state carriage and then attended a round of ceremonies.

NEW AUTHORITY ESTABLISHED TO ELECTRIFY FARMS

Roosevelt Directs It to Supervise, Approved Projects to Transmit Power to Rural Areas.

DETAILS OF PLANS NOT GIVEN OUT

Distribution of Output of TVA Suggested — M. L. Cooke Acting Head of Organization.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 11. — Authority to do an electric power business was vested by President Roosevelt today in a Rural Electrification Administration he created under the $4,000,000,000 work-relief program.

The executive order over Mr. Roosevelt's signature directed the new administration "to initiate, formulate, administer and supervise a program of approved projects with respect to the generation, transmission and distribution of electric energy in rural areas."

Question of TVA Power.

Under one interpretation, the REA, was considered to be able to build or acquire lines to the power plants of the Tennessee Valley Authority. A Federal Court injunction against the sale of TVA power was recently granted.

The order authorized REA "to acquire, by purchase or by the power of eminent domain, any real property or any interest therein," in addition to selling or leasing property.

Whether this foretold the actual purchase or condemnation of existing power plants, transmission lines and distribution systems could not be learned from officials. Morris L. Cooke, already acting head of REA though not formally appointed, was out of the city today.

Details of Plan Lacking.

Details of how a farmer might be expected to benefit from the program were almost entirely lacking. One official said most of the projects under the plan probably would result from organization of mutual companies by farmers, but for further amplification they referred to a radio speech to be delivered by Cooke next Saturday. They predicted "few if any" generating plants would be built because of the huge cost. Cooke has said the program would not enter fields which private capital could handle.

To carry out the purposes specified in the President's Executive order, a tentative allotment of $50,000,000, has been made to REA, half the sum suggested by Congress in the works law. Under the President's power to transfer funds, a potential $900,000,000 could conceivably be devoted to rural electrification.

Officials recalled also, that "approved projects" under the REA program would have to follow the general work project routine of passing through first the applications division, and second, the allotment board. This meant the final say on its activities lies with President Roosevelt.

NORMAN THOMAS TO SPEAK AT SOCIALIST CARNIVAL

Booths Attacking "Boss" Pendergast and State Administration Features of Show.

Booths at the Socialist carnival last night at Jeffla Hall, Lafayette and Jefferson avenues, attacked the present State Democratic administration. An adding machine was presented as a "proposed voting machine for Jimmy Miller's Fourth Ward" and a hospital insignia was a symbol of those not voting the ticket.

Criticism of the power of "Boss" T. J. Pendergast, Kansas City leader, was expressed by a small fir tree with gifts labeled according to the various State powers including the power of parole. A dance was a feature of the carnival last night.

The carnival will be concluded tonight with brief addresses by Norman Thomas, presidential candidate in 1932, and his wife. A pure bred cocker spaniel, belonging to Mrs. Thomas, will be given away.

Thomas will speak tomorrow night at Soldan High School at 8 o'clock on "What Do We Seek To Recover," under auspices of the St. Louis League for Industrial Democracy. Thomas will speak at Graham Memorial Chapel at Washington University at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

New York County Republican Chairman Principal Speaker at Meeting of Young Partisans.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., May 11.—Chase Mellen Jr., New York County Republican Committee chairman, in a speech prepared for delivery at a G. O. P. meeting tonight called on President Roosevelt to abandon his "sophomore experimentation and Barnum and Bailey press-agentry," and return to the 1932 Democratic platform upon which he was elected.

"We have had enough chapters from 'Alice in Wonderland' translated by the Roosevelt administration into a burlesque of orderly government," he said. "We have had about all we can stand of 'Roosevelt charm,' fireside talks and 'prop' smiles."

Mellen was the principal speaker at a meeting of Young Republican Clubs of Eastern New York, gathered to map the strategy of the party campaign to regain control of the New York Assembly this fall. The youthful New Yorker termed the President "the greatest lobbyist of all known lobbyists."

"He attains his aims in devious ways," he asserted. "First, he turns on the charm tap. When this becomes boresome, and faithful followers stray as a result of protests from back home, he stops the patronage."

MAE WEST'S ALLEGED HUSBAND SUES TO ESTABLISH STATUS

Vaudeville Actor Seeks Declaratory Judgment That He Married Movie Star in 1911.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Declaring himself humiliated by Mae West's refusal to acknowledge him as her husband, Frank Wallace, a vaudeville actor, today asked the Supreme Court to back up his claim.

Wallace obtained an order from Justice Ernest E. L. Hammer serving notice on the movie star that he had applied for a declaratory judgment affirming his status as her husband.

He wants the world to know, the actor said, that he is not the imposter that Miss West made him appear to be when she commented, "Why, I never heard of the guy."

On hearing that he contemplated such action, Miss West said last night in Hollywood that "he'll just have to come up sometime and see my lawyer."

In an affidavit, Wallace declared he married Miss West on April 11, 1911, in Milwaukee, while they were appearing together in a vaudeville act.

WALKER OUTLINES WAY OF HANDLING ALL WORK RELIEF

Lists Seven Controlling Principles of Eligibility for Projects to Share Four Billion Dollar Fund.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—In making public today an outline of procedure for handling work projects under the $4,000,000,000 fund, Frank C. Walker, applications director, listed these "controlling principles" of eligibility as announced by President Roosevelt:

"The projects shall be useful.

"Projects shall be of a nature that a considerable proportion of the money spent will go into wages for labor.

"Projects which promise ultimate return to the Federal Treasury of a considerable proportion of the costs will be sought.

"Funds allotted for each project should be actually and promptly spent, and not held over until later years.

"In all cases projects must be of a character to give employment to those on the relief rolls.

"Projects will be allocated to localities or relief areas in relation to the number of workers on relief rolls in those areas.

"To move from the relief rolls to work on such projects or in private employment the maximum number of persons in the shortest time possible."

Method of Procedure.

Here is the procedure outlined by Walker for getting work projects before his Applications Division:

New non-Federal projects: Those submitted by individuals, states, counties, cities or other governmental agencies will go to state public works directors. They will transmit them to PWA headquarters in Washington which, in turn, will check the recommendations and submit applications to Walker.

New York relief projects: Those where the unemployment situation demands "small useful projects" will be filed with the Works Progress Division of Harry L. Hopkins. This division will submit applications to Walker.

Pending Federal and non-Federal projects already approved by PWA will go directto Walker.

New Federal projects will go direct to Walker from the interested Government agency.

All new projects: Federal and non-Federal: Will be passed on by Hopkins before Walker's Applications Division submits them to the allotment committee which advises President Roosevelt on dispensing actual funds.

Comptroller General J. R. McCarl, in a ruling today apparently eliminated subsistence homesteads as part of the $350,000,000 rural resettlement plan.

McCarl advised Secretary of the Interior Ickes that his $25,000,000 subsistence homestead division "not only" would cease to exist when the recovery law expired June 16, but that the Rural Settlement Authority of the work-relief law limiting funds to "the purchase of farm lands and necessary equipment by farmers, farm tenants, croppers or farmer laborers" would "seem to preclude" the use of such funds for subsistence homestead loans.

Another development was the appointment of Horatio B. Hackett as assistant to Public Works Administrator Ickes and the advancement of Angelo Clas to Hackett's former place as PWA housing director.

Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, ordered the purchase of an additional $2,500,000 of materials for expansion of the corps to 600,000 by Aug. 1.

GERMANY ANSWERS U. S. NOTE ON DAWES LOAN PAYMENTS

Firm in Decision to Pay Only in Reichmarks; Blames American Government.

BERLIN, May 11.—Germany in a note handed to the American embassy, stood firm today in its decision to pay American holders of Dawes loan bonds in reichsmarks only, rather than partly in United States dollars.

The note was in reply to a protest delivered April 15 by William E. Dodd, American Ambassador, in which he charged Americans had been discriminated against in favor of nationals of other countries.

Germany's note asserted American bondholders could have the same advantages as those of other nations if the American Government were willing to make trade arrangements similar to those made by other nations.

ILLINOIS OUT OF RELIEF FUNDS; STATE HEADQUARTERS CLOSED

Federal Officials Await Action of Legislature Which Is Deadlocked.

CHICAGO, May 11.—A banner bearing the words, "Because of lack of funds this State Relief Headquarters is closed," hung in front of the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission's headquarters here tonight. The last money had been given out.

At noon today, employes of the commission walked out. Starting Monday, only 147 of the 1500 who worked at the central headquarters will wind up the affairs of the organization.

In the relief offices throughout the State, similar action was expected. The sum of $1,200,000 was made available yesterday only for food and its distribution. Auditors estimated it would last a week, and some counties reported their needs were cared for until June 1. Federal officials have refused further funds until the deadlock in the State Legislature is broken and the State's share made available.

LOVE NOTES HELP CONVICT INDIANA WOMAN BANKER

Gets Four-Year Sentence; Defense Alleged New York Broker Deceived Her.

By the Associated Press.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., May 11.—Miss Margaret Cheney, 41-year-old former secretary of the Tippecanoe Loan & Trust Co., must serve four years in the State women's prison for having entered false items in accounts of her bank.

A Circuit Court jury convicted the woman tonight after deliberating for about eight hours. The jury fixed the four-year penalty and provided for a fine of $500.

Love letters she exchanged with J. Cameron Moag, youthful New York and Chicago broker, were introduced in evidence. Endearing terms surrounded details of security transactions which Moag's firm, Cameron & So., handled for the Tippecanoe Loan & Trust Co.

Attorneys for Miss Cheney alleged Moag professed love for her and then deceived her regarding the bond transactions.

LABOR EXTREMISTS DEFEATED

Nationalist Government Wins in New South Wales, Australia.

By the Associated Press.

SYDNEY, Australia, May 12. — (Sunday)—General elections Saturday resulted in an overwhelming rejection of Extreme Laborites in New South Wales in favor of the existing Nationalist Government, and a victory in Queensland for the present Moderate Labor Government.

The "Recovery" Government of Premier B. S. B. Stevens of the United Australia Party triumphed in New South Wales although it will have a reduced majority in parliament. A final count for the night indicated a gain of at least six seats for the "State Labor" group, extreme wing of the Labor Party under former Premier J. T. Lang, who was dismissed from office in 1932. In Queensland the Government of Premier E. Forgan Smith increased its majority in the Assembly.

NAVY AIRPLANES THOUGHT TO BE HIDING IN ISLANDS

Mass Flight of 45 Craft From Honolulu Said to Be Merely First Part of Big Maneuver.

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, May 10.—Although censorship still cloaked the maneuvers of the Navy's mid-Pacific airplane force today, at least some of the 45 planes which left here Thursday in a mass flight were thought to be hiding at nearby islands. An authority in Washington indicated the 45-plane movement was only "child's play" compared with what was to come.

Unofficial sources here said some of the massed planes could have landed at one of the main islands of the Hawaiian group, possibly Kauai or others north of here. It was suggested they might be in concealment there scouting operations of the "attacking fleet, or awaiting orders calling them into action again."

Observers said some of the larger craft in the armada might have continued on to Midway Island, 1323 miles from Honolulu, ostensible destination of the massed planes when they left here. The air squadron had been gone more than 50 hours this morning.

450 Planes Available.

In connection with the Washington hint or more extensive operations in the maneuver plans, it was learned that upwards of 450 fighting planes were at the disposal of the high command in the mid-Pacific area.

Beside the 45 planes in the initial mass movement, another 32 others presumably were left available at the fleet base, whose total force was announced as 77 planes. Four airplane carriers with the fleet carried 270 planes. Among the battleships, cruisers, destroyers and other fighting craft were another 116 aircraft. These would aggregate 463 planes. The Washington authority mentioned a possible 450 in the maneuvers.

For the first time four aircraft carriers are together under Vice Admiral Henry Varnum Butler, elevated to the new grade just before the maneuvers. His carrier division—the New Ranger, the Saratoga and Lexington, and the old Langley—took some 270 planes into action, while there are 77 big patrol ships under command of Rear Admiral Alfred W. Johnson.

New Carrier in Maneuvers.

The new carrier Ranger, constructed at a cost of $21,000,000 is on its first maneuvers. It is a 14,500 ton craft 728 feet long, carrying 75 planes with a complement of 1303 officers and men. It was designed for 29 and a half knots.

The flagship, Saratoga, and its sistership, the Lexington cost $45,000,000 each. Heavy as battleships, with a tonnage of 33,000, they have a speed of 33 knots, compared with the dreadnaughts' 21 knot speed. They are 880 feet long, with the flight deck 90 feet wide, and carry more than a hundred planes each. The complement is 169 officers and 1730 men, including aviators.

It was rumored here today a mock air attack on this island of Oahu, participated in by more than 400 Navy airplanes, with army planes and anti-aircraft units in defense, may be made during the Navy maneuvers.

If it weren't for radio station broadcasts of the mass flight from Honolulu, a Washington spokesman said, there wouldn't be a censorship on news.

He said radio stations of the fleet are tuned in on commercial stations and news that the squadrons would leave Pearl Harbor Thursday was picked up by the "enemy" fleet, it was said, thus giving it an indication of its opponent's plans.

SENATOR-DESIGNATE

DENNIS A. CHAVEZ.

LAMSON JURY SENDS FOR PIPE FROM MURDER TRIAL EVIDENCE

Seven Men and Five Women Still Deliberating After More Than 24 Hours.

By the Associated Press.

SAN JOSE, Cal., May 11. — The jury in David Lamson's second trial for the murder of his wife gave no indication tonight that it was nearer a verdict than when it took the case at 5:30 p. m. yesterday.

The jurors asked for permission to examine the iron pipe which the prosecution charges Lamson used to kill Allene Thorpe Lamson in their Stanford University campus home on Memorial day, 1933. The pipe, a skull and a rubber doll, used by experts to show how in their opinion Mrs. Lamson suffered fatal injury, were sent to the jury room along with photographs of the bathroom in which she was found dead, charts of the campus home and a blood-spattered clothes hamper.

The seven men and five women on the jury appeared tired and glum when they filed out for luncheon.

Lamson, 32 years old, whose conviction and death sentence at the first trial were set aside by the California Supreme Court, waited in his cell in the county jail.

CHAVEZ NAMED TO BE CUTTING'S SUCCESSOR

Says He Will Drop Senate Contest and Run in 1936 for Remainder of Term.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SANTA FE, N. M., May 11. — Gov. Clyde Tingley announced today the appointment of former Congressman Dennis Chavez, Democrat, as United States Senator to succeed the late Bronson Cutting, Republican, who was killed last Monday in a TWA airplane crash near Macon, Mo.

Chavez was defeated for the senatorship by Cutting in a hotly-contested election last November. Chavez charged fraud and contested the election. The contest was pending before a senatorial committee when Cutting was killed. Cutting's margin of victory over Chavez in the election was about 1000 votes.

Chavez was born in Valencia County, N. M., in 1888, the son of poor parents. He engaged in business and in 1917 was made executive clerk of the United States Senate.

Statement by Governor.

A statement by Gov. Tingley described Chavez as "a natural selection."

"Senator Cutting and Mr. Chavez campaigned for a seat in the Senate in the last election," the Governor said. "The vote was close—so close that it was a question who was elected. To decide that question, Mr. Chavez had entered a formal contest. . . .

"Because of Senator Cutting's tragic death I feel personally that the contest should be dropped. It would be extremely unfair to his memory to carry further any political campaign in which his voice is silenced forever.

"Since the contest had only started, I do not feel qualified to comment upon what the result would have been. I feel, however, that should the Senate have sustained the record shown by the returns, Mr. Chavez would then, logically, be the second choice of the people of New Mexico for the highest gift within their power to bestow."

Chavez to Run Again.

Chavez said he would not pursue the contest, but would be a candidate for the remainder of the Cutting term in the 1936 election.

"The tragic death of Senator Cutting, for whom I held a high regard and a genuine personal affection," Chavez said, "sealed my lips and makes it impossible for him to speak in defense of his rights. Any effort on my part to press the contest further would place me in the attitude of attacking the title of a departed friend. I am unwilling to do that."

COMMITTEE MOVE AGAINST MAYOR'S RENOMINATION

Group Seeking to Unseat Chairman Hannegan Claims Support of 46 of 56 Members.

PATRONAGE ROW A CHIEF FACTOR

Igoe, Brennan and Other Democratic Leaders Reported to Be Backing Anti-Dickmann Fight.

A determined movement has developed in the Democratic machine organization to prevent the renomination of Mayor Dickmann in 1937.

The latest turn of the opposition to him has been a proposal to unseat Robert E. Hannegan as chairman of the Democratic City Committee on the ground that Hannegan has been too friendly to Dickmann. The anti-Dickmann, anti-Hannegan group in the committee yesterday claimed the support of 46 of the 56 members. Apparently they may count on at least 34, whereas 29 would be enough.

They proposed to make Recorder of Deeds John P. English, who is Twenty-fourth Ward committeeman, chairman in place of Hannegan. English told a Post-Dispatch reporter he probably would be a candidate for the chairmanship. The committee will meet June 4.

Reported Backers of Move.

William L. Igoe, "Boots" Brennan of the Democratic State Committee and other influential party leaders were definitely understood to be backing the movement against Dickmann. Igoe's defection came as a surprise to politicians. His friends have credited him with being largely responsible for Dickmann's nomination and election in 1933. His announcement of support of Dickmann early in that campaign was an important factor.

For a time after Dickmann took office, Igoe was a frequent visitor in the Mayor's suite and he was consulted by Dickmann on patronage and other matters. Recently Igoe has not been seen there. The Igoe group has encouraged talk of running Congressman Cochran for Mayor, if Cochran would enter the race. Some persons have mentioned Igoe as a possible candidate. He was defeated for Mayor by Victor J. Miller in 1925 in a bitter campaign. Another mentioned as a possible contender was Sheriff Madden, whose term will expire at the end of next year and who could not succeed himself as Sheriff.

Difficulties With Aldermen.

Dickmann has had difficulties with the Board of Aldermen which have complicated the political situation. During his first two years as Mayor the board was divided, with 16 Democrats and 13 Republicans, but some of the Democratic majority were unfriendly to him. He undertook to change this condition in last month's election, in which the board became solidly Democratic for the first time in its history. All the Aldermen elected then had been nominated with Dickmann's support, but some of them turned against him at the first test of strength.

Back of the resentment against Dickmann by the majority of the committeemen and Aldermen and his opponents among other party leaders has been the feeling that he has not treated them fairly in the distribution of patronage. Every party chieftain, major or minor, has been besieged by jobseekers, who greatly outnumbered the places on the public payroll.

Dickmann has said he allotted 4000 city jobs to the party organization, but he also has given jobs to personal friends and to his own organizations of war veterans and foreign-born voters. The machine has seen indications that its power might be challenged in this way by an independent following of the Mayor.

Committeemen Kept Waiting.

The dignity of committeemen and other leaders has been touched also by the fact that they have sometimes had to wait a long time to see Mayor Dickmann at his office, instead of being ushered in immediately. The Mayor has said this occurred when he was busy with public affairs and could not take up political matters.

A number of the committeemen and committeewomen have got city jobs for themselves. Dickmann has not yet undertaken to "crack down" on them in an effort to force support in the committee or in the Board of Aldermen. In one instance, he called in James J. Gallagher, Twentieth Ward committeeman, and clerk of the Police Courts, asking why Walter W. Ziegenbalg, new Alderman from the ward, had not supported him. Gallagher replied that he did not control Ziegenbalg.

A new party committee, which will control the political machinery, will be elected in the primary of August, 1936, preceding the next mayoralty election. Politicians have anticipated a bitter fight in the committee campaign between the Mayor's adherents and opponents.

Complaint of Madden.

Most of the independent Democratic local officials elected in 1932 and 1934 have been aligned against Dickmann, for various reasons. Sheriff Madden, who campaigned for Dickmann for Mayor, has complained that Dickmann has not recognized him politically since then. Another possible reason for antagonism may have arisen from the defeat of William Stone Madden, the Sheriff's brother, for Comptroller in 1933. Even Circuit Clerk Priest, who formerly was a city employe, has been counted as essentially a follower of Igoe rather than of Dickmann. One of the few independent officials thought likely to remain loyal to the Mayor is License Collector Renick.

While there has been a surface friendliness between Dickmann and Jimmy Miller, Fourth Ward boss and powerful factor in party affairs, political observers at City Hall have concluded that Miller was none too keen for the Mayor. Both friends and enemies of Dickmann have counted in their camps Chairman Waechter of the Election Board, who has become a potent figure. He has been friendly with Miller and with Hannegan but has not often been a caller at the Mayor's office.

Disagreement with English.

Recorder of Deeds English, the potential candidate for the party chairmanship, has had a disagreement with Dickmann. English, a former deputy of Sheriff Madden, had a candidate for Alderman in the big Twenty-fourth Ward who withdrew under pressure by the Mayor.

The Mayor's opponents have had virtual control of the so-called Democratic "delivery wards" in the former Eleventh Congressional District, which usually went Democratic back in the days of Republican control of the city.

Hannegan was made chairman of the committee some months ago because members felt his predecessor, Dewey S. Godfrey, had been too friendly with the Mayor and not insistent enough on getting patronage. However, Hannegan, too, has been on good terms with Dickmann. He has been given the job of legislative agent for the city at the Legislature, which carries $3000 and expenses. Colleagues have interpreted a speech by Hannegan at the recent Jefferson day dinner to mean, in effect: "If you don't support the Mayor, you're not a good Democrat," and they have resented that. Some of the older Democratic leaders have complained that they were bearing the brunt of many losing campaigns when Dickmann was selling real estate and Hannegan was in law school.

It has been taken for granted that Mayor Dickmann would seek re-election. Past talk that he might run for Governor next year evidently was silenced by the indications that Boss Tom Pendergast of Kansas City would not approve him for that place.

CHAIN LETTER CRAZE HOLDING ON IN ST. LOUIS

Even Under Notary System, Few Pleas for Cash Bring Much Profit to Early Investor.

Week-end payrolls helped to keep chain-letter exchanges running last night in different parts of the city, and resulted in the posting of a quantity of letters, each presumably containing $1 or some multiple thereof, to men and women at the heads of various lists, and to those who succeeded them in top positions.

As there is no Sunday closing law for the exchanges, it was expected that some of them would be open today, if new customers should continue to come. When new arrivals cease, the end is in sight, as was the case at Springfield, Mo., where, after two days of frenzied operations, the market collapsed on the third day.

An exchange in the West End sent a placarded truck, with an insistently blowing horn, through downtown streets last night, to honk up business for today.

Maplewood Exchange Plan.

Both the mail and notary features of other chain exchanges were dispensed with by an exchange at 2743 Sutton avenue in Maplewood, where the managers last night announced that nearly 700 persons had paid $1.25 each since the opening Friday night, and that 177 of these had received returns on a quick, three-name list plan, which theoretically yields winners $27. Most of the winners have received from $2 to $4, it was stated. The management promises customers $1 of their $1.25 investment back if they make no winning. E. R. Metzger, an automobile dealer, and Peter Jackson, moving man are in charge of the exchange, located in a fruit store.

Customers of other exchanges which pay off by mail, will await their returns when the postman calls tomorrow. To judge from the record elsewhere, nearly everyone will be disappointed, the losers because they have received nothing, and the winners because they have received so little.

Only a Few Profit.

Even with the so-called guarantee of the notary system, most of the branches of a 10-name chain list fray out somewhere, and only a few come through with a payoff for the early investor.

But they did not tell this to prospects at the exchanges. The prospects heard, instead, of men designated by first names and localities rather than exact names and addresses, and of women—usually beauty parlor attaches—who had won $300, $400, yes $800 or $900, from one measly $1 or $2 bill, plus a notary's fee.

The notary's fee is not to be forgotten. The sure money in chain letters is in writing, printing and notarizing them, and the busy young men and women who do this work sigh when they think how short-lived their rush of business will be.

Notary fees were 25 cents, and stenographers' copying fees usually 10 cents.

Demoralizing Typist Forces.

Stenographers, in some cases, got leaves of absence from office jobs to work in the exchanges. Employers of some other stenographers found that private chain-letter writing was slowing down business correspondence. Discipline overcame this condition in some offices; at other places, office managers had to surrender, and one downtown executive is said to have told his typing force to take the remaining three hours of the business day for chain letters, and thereafter to work for the company or seek other places.

Dime letters are still being sent out at a lively rate, chiefly by school pupils. When they get back to school tomorrow an abatement is expected. Dimes are arriving in the mail for the letter fans, but reports of large winnings have not been verified.

Disappointed Investors in Chain Sue for $35,840.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., May 11.—A civil suit asking for $35,840 damages from seven purveyors of chain letters was filed here late today by disappointed investors.

The suit was filed against W. J. Lazarus, Jerome Bernstein, Irwin Bernstein, A. J. Brunswick, Foy Sale, C. A. Bradley and Mack I. Seeley. The plaintiffs are: J. A. Newsom, Leroy A. Curry, Mrs. M. L. Shaffer, Harold Smith, N. P. Leonard and J. M. Hamilton.

The suit charges breach of contract. It alleges the defendants sold chain letters at $5 each and promised to sell other letters until the names of the plaintiffs reached the top of the list. It was alleged the sellers promised a profit of $5120 to each. The petition continues: "The defendants refused, neglected and failed to sell sufficient letters for the names of the plaintiffs to reach the top."

At Chickasha, Ok., three chain letter exchanges were closed and Clint Braden, Hence Bennett, A. A. Barnes and S. J. Mathis, all of Oklahoma City, were arrested and fined $13 each on charges of violating state lottery laws.

HUMANE SOCIETY AMBULANCE STOLEN AT POLICE STATION

Taken From Parking Space; Found Abandoned in Alley Two Hours Later.

An animal ambulance of the Humane Society of Missouri was stolen from a parking space in front of the main entrance of Police Headquarters shortly after 6 p. m. yesterday and found abandoned two hours later in an alley near Ann avenue and Hickory street.

The driver, Morris Turner, who had called for a parrot belonging to a woman taken by police from Union Station to City Hospital for observation, was in the building only a few minutes. When he emerged with the caged bird the ambulance was gone.

Earlier in the day the Humane Society received a new ambulance, equipped with a draftless ventilation system and insulated against heat and cold. A St. Louis woman, who asked that her name be withheld, paid most of its cost.

Widow of Descendant Of Spanish Governor Here On Relief Rolls at 88

Mrs. Marie Clark de Lassus Recalls Days of Family's Prominence and Prosperity—Preserves Record of Old St. Louis.

Mrs. Marie Clark de Lassus, 88-year-old widow of a descendant of one of the Spanish governors of the Upper Louisiana Territory, is receiving supplies from the St. Louis Relief Administration at her flat at 5041A Kensington avenue, and is finding the task of living the remaining years of her life in striking contrast to the years gone by. She is the widow of Placide de Hault de Lassus, an early citizen of St. Louis, who was a grandson of Col. Don Carlos de Hault de Lassus, Spanish lieutenant-governor of Upper Louisiana Territory at the time of the Louisiana Purchase in 1803.

Recalling the "good years" of the latter half of the nineteenth and the early part of this century, Mrs. de Lassus, white-haired and bent, yet active for her advanced age, is of the gracious manner reminiscent of the early French families of which hers was one. She discusses her present situation calmly, and "hopes things will get better before long." She is looking forward to receiving an old-age pension under Missouri's new law.

Recalls Family History.

Mrs. de Lassus enjoys talking of her own and her husband's family, and the part they played in the early settlement of the Louisiana Purchase and of her early life in St. Louis, Ste. Genevieve, Mo., and the early mining region in the lead belt in St. Francois County. Her husband had a prominent part in founding and building the town of de Lassus, now a "ghost" mining town near Farmington, Mo.

Telling of her husband's family, she recalled that her husband was born in New Orleans, July 15, 1839, the sixth son of Auguste de Lassus, who was the only son of the Spanish Lieutant-Governor de Lassus.

Lieut.-Gov. de Lassus turned to St. Louis and the Upper Louisiana territory over to the French in the "Day of the Three Flags," in 1804, when it came into possession of the United States. This transfer was made in an old house at the corner of First and Walnut streets and the 131st anniversary of the event was commemorated last March 9 at that location.

Retains Old Records.

Mrs. De Lassus still has a large, antique, hand-hewn, solid mahogany wardrobe used by Lieut.-Gov. de Lassus. She attempted to sell it recently, but was discouraged when some dealer offered her only $2 and has decided to present it to the Missouri Historical Society museum.

Mrs. de Lassus has numerous pictures and records, some of them the original French records pertaining to the Louisiana Purchase. She has them all stored, however, and intends some day to give them to the Historical Society.

Mrs. de Lassus was born in Ste. Genevieve, Mo., June 22, 1846, the daughter of Henry Leslie Clark. He was an early citizen of St. Louis. For 50 years he was secretary of the Henry L. Wiggins Ferry Co., and one of their largest boats which plied the Mississippi between St. Louis and the Illinois side was named the "Henry L. Clark." Prior to his association with the ferry company, Clark engaged in the banking business in St. Louis with Eugene Miltenberger, Mrs. de Lassus recalled. Her mother was May Bogy of Ste. Genevieve.

When 18th Street Was "Far Out."

For years her family lived in a large home at Eighteenth and Locust streets. The site is now occupied by the Claridge Hotel.

"That residential district was considered far out then," Mrs. de Lassus said, "and it was country where Kingshighway now is. We used to drive out there on Sundays in buggies and surreys."

Mrs. de Lassus' husband was a major in the Southern army during the Civil War. He was in an infantry regiment from New Orleans, was captured by the Northern troops, but sent home because of a severe illness. Mrs. de Lassus did not recall details of her husband's early life, but after they were married here Aug. 5, 1857, by Father Smith, they remained here a year, then went to St. Francois County, where he superintended the building of the now almost vanished lead mining town of De Lassus, close to Farmington.

Her mother and other members of the Bogy family at Ste. Genevieve, Mo., held extensive mining property in the lead belt, but sold out when they thought it had been developed as much as it ever would be. Her mother sold her share for $600, she said, only to see the property increase over and over in value, as mining was increased, instead of diminishing.

Son in East St. Louis.

Mrs. de Lassus and her husband remained at De Lassus, Mo., until just before the first of their two sons, Placide Auguste Clark de Lassus, was born in February, 1889. They then returned to St. Louis and the second son, Pierre Auguste Leslie de Lassus was born in February, 1892. He died in 1913. The eldest son came back from the World War in ill health. He is married, has one child, and works in East St. Louis, Mrs. de Lassus explained, but "since times have been so hard he has only been able to take care of himself and his family."

Mrs. de Lassus said she enjoyed, particularly, her girlhood in Ste. Genevieve, Mo., and would be "very much pleased" if she could go there in August when a celebration is to be held to commemorate the two-hundredth anniversary of the founding of the town.

Bottle Thrower at Jubilee.

BELFAST, Ireland, May 11.—A bottle was tossed at the jubilee procession through Belfast today just as the car of the Duke of Gloucester, third son of the King, entered Queen's Square, by a man police called "a mental defective." Robert Ferguson, 34 years old, who lives in a home for the unemployed was fined 20 shillings on a charge of "riotous behavior" with the alternative of spending 14 days in jail. Police said they attached no political significance to the matter.

HELD IN MURDER OF 5 BY POISON, DENIES CHARGE

New York Bookkeeper Declares He Did Not Kill Wife and Four of His Five Children.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Frederick Gross, arraigned today on a charge of murdering his wife and four of their five children with poisoned cocoa, was held for examination Monday.

The 49-year-old bookkeeper maintained his innocence after 24 hours of questioning by the police. He admitted only that in his employer's chemical plant he had access to the poison which killed five members of his family in four weeks. He was placed under extraordinary surveillance in jail to guard against possible suicide.

Gross was calm as he answered the questions of Acting Police Capt. Frederick Swirz in the police lineup.

"When your wife and children became ill that night did you send for a doctor?" Swirz asked. "Yes, immediately."

"At dinner that night, did you eat the same food they did?" "Yes."

"Did you drink cocoa?" "No, they drank cocoa and I drank coffee."

Swirz then asked him if he put poison in the cocoa. "I did not," he replied firmly.

J. N. DARLING GETS MORE FUNDS FOR WILD LIFE WORK

Threat to Resign, Whether Authorized or Not, Apparently Leads to $226,308 Increase in Bill.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—J. N. Darling's threat to resign from the Bureau of Biological Survey has apparently netted him nearly a quarter of a million additional appropriation for carrying on the work of wild life conservation.

An increase of $226,308 over the amount allotted by the original House bill was contained in the terms finally agreed to in a conference report on the agricultural appropriation measure which was approved yesterday by both House and Senate. The bill is now at the White House awaiting President Roosevelt's signature.

The fact that Darling later repudiated the threat as unauthorized apparently made no difference in the practical effect it had upon Senate and House conferees. Working with Darling to secure larger appropriations for his bureau were members of the Senate Committee on wild life conservation.

A dispute in conference over an increased appropriation for the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils served to hold up the bill for weeks.

59 Wardens in U. S.

Darling, who is now supervising work of the bureau on the Pacific coast, put up a strenuous fight for additional funds for wild life conservation, and particularly for protection of migratory water fowl. In testimony concerning the number of game wardens which the bureau has been able to employ, before a house sub-committee, Darling referred to the bill before Congress to compel a closed season on ducks for a year.

"We have 22 wardens authorized in the United States now," Darling said, "22 wardens to cover 48 states. This year by borrowing the money to enforce the stamp act (a stamp costing $1 was to be sold to hunters) we had 59; and we got so many results from it that it was really an astonishing thing to see what we could do with a little money.

"Now 59 wardens for the whole U. S. is a ridiculous demonstration of an effort to protect a great industry and recreation.

"That is one-fifth of the number of traffic policemen required on Broadway in New York. And we have to cover the whole United States.

"If the population of migratory birds continues to disappear we can blame no one but ourselves. It is impossible to enforce the law with our present appropriation. I notice there is a bill in Congress to close the season on ducks. With that number of wardens you would have more ducks killed outside of the law than you would under an open season. It is perfectly absurd."

Use for Extra Money.

The bill as approved by conference committee appropriates $222,978 for the enforcement of migratory waterfowl regulations which is $55,000 more than was contained in the measure as it originally came from the house.

"You ask what we want to do with the extra money," Darling said, when he appeared before the committee. "This year we had eight regions, which is not enough. One man had Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Oklahoma and Kansas. That is too big a region for one man, with one flying squadron. We would like to have 12 regions if possible. We believe that we could accomplish much better law enforcement if we had 12 regions and had a mobilized squadron in each one."

Darling also testified that the appropriation for his bureau was not sufficient to guard against interstate shipments of prohibited game and fish. The states made little attempt to stop shipments of contraband waterfowl by truck, he told the committee. Funds available last year were sufficient to provide full time protector service at only four of the Government's waterfowl refuges and part time service at two others, Darling said. Many of them were entirely unprotected, he added.

New Problems Arising.

New problems were constantly arising, Darling pointed out, citing the destruction of wild life in the vicinity of Boulder Dam as a result of the great construction activity going on there. The bill did not provide, Darling added, for protection of new game refuges being added under the program for the purchase of sub-marginal lands. It would require at least $487,000 for this purpose, Darling said.

For predatory animal and rodent control the bill as finally approved, appropriated $600,000, an increase of $146,308 over the original measure. For enforcement of the Alaska game law $96,596 has been appropriated, an increase of $25,000.

While these are fairly substantial increases, Darling's associates doubt that he will be satisfied. He had sought much larger sums in addition to the amounts appropriated in the original bill.

Darling makes the regulations under which the bureau operates and there have been few attempts by Congress in recent years to dictate the methods of wild life conservation. This explains why the only wild life bill before Congress at the present time is the proposal of Representative Berlin (Dem.), of Pennsylvania, and this, it is generally conceded, has no chance of passage at the present session.

STATE SUES OVER $160,000 IN INSURANCE FIRM ASSETS

Superintendent O'Malley in Action Against Pacific States Co. Asks to Be Made Receiver.

Suit was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by State Superintendent of Insurance O'Malley against the Pacific States Life Insurance Co., a Colorado corporation, in which he asks to be appointed receiver of assets valued at $160,000.

The assets, the petition set forth, are at present in the custody of the Superintendent of Insurance, with which department they were deposited by the Commercial Life Insurance Co., and the Union National Life Insurance Co., both Missouri corporations, whose business was reinsured by the Pacific States concern in April, 1930.

O'Malley said the Pacific States Life Insurance Co. was placed in the hands of the Commissioner of Insurance of Colorado last April 20, and the assets in controversy were claimed as property of that concern. However, the Missouri Insurance Superintendent takes the position that the assets were posted for the protection of policy holders of the two Missouri companies most of whom live in this State, and that they should be retained by him for their protection. He is represented by Powell B. McHaney and Paul Dillon.

STATE FLOWER BLOOMS IN SHAW'S GARDEN

50 Species of Hawthorn May Be Seen—History and Legend Discussed in Bulletin.

The hawthorne blossom, Missouri's State flower of almost countless species and legends, is now showing patches of white on the sides of Ozark hills and in lower woodlands. Various species also are in bloom at Shaw's Garden, where there is a collection of about 50 near the rose garden.

Adopted as the State Flower by the Legislature in 1923, the genus to which it belongs, botanically named Crataegus, is widely distributed in Europe and North America. More than 800 species have been described for North America, while about 60 are native to Europe. A bulletin of Shaw's Garden lists 108 species in Missouri, where the hawthorn, because of its bright-colored fruits, is known as the Red Haw, and 20 in St. Louis County.

Valuable for Planting.

The considerable range in habit and size of the hawthorn, which grows from 3 to 30 feet high according to species and its attractive foliage make it unusually valuable for home and park planting.

While the Missouri species have only white flowers in clusters up to about 15, each blossom being about the size of a dime, other species are pink and crimson, and the fruit, while generally red, also may be yellow or orange. In most species the new foliage has a dark red tinge in spring, and again in autumn the foliage again turns red. The leaves vary, but most of the species are toothed, and in some, glisten as if polished.

The shape of the hawthorn is as variable as its species. Some are round-headed trees, others are conical and some kinds become extremely horizontally branched, and are worthy subjects for landscaping as they supply the horizontal line. The fruits range from the size of a pea to some as large in circumference as a quarter. Nearly all have stout, straight, or saber-like brown thorns, some more than an insh long.

Wood Is Hard.

The wood of the hawthorn is white in color, and hard. Indians made wedges of it to split logs, writers say. In England, since the Roman occupation, the hawthorn has been used for hedge and fence plantings and for hammer handles, mallets and cog-wheels.

Its common name is hedge-thorn, derived from Old English, and the botanical name is from a Greek work, meaning strength, and alluding to the wood. The pink and crimson varieties are native to England, and have been introduced in cultivated forms into the United States.

Its branches of blossoms have been regarded as an emblem of good hope, indicating winter is past and spring at hand. The custom of gathering the flowering branches for decorative purposes is of early English origin.

Tradition of French Peasants.

French peasants on the other hand have a tradition that the hawthorn utters cries and groans on Good Friday, based on the supposition that the hawthorn was the source of Christ's crown of thorns. In Ireland there is an old superstition that it is bad luck to uproot a hawthorn.

Branches of one variety in England were formerly highly valued because of the legend that the tree was originally the staff of Joseph of Arimathea.

Athenian girls crowned themselves with hawthorn flowers, carried the branches in wedding processions, writers relate, and decorated the altar of Hymen with them. The Romans considered the blossom a charm against sorcery and placed the leaves in the cradles of newborn infants.

Poets have long sung the praises of the hawthorn, some identifying it in name as the "May Blossom," from the month of its birth.

TWO KILLED, TWO HURT WHEN AUTO HITS TREE

Driver Loses Control Rounding Turn Half Mile West of Collinsville.

Albert Gantner, 36 years old, and Frank Tarasavich, 22, Collinsville laborers, were killed, and two companions were cut and bruised, when an automobile in which they were riding, crashed into a tree on United States Highway 40, a half mile west of Collinsville shortly before midnight Friday.

Peter Maddalino, 21, driver of the car, and Woodrow Mumpher, 21, a passenger, are recovering at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis.

Maddalino told policemen he lost control as the car rounded a turn at the top of the Collinsville bluff. It was wrecked against a tree about a foot in diameter in the yard of E. R. Crow. A leaf from a rear spring was imbedded in the tree trunk.

PUBLIC SERVICE CO. LOSS $475,000 IN 1934

$799,000 Year Before; Busses Earn $150,000 While Street Cars Lose $624,000.

The St. Louis Public Service Co., which is seeking reorganization under the amended bankruptcy law, lost $475,600 in 1934, in comparison with a loss of $799,865 the previous year, according to the annual report of Trustee Henry W. Kiel, filed yesterday with the Federal Court.

The report was for the street car company and its subsidiaries, including the wholly owned People's Motorbus Co., operations of which were co-ordinated during the year with those of the street car lines. The loss as reported was after deduction for all expenses, including interest, taxes and depreciation.

Street car operations resulted in a loss of $624,750, but the busses had a net operating profit of $149,149.

5 Pct. Increase in Passengers.

Passenger revenues, Kiel reported, increased 2.5 per cent over the year before. The total number of revenue passengers was 152,425,217, an increase of about 5 per cent. Coordination of street car and bus routes, the report stated, effected a perceptible increase in passenger traffic, and CWA activity early in the year was another favorable factor.

Operating revenues totaled $13,151,237, an increase of $306,379 over the previous year, and operating expenses, before depreciation and taxes, totaled $9,141,131, a decrease of $21,182. Taxes for 1934 totaled $1,275,415, and $183,707 was paid to the Federal Government in settlement of a claim for back income taxes. The report showed $1,620,294 set aside for depreciation, and $1,653,160 for interest and miscellaneous charges. The funded debt of the company was placed at $24,046,875.

Assets and Liabilities.

Current and working assets, in the balance sheet for Dec. 31, were put at $2,630,391, and current liabilities at $907,820. Current and working assets included $1,937,907 in cash, and $585,663 in materials and supplies. In addition, the report noted a cash deposit of $260,915 for special purposes. Current liabilities included $232,654 in accounts payable, $231,589 in accrued wages, and $329,849 in accrued taxes.

Because of the improved cash position of the company the trustee has applied to the court for permission to pay interest coupons due last year on its bonds. That matter is set for hearing May 22 before Judge Davis.

The company has been in receivership since November, 1930. The real estate has been appraised at $93,000, and the personal property was valued at about $10,000. The sale was requested by creditors.

George P. Dorris was appointed receiver March 24, succeeding Seneca C. Taylor, who could not continue in the position because of illness.

ITALY SAID TO HAVE LAID BASIS FOR AIR PACT WITH FRANCE

Mussolini Confers With Gen. Victor Denain, French Air Minister, in Rome.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, May 11.—Premier Mussolini, in a conference tonight with Gen. Victor Denain, France's Air Minister, was understood to have laid the basis for a mutual assistance air pact. They also agreed to collaborate on civil air services of the two countries, particularly those to South America.

The air pact was described as a bilateral agreement to reinforce a general air treaty yet to be negotiated with England, Belgium and Germany.

Officials said it would involve the closest military co-operation between France and Italy, including the exchange of aviation information, instructors, officers and even materials. It embraces the designation of strategic landing fields that planes of one nation may use instantly and automatically in the territory of the other in case either of them is attacked.

Armour's Meal of the Month
BARBECUED FRANKFURTERS and BACON

Don't miss GINGER ROGERS in the RKO-Radio smash-hit "STAR OF MIDNIGHT"

Ginger Rogers grew up in the outdoor life of Fort Worth. As a senior in high school, she was voted the best all-round athlete in her class. She is completely unspoiled by Hollywood — and how she loves to sit down to a sparkling meal of Frankfurters and Bacon! Be sure to see her in "STAR OF MIDNIGHT."

An all-star meal à la Ginger Rogers planned by Marie Gifford of Armour's

. . . featured by your dealer all during May

"For a really appetizing dish, give me plenty of crispy bacon. With frankfurters! Add a homemade sauce, and I'm telling you, it's a sparkling meal!"

Ginger Rogers (Co-star in "Star of Midnight")

FOR May, Armour brings you a happy combination suggested by Ginger Rogers — barbecued frankfurters and bacon. Marie Gifford worked out the menu and recipes. And Armour has arranged with food stores everywhere to feature the complete meal all this month. It's easy to prepare, economical — and, oh, so appetizing!

Choicest bacon — fresh and flavorful

You start with the choicest bacon — Armour's Fixed-Flavor Star Sliced Bacon. Brought to perfection by Armour's secret process! Fragrant with real hickory smoke! Always fresh! And always the same matchless flavor! Now pair the bacon with Armour's Star Frankfurters — ever so tender and juicy. In the potato put a pat of Armour's Cloverbloom Butter with the richness of eight half-pints of table cream in every pound. Add green beans, salad, a dessert — and there, Madam, is a feast well worthy of your royal family!

been used by millions of farmers for two years, the cry has arisen that they must be taken away. I do not hear this cry from any large number of farmers. They know that a moderate use of these governmental powers has helped put them back on their feet."

Wallace in defending the AAA declared representatives of business have no right to complain about production control under that program.

Declares Scarcity Is Induced.

"Those who charge the AAA with inducing scarcity simply do not know the facts. The American farmer always has produced enough food for every man, woman and child in the United States, and I am sure he will continue to, given a chance to stay on his farm and in business. The adjustment programs have cut down production for an export market which no longer exists; they have not deprived the people of one ounce of necessary food. . . .

"The processing tax is the farmer's tariff, the marketing agreements and licenses are farmer's corporation laws.

Agriculture's continued use of these powers is today in danger. The ghost of Hamilton is abroad in the land. He has come back because he sees that his economic victory of a century or more ago is in peril. As he watched the New Deal, he has discovered to his horror that it not only proposes to give the management of their economic affairs to the people, but that it actually has put the notion into practice."

Extemporaneous Remarks.

At the end of his prepared address, Wallace spoke extemporaneously for a few moments.

"There are plenty of persons who can stir up trouble," he said. "There are some who profess to speak in the name of the common people, and attempt to draw a red herring across the trail. It is extremely important that the farmers be not deluded. It's easy to say 'Don't you think you ought to get more money?'—that you ought to get 30 cents for your cotton, and so forth—but where are you going to get it?"

One of the Congressmen who referred to Long at the luncheon meeting was J. Y. Sanders Jr., of Baton Rouge, who said Louisiana farmers were "humiliated at the remarks of the man who claims to speak for Louisiana" in attacking the administration.

"I am happy to assure you that the farmers of Louisiana appreciate the fact that the first administration since Andrew Jackson is doing something for them," Sanders told Wallace.

Farmers Who Approve AAA Send Delegates to Washington.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—C. H Day, who describes himself as a "320 acre" farmer from Plainview, Tex., said today 3000 farmers would arrive here Tuesday to support the program of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

As advance agent for the gathering, Day said the movement originated in Texas, but that invitations to join in the demonstration had been sent into every major farming state.

"Our only purpose is to express our appreciation to the administration and to Congress for what they have done for the farmers, and to assure our support for any sound AAA program they want to adopt," he said. "We want the processing tax continued. We think it is a fundamental part of the AAA program."

Chairman Jones of the House Agriculture Committee told a radio audience that pending AAA amendments would clarify the existing law but would neither "regiment" farmers, nor permit licensing of retailers or farmers.

"I appeal to the producers whose program this is," Jones said. "If they defend their own program they will one day have a chance to manage their own business and to secure the normal profit from their own labors."

Dispatches from Des Moines, Ia., reported 1000 farmers were on their way to Washington from a dozen states to urge Congress to continue and strengthen the crop control act.

In Lincoln, Neb., Frank Robinson, cattleman, said that those participating "hope to counteract unfavorable impressions of the AAA, which have been spread through the press by anti-administration propagandists. This program has been of far reaching benefit to the farmers and we must continue it."

Among the larger parties beginning their trips today were those from Minnesota and Nebraska. Another of 250 from Texas planned to leave shortly. Iowa's representation was increased to about 20 with the departure of four co-operative dairy marketing association delegates.

In Missouri 30 farmers from Mississippi County were to meet at Poplar Bluff tomorrow night to make the trip.

Delegations also have been organized in North and South Dakota, Kansas and New Mexico.

CHACO CONFERENCES BEGUN

Neutrals to Invite Belligerents to Peace Session.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, May 11.—Representatives of five neutral nations — the United States, Argentina, Chile, Peru and Uruguay—met today to begin their efforts to bring peace to the Gran Chaco.

One of the first acts of the mediators, it was learned, will be to invite Paraguay and Bolivia formally to a peace conference here, with hostilities to cease pending settlement of the territorial and economic questions. Both belligerents were expected to accept such invitations since their armies are reportedly fatigued and riddled by casualties after 35 months of warfare.

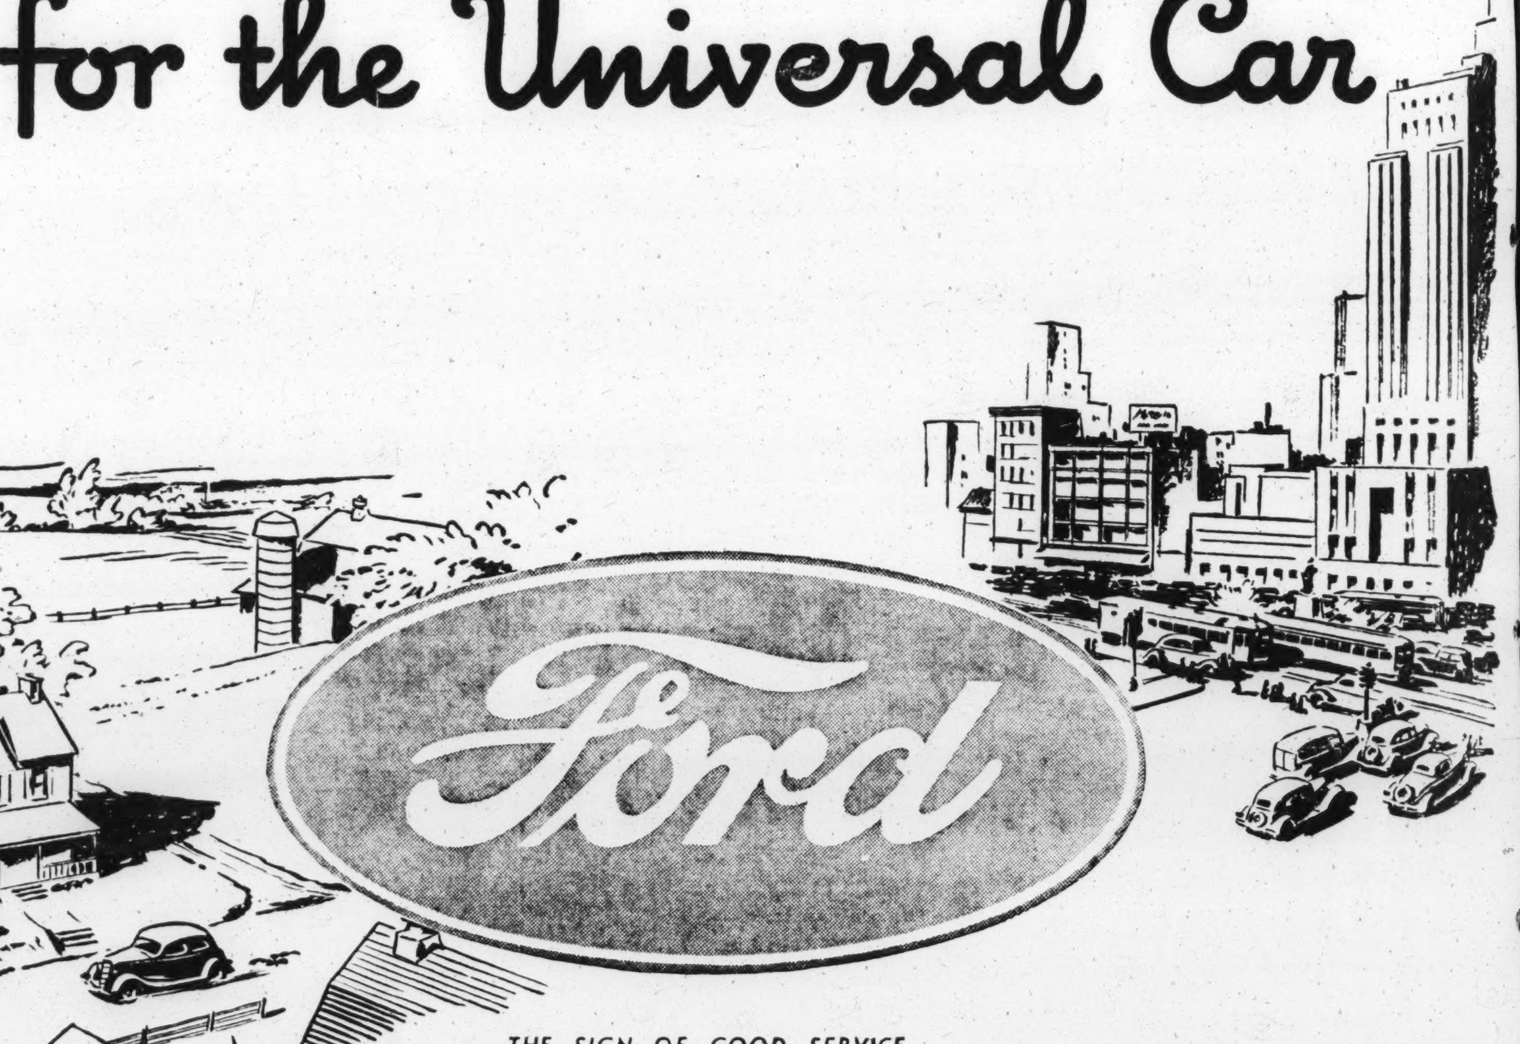
UNIVERSAL SERVICE

for the Universal Car



THE SIGN OF GOOD SERVICE

In the very beginning the Ford Motor Company realized the importance of good service. It was the first to standardize tools and equipment and establish low flat charges for parts and repairs. Today in any community you can see how far Ford has progressed toward providing service as good as the car.

The thousands of modern Ford dealerships are within reach of most of the millions of Ford owners. Other thousands of dependable garages and service stations—identified by the Ford sign—provide supplementary service and Genuine Ford Parts.

When you buy a Ford you can get the kind of service a good car deserves. One of the features is precision workmanship. You can exchange a used Ford engine, carburetor, distributor, fuel pump, generator and other assemblies for "Factory Exchange" units at very much less than the usual replacement or repair cost.

This is "Universal Service" in every respect, broadening constantly through the addition of Ford Neighborhood Service Stations, where you can get extra-quick service—gasoline, oil, lubrication and repairs.

NO END IN SIGHT OF LEGISLATIVE JAM IN SENATE

McNary Says Unless Most of Roosevelt's Program Is Dropped Session Will Last Until August.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—A Republican demand that the Roosevelt five-point legislative program be reduced in order to allow Congress to adjourn by July 1, today brought no response from administration leaders.

Senator McNary of Oregon, the minority chief, predicting abundant controversy over the five measures on which President Roosevelt requested action before adjournment, said the Legislature should act on NRA extension, social security and appropriation bills and go home.

This would mean the scrapping of the public utility holding company abolition bill, the omnibus banking measure and expansion of transportation regulation. The Republican leader contends all three might well go over until next winter's session.

Democrats at yesterday's party conference took no action to shave the program. McNary expressed keen disappointment at this today.

"There must be a reduction in the program if we are to quit June 15 or July 1 at the latest. But if we are compelled to go through with the entire program I fear we will be here until far into August."

Fishing Trip Conference.

Although conferring with his political and legislative chiefs during a week-end fishing trip, Roosevelt's next direct contact with the capitol is expected next week when the Senate releases the Patman Bonus Bill for his action which is virtually certain to be a veto.

Leaders on both sides of the fight appeared agreed today that there were not enough votes in the Senate to overturn executive disapproval. Talk increased that the Vinson plan might then be brought forward, advocates of this proposal contending it is five or six votes stronger than the inflationary Patman measure.

Huey Long on Bonus.

Senator Long in his radio speech contended the bonus was not a "bonus at all but the adjusted service wages—and very poor wages, at that—which the Government allowed to the soldiers for the days that they served in the World War."

Long said that Roosevelt, as Assistant Secretary of the War Time Navy, received $10,000 a year and like himself did not go to war. He added:

"It is true that he advocated going into the war, and I advocated not going into the war. I was against war, and now so is everybody else who has seen how we came out; but outside of that, the only thing that keeps me from being the same kind of soldier that Mr. Roosevelt was, is that I did not get any $10,000, and I did not try to make anybody else go to war."

"Now the argument," Long continued, "has been made that to issue these soldiers this money is opening up the printing press to print money. This is a very flimsy pretense, particularly when Mr. Roosevelt has signed two bills to print all the money that the bankers wanted issued for their bonds."

Each Side Gains Vote.

Senator Borah got into the bonus controversy with a demand for cheap and abundant money.

Huey Long and Father Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit, took to the microphone to rally public support for the bill which would pay the veterans with newly-issued currency.

Each side gained a vote today, but the net result was to make the chance for the bill to pass over a veto even slimmer—it takes two votes for to every one against to set aside a Presidential veto.

Telegrams continued to deluge the White House urging the Chief Executive to sign the bill. Telegraph companies estimated they were arriving at the rate of about 250 an hour.

Leaders announced they would probably release the measure from the Senate Tuesday and let it go to the White House for the President's expected veto.

Patman leaders were encouraged by the statements of Jesse Jones, RFC head, and Marriner Eccles, Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, discounting objections to the inflationary bonus bill.

O'Mahoney Opposes Bonus.

Senator O'Mahoney (Dem.), Wyoming, who was not recorded when the bill passed the Senate Tuesday 55 to 33, said he would vote to sustain a veto.

To balance this, the cash bonus forces claimed a gain of a vote by the appointment of Dennis Chavez, a Democrat, to the vacancy in the Senate caused by the death of Senator Cutting, of New Mexico. They said Chavez would be on hand in time for the vote.

Senator James F. Byrnes from his Spartanburg (S. C.) home, said he would vote to override a veto, but predicted that a veto would be sustained.

Borah's statement was his first on the Patman bill. He emphasized that his interest was chiefly in the currency provisions of that measure. Citing England's experience in paying off indebtedness with new currency, Borah said:

"I think we can stand with great advantage a limited policy of 'cheap and abundant money' in view of the fact that we already have an over abundant amount of interest bearing bonds."

Borah said the only issue before the Senate in consideration of the three bonus bills was "whether we would issue more tax exempt interest bearing bonds or whether we would issue treasury notes of the Government, backed, as Gov. Eccles says, in the same way as the bonds would be."

Senate's Drab Outlook.

Meanwhile, Democratic leaders surveyed next week's program with a degree of hopelessness as far as making any appreciable dent in the major bill column was concerned.

Before the NRA 10-month extension measure can be considered, the Senate first must dispose of the adverse committee report on the Long resolution seeking an investigation of the official conduct of Postmaster General Farley and then the Norris bill to strengthen the Tennessee Valley Authority Act.

The Norris proposal is heading into another Republican filibuster. Should the opposition prolong debate, Democrats were expected to move to displace the bill with the the NRA proposal. Senator Norris has threatened to invoke the drastic debate-limiting cloture rule to get action.

Behind NRA are the holding company, social security and banking bills, the latter two already having passed the House. The holding company measure, modified to provide for abolition of unnecessary non-operating concerns by 1942 instead of 1940, will be formally reported to the Senate Monday or Tuesday.

Union Veterans at Camp Jackson Exercises

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

THE six Union Civil War veterans who attended anniversary exercises of the capture of Camp Jackson by Union troops May 10, 1861, at Lyon Park, 3100 South Broadway, yesterday. The wreaths were laid on the monument of Gen. Nathaniel Lyon, leader of the Union forces, by patriotic societies. The veterans, left to right, are: AUGUST MOREAU, 88 years old; E. E. LATTA, 88; DR. NEWELL PATTERSON, 95; LOUIS SUNKEL, 93; ROBERT TAYLOR; PERRY MARTIN, 88.

CAMP JACKSON BATTLE ANNIVERSARY MEETING

Six Union Veterans on Speakers' Stand at Lyon Park Exercises.

The story of the capture of Camp Jackson by Union troops under Capt. Nathaniel Lyon in the bitter days at the start of the Civil War when Missouri was prevented from seceding, was told once more yesterday afternoon at anniversary exercises at Lyon Park, 3100 South Broadway.

Six Union veterans were helped up the steps of the speakers' stand and sat with peaceful faces listening to the ceremonies. They were the only ones out of the 19 still living here who were well enough to come.

Last year there were 16 of their number on the platform. The year before that, more than 20. There were originally 25,000 Union veterans in this city.

The only veteran now living in St. Louis who was a member of the Union forces that took the camp, John W. Lanley, 89 years old, 6308 Michigan avenue, was unable to attend because of infirmities. In the past few years he had recited Lincoln's Gettysburg address at the exercises; this was done yesterday by John Adams, commander of the John C. Fremont Camp, Sons of Union Veterans.

Wreaths Laid on Monument.

A small group, mostly sons and daughters of Union veterans, sat on benches in front of the speakers' stand in the little park to witness the exercises. The stand was in front of a monument to Lyon, on which a dozen wreaths were laid by patriotic societies. The park was once part of the grounds of the United States Arsenal, the capture of which was planned by the secession forces in Missouri under the leadership of Gov. Jackson.

Former Circuit Judge J. Hugo Grimm recited the story of the capture of the camp, located in a hollow in a grove near where Olive street, Theresa avenue and Lindell boulevard now join.

Union leaders under Senator Frank Blair suspected, with apparent good reason, that the pro-Confederate State Militia encampment at Camp Jackson was really a preparatory move to seizing the Federal arsenal with its 60,000 guns, and $500,000 in gold in the Customs House here, and declaring Missouri a Confederate State. So Home Guard forces and regular United States Army troops under Capt. Lyon surrounded the camp May 10, 1861, and forced its surrender without a shot being fired. In a riot that followed, however, enraged spectators threw rocks at the troops, who opened fire on the crowd and killed 28 persons.

Important to Union Cause.

The speaker declared the event "broke the backbone of the secession movement in Missouri," and was an important factor in the ultimate success of the Union cause in that it had a discouraging effect on secession plans in the other three border states.

Oldest Veteran 95.

The oldest veteran there—he is 95 years of age—was Dr. Newell Patterson, 1300 Pennsylvania avenue, East St. Louis. He placed a wreath on behalf of the Harding Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, the only remaining post here. They whispered to him: "Just say, I dedicate this wreath and so on. That'll be enough."

But cut and driend formalities were not for him. Shouting, 'I'm not going to make a speech," in a voice that rang out so clearly that spectators laughed and cheered, he asserted: "This is a token of what us fellows did in the Civil War. I was a young fellow in Ohio. I didn't know anything about war. Mr. Lincoln called for 75,000 volunteers to put down the rebellion—and I was one of them. I fought in the Thirty-second Ohio regiment for three years. It's beginning to rain now, so I'll have to cut it."

Another veteran, E. E. Latta, 303 North Meramec street, Clayton, stepped forward with a firmness that belied his 88 years and presented another wreath. He was a member of the 196th Pennsylvania Infantry.

The other veterans there were Perry Martin, 88, 3529 North Ninth street, of the Twenty-third Illinois Infantry; Robert Taylor, Mount Vernon, Ill., who was with the Thirteenth Illinois Calvary Louis Sunkel, 93, 7393 Flora avenue, Maplewood, of the Forty-third Illinois Infantry, and August Moreau, 88, of Creve Coeur, who was a sailor on the U. S. Monitor "Neosha."

WOMAN ACCUSED OF MURDER OF DANCE HALL OPERATOR

Warrant Issued Against Mrs. Mae Brennan in Creve Coeur Shooting.

A warrant charging the murder Friday morning of Louis Hildebrand, paroled bank robber, in his dance hall at Creve Coeur Lake, was issued yesterday at Clayton against Mrs. Mae Brennan, piano player in the resort.

Mrs. Brennan, who admitted she shot Hildebrand, was ordered held without bond. She declared that he had frequently beaten her and that she fired when he advanced on her with a heavy club. Hildebrand was shot in the hip in August, 1933, by his divorced wife, Mrs. Ruth Walsh, during a row in her rooming house in the 4200 block of Olive street.

ST. LOUIS LAND BANK LENDS $145,000,000

Two-Year Figure Under Mortgage Act Exceeds Total in Previous 16 Years.

In the two years since May 12, 1933, when Congress passed the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act, the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis has lent more money to farmers than it did in the previous 16 years dating from the organization of the bank, Walter L. Rust, president, said yesterday.

The bank has lent more than $145,000,000 to 46,500 farmers in Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas during the last two years. In the previous 16-year period it made 41,245 loans totaling $144,230,000. About 64 per cent of the loans in the last two years were made by the bank as agent for the Land Bank Commissioner, the balance on its own account. Commissioner's loans can be made on second mortgage security.

About 90 per cent of the loans were for refinancing existing debts at lower rates of interest and over a longer term of years. Frequently the principal of the debt was reduced by compromises which creditors accepted.

Senior Girl Scouts in Demonstration

SENIOR Girl Scouts form a "wave" during the West District organization's Play Day in Forest Park yesterday. It was the first public demonstration of Mariner activities, an extension program for girls who have completed the regular Girl Scout tests.

NEW TRAINS ON 3 LINES TO CUT CHICAGO TIME

Alton, I. C. and Wabash to Race; Two Types of Streamline Carriers.

Three major railroads operating between St. Louis and Chicago soon will race with streamlined trains to provide a five-hour, or better, schedule between the two cities. Present schedules are about 6½ hours.

Two of the railroads, the Illinois Central, and the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., which operates the Alton Railroad, yesterday made known details of their new trains, while officers of the Wabash Railway Co. indicated their line would provide similar service.

The Baltibore & Ohio entry is a streamlined, steam train, similar to conventional steam trains, but weighing only about half as much as a regular train and designed to operate at much faster speeds. The Illinois Central train, now nearing completion in Chicago, is of the new Diesel engine type. The Baltimore & Ohio, also has a new, streamlined, Diesel oil-electric locomotive powered with 1800 horse-power engines for operation with its new trains.

St. Louisans will get their first view of the new trains Tuesday when the Baltimore & Ohio steam train, christened "The Abraham Lincoln," will be on exhibition at Union Station.

Much More Space Provided.

The train is built of Cor-Ten steel, is semi-streamlined and the light-weight material affords much more space than in trains of conventional design. It has eight cars, including a mail and express; combination baggage-smoker; two coaches; diner; two parlor cars and an observation car with streamlined rear end. It will seat 258 passengers, is completely air-conditioned and insulated to make it noise proof. Baltimore & Ohio officials said it is the first, full-size, streamline train that provides space and capacity of standard passenger cars.

Two of these steam trains have been built and are ready for service soon on the Baltimore & Ohio and the new Diesel locomotive also will soon go into service, company officers said. The trains were constructed at the American Car Foundry Co., plant at St. Charles.

The Illinois Central, streamlined Diesel train, on which construction is being completed at Chicago at the Pullman Car Co. plant, is completely streamlined and will be ready for service between St. Louis and Chicago shortly after July 1.

New Illinois Central Train.

This train, constructed of new, light steel and aluminum alloys, will cost $400,000 railhead officers said, will be 330 feet long and weigh 250 tons, which is much lighter than conventional trains. It will consist of five cars, including the motor section, baggage and express car, two chair cars, and combination lounge-parlor-diner car, and will seat 150 passengers. It will be driven by 1200 horse-power Diesel oil-electric engines and is expected to have a maximum speed of 120 miles an hour. It will be air-conditioned and insulated to keep out dust and noise. The exterior will be of a glistening, steel finish and the train will be similar in appearance to the streamlined Diesel trains operated by the Burlington Railroad.

Officers of the Wabash Railway Co., here said they had no announcement to make of any plans for speed-up, streamline train service on their line between St. Louis and Chicago, but added their road would meet any service of any of the other roads. They would not divulge if their company is considering Diesel engined, or streamlined steam trains, but it is understood they are contemplating streamlined, steam trains.

Air-Cooled to Southwest.

Southwestern railroads, which last year retarded a 14-year slump in passenger traffic with air-conditioned trains, are using a larger dose of the same medicine this year.

Three railroads with headquarters here—the Missouri Pacific, the Frisco and the Katy—announced that by the middle of June all sleeping and dining cars on their crack trains would be air-cooled.

The new equipment will provide fresh air at an inside temperature of between 70 and 80 degrees. The work of installation of the cooling system is providing employment for approximately 600 extra men.

The Katy is adding 50 "ventilated" sleeping cars. Forty-two will be equipped with the Pullman mechanical air-conditioning system using a compressor for producing refrigeration. Compressor power is provided directly from the car axle. The other eight cars will be equipped with ice-activated conditioning.

The Frisco, featuring a combination coach-buffet-sleeper car of new design, is extending its air-conditioning facilities this year to all first-class chair cars, coaches and sleeping cars. The new combination coach, air-conditioned, is of all steel construction.

Completing a six-month, $600,000 re-equiping program, the Missouri Pacific will introduce 198 newly air-conditioned passenger cars on its lines this summer. More than 350 extra men were employed in the railroad's shops at North Little Rock, Ark., Sedalia, Mo., and Palestine, Tex., in remodeling the coaches.

SENIOR GIRL SCOUTS DEPICT WORK OF MARINER DIVISION

Junior Rank Members See Knot Tying, Signaling Demonstration in Forest Park.

The Mariner program, an extension of Girl Scout activities for older girls, was demonstrated in Forest Park yesterday to 266 girls of 20 troops from the West District of the St. Louis Girl Scout Council.

Older girl patrol leaders planned and executed most of the day's events, designed to show the Scouts what Mariners do. No Mariner division of the Girl Scout organization has been formed here as yet although many councils in Eastern States have such a department. Mrs. C. W. Kuechler, 1240 Hawthorne place, was chairman of the council committee which sponsored the event.

Games, stunts, playlets and the singing of sea chanties and ballads were the principal activities. The "forenoon watch" began at 10 a. m., continuing until luncheon, which was called "Galley Time and Sea Food." Two playlets, dramatizing signaling, knot tying, and other exercises, were presented during the afternoon.

ERWIN LODGE OF MASONS TO CELEBRATE 85TH YEAR

Rev. Arthur Mather, Secretary of Missouri Grand Lodge, to Speak at Dinner Wednesday.

The eighty-fifth anniversary of Erwin Lodge of the Masonic order will be celebrated at a dinner at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday at the Scottish Rite Cathedral, 3635 Lindell boulevard. The principal address will be by the Rev. Arthur Mather, secretary of the grand lodge of Missouri. A. S. Werremeyer will be toastmaster. There will be a musical program and dancing.

This lodge took its name from a distinguished German Free Mason, Erwin von Steinbach, grand master of the grand lodge of Germany for years and principal architect of the Strasbourg Cathedral. Organized as a German lodge, with many members from the North Side, the order conducted its business and conferred degrees in German until the United States entered the World War, being the only German lodge in the State. The grand lodge prohibited use of foreign languages in 1922.

Colonization Organizer to Speak.

Abe Epstein of New York, national organizer of the ICOR, organization promoting Jewish colonization in Biro Bidjan, Soviet Russia, will speak at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening at the Y. M. H. A., Union boulevard and Enright avenue. He was the only United States delegate at the ICOR congress in Biro Bidjan last February.

CENTRALIA, ILL., PROPOSES LEASING UTILITY SYSTEM

Mayor to Submit Idea at Conference; Strike Has Cut Off Service.

By the Associated Press.

CENTRALIA, Ill., May 11.—City officials launched a new plan tonight to end labor difficulties that have cut off the city's gas supply since April 3.

Aroused by the dynamiting of a pipe line last night that cut off gas service to Mount Vernon, Mayor Louis Peiser announced the city would attempt to lease both the gas and electric distribution systems of the Illinois Power & Light Co. here. A conference of city officials and power company representatives will be held tomorrow to discuss the proposal.

Mayor Peiser said striking employes of the company had tentatively agreed to return to work if the plant were leased and operated by the city.

"The plan also has to be approved by the State Commerce Commission and the international officers of the labor union," the Mayor said.

Parole Violator to Be Returned.

TOPEKA, Kan., May 11.—Gov. Alf M. Landon granted a Missouri requisition today for Arthur Powers, wanted as a parole violator from the Missouri penitentiary. Powers will be released from the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth tomorrow.

Studio Gossip

WILL ROGERS has signed a contract to continue his Headliners programs at 6.30 Sundays on the CBS net through June 9, instead of quitting today, as was planned originally. James Melton, the Revelers Quartet and Lou Lehr, the comedian, will not be starred on this program until June 16, after which they will become the headliners for a month. Kate Smith is expected to conclude her Monday night broadcasts on May 27, and on the following Thursday night to head an elaborate show on the CBS chain in opposition weekly to Rudy Vallee's Broadway Varieties. Her matinee program will be dropped, so that she can concentrate on a network fight to win listeners from Vallee. Some of the entertainers on her matinee bill will be used with a number of CBS chain and stage and movie celebrities. . . . Wendell Hall, billed as the "Red-Headed Music Maker" on KSD Sunday afternoon, has been a radio star since 1921 . . . Tony Wons will go off the air for a vacation in June. . . . The Roses and Drums dramas will continue through the summer, for the first time . . . Lulu McConnell probably will be on Al Jolson's Saturday night spot Saturday of next week . . . Reports are that the One Night Stands series will go on the CBS chain early next month.

LATEST information about Joe Penner, the comedian, is that he will continue his present series until June 30, but that he has asked and obtained from his sponsor a release from an option on his radio services for next year. Variety reports that Robert L. ("Believe-It-Or-Not") Ripley has been engaged for a 26-week series on Penner's spot, starting Oct. 2. Penner is quoted as saying that his reason for getting the release from the option was only that he felt that after being on one program for two years he should make a change, and that he would stay off the air unless he could get an even bigger program . . . Samuel Barber, the baritone, who has a weekly recital on the WJZ chain at 1 p. m. Wednesdays, has been awarded the Pulitzer Prize for composition . . . Eric Dressler, who is playing "John Beall," the Confederate spy and conspirator, in the Roses and Drums drama, has a record for leading roles in successful Broadway plays . . . Ruth Chatterton is expected to get a Radio Theater billing soon after her arrival from Spain . . . The title role in the Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch serial is played by Betty Garde.

PLANS are making to broadcast the voices of the Dionne quintuplets. . . . Edward McHugh, the Gospel Singer, broke a leg recently, so has been broadcasting from a wheel chair. . . . The Voice of Experience, who is Marion Sayle Taylor, was a student at William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo. On May 28, he is to be guest of the town and college and make the commencement address. . . . Gene Conklin, Fred Waring's new tenor soloist, began as a musician by playing the saxophone, clarinet and flute in dance bands. . . . Fray and Bragiotti, the two-piano team, will be featured in the Victor Kolar Symphony concert Sunday night, June 16. . . . Gertrude Berg's new serial, the House of Glass at 6:30 Wednesdays, appears to be on the way to success. Her Goldberg Family's sketches at one time were widely popular. . . . Borrah Minnevitch and his harmonica band will go to California in July to take part in Eddie Cantor's new movie. . . . Horace Heidt, whose Brigadiers program in a CBS net feature, is a Californian. He has undergone 17 operations as a result of an injury to his spine in a football game at the University of California. He organized his orchestra on the college campus, and for several years has been one of the leading dance orchestra conductors on the coast.

BERNICE CLAIRE, who sings with Frank Munn on KSD, probably will sing the lead in a couple of Muny Opera productions this summer. . . . The girl who does the loud laughing and the tough talking on Beatrice Lillie's program is Arlene Francis, who succeeded Rosaline Green as mistress of ceremonies for Phil Spitalny's all-girl orchestra program. . . . Noted dance orchestra leaders whose orchestra are off the air because of a New York musician's union ruling imposing a $3 head tax for broadcasts may come back on the air presently, but as conductors of an NBC dance band. It is said that the scheme is to spot the network band as often as possible and then have these leaders take turns conducting it.

TED PEARSON, who reads poetry on one of Richard Himber's programs, is a free lance announcer. He got his start at WJKS, Gary, Ind., and for a while was with the NBC in Chicago. . . .

Fred Astaire and Ann Sothern may be on the air in a 45-minute CBS Chain show soon, with Freddy Green leading the orchestra. . . . Jack Pearl's program may go off the air before the month ends. . . . Norman Barry, an NBC announcer at Chicago, was born in St. Louis in 1909, attended Ohio State University, was a sailor on the Great Lakes, a soda clerk, taxicab driver and an accountant before winning a place in 1930 as an announcer for WIBO, Chicago. . . . Peg La Centra, who sings on Max Baer's "Lucky Smith" series on KSD, is only five feet tall and weighs only 89 pounds. . . . Peter Van Steeden, who won the contract as musical director for Fred Allen's Town Hall Tonight program against 30 other orchestra leaders, was born in Amsterdam, Holland, but has lived in New York since he was 4 years old. He started his own orchestra when an engineering student at New York University, won a place on WEAF programs in 1924, and since has been musical director on a number of network programs, among them Ray Perkins, Jack Pearl and Tim and Irene. He insists that good tempo and musicianship are more important than tricks in orchestra work.

St. Louis Pianist in Chain Series.

RUDOLPH GRUEN, of the two-piano team, Hall and Gruen, is a native of St. Louis, a graduate from Webster Groves High School and Washington University. He has played with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, in concerts throughout this country and in Europe, Canada, Hawaii, Australia and New Zealand. He is quite well known as a composer and arranger. Frances Hall, the other member of the team, is his wife. She has made a reputation of her own as a pianist, having played with the New York Philharmonic and in a tour of Europe. Their recitals are scheduled at 5:15 Tuesdays on the WEAF chain.

Felix Weingartner, the aged conductor, who has just been appointed general musical director of the Vienna State Opera, will lead a concert in Basle, Switzerland, which will be broadcast by the WJZ net at 2:30 Tuesday.

Shandor, the Gypsy violinist, who plays on the WJZ chain at 10 p. m. weekdays, has been given an additional 15-minute spot at 9:15 p. m. Sunday nights. As a child in Hungary, it is said, he ran away from home to join a Gypsy band. Returned home, he ran away again, this time to America. He has had years on the concert stage. Apparently, the complaints of listeners about the welter or dance music nights occasionally make an impression on network and station managers.

Prix De Rome awards in painting, sculpture, architecture and landscaping will be announced, and the winners will be interviewed, at 5:05 Wednesday on KSD. The awards carry $1500 and living expenses and tuition for a year of study in Rome, Italy.

Million Dollar Television Test Project Started

Transmitter to Be Erected in East for Field Demonstration—No Chance That Broadcasting Will Be Supplanted, Sarnoff Declares in Statement.

By SOL TAISHOFF.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—A million dollar experiment in television is being undertaken by the Radio Corporation of America. The RCA decision to erect a transmitter in the East, between New York and Philadelphia or in one of those cities, is expected to be followed by similar moves by competitive companies. RCA obviously has in mind the public television services recently instituted in England and Germany.

The "field demonstration" of television will follow a three-point plan outlined by David Sarnoff, president of the radio concern, and chairman of the board of the National Broadcasting Co. These are establishing a modern "high definition" system (as against low definition systems abroad) in a suitable center of population; manufacture of a limited number of television receivers to be located at strategic points and an experimental program service.

It is emphasized, however, that the action is not to be construed as proclaiming the arrival of television, and that there is not the remotest idea that it will supplant sound broadcasting. Thus, it becomes evident that if RCA and the other companies experimenting with visual radio had their way, they would continue television in the laboratory. Obviously, European nations have forced the issue, since RCA and other American experimenters contend that the English and German systems are far behind the progress made in this country and that what is being done abroad was discarded here five years ago.

For example, the British system, now being used in regular weekly broadcast schedules, utilizes low definition of what is termed technically as "45 line" scanning, which is said to produce an inferior picture comparable to the "flicker" movies at the turn of the century. RCA claims to produce "upon a laboratory basis" pictures of 343-lines, comparable to a high-grade half-tone.

Only a Start.

THE million dollar budget set aside by RCA for this "out-of-the-laboratory" experiment is but a drop in the bucket when considered in relation to the cost of introduction of practical television. Television, which is destined to go to the ultra-high frequencies, will be most limited in its coverage, with a big station serving an area of only 15 to 25 miles radius, so one can get an idea of the number of stations which would be required in the present state of the art to serve the 3,000,000 square miles of the United States. Then there is the problem of linking "networks" of television stations like broadcasting stations, because today there are no telephone lines having sufficient capacity for transmission of radio pictures. Finally there is the problem of obsolescence of transmitter and receiver equipment if technical progress is to be made with millions of dollars of investment involved.

"In the sense that the laboratory has supplied us with the basic means of lifting the curtain of space from scenes and activities at a distance," said Sarnoff, "it may be said that television is here. But as a system of sight transmission and reception, comparable in coverage and service to the present nation-wide system of sound broadcasting, television is not here, nor around the corner. The all-important step that must now be taken is to bring the research results of the scientists and engineers out of the laboratory and into the field."

WALL STREET ENCOUNTERS AN INFLATION BUG AGAIN

Discriminating This Time and Bonds Are Untouched — Most Active Trading in Stocks in Many Months — Index at New 1935 High.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 11.—The inflation bug returned to Wall Street this week, but it was discriminating.

It bit the stock market, but withheld its paralyzing sting from bonds. Shares surged upward in some of the busiest trading in many months. Highest grade bonds eased off a trifle toward the end of the week, but the orthodox inflation pattern of rising stocks and declining high-grade bonds was lacking.

Investors and traders bid stocks up to new highs for the year at the week-end session.

In terms of the Associated Press average of 60 stocks the market closed at 41.8, a new high since July 19, 1934, compared with 41.5 on Friday. The hourly rate of trading was a trifle more brisk than yesterday. Turnover totaled 634,660 shares for the two-hour session against 1,581,260 for the preceding five-hour session.

Buyers for the advance apparently gave little heed to the sharp drop in automobile production recorded by Cram's estimate. The decline from 110,365 cars last week to 87,395 units for the week ended May 11 was attributed to developments from labor troubles in the Chevrolet plants and also to the five-day week schedule effected at the Ford factories, and had been discounted in advance as a market factor.

Market observers said long range market visibility continued low owing to the uncertainty surrounding legislation on banking, NRA and the bonus. In view of this obscurity Wall Street was all the more impressed by the general demand for shares which hoisted both the industrials and utilities to new highs for the year, as measured by averages, in spite of the draggy behavior of the rails.

Some of the Gainers.

Ringleaders in the advance of the industrials were American Can with a 2 point gain, du Pont, up 1¼; Eastman Kodak, up 2¼; Inland Steel, up 1¾, and International Cement, which scored 1⅜.

As in recent sessions the preferred issues were in good demand. Gains of 1 to 3 points were made by the following senior shares: American Power & Light, Barker Brothers, Bucyrus Erie, A. M. Byers, Electric Power & Light, Goodyear and Revere Brass.

American Crystal Sugar preferred jumped 4 points to 111, while another fast pacer among the preferred group was New York Steam which bounded up 5 points to 95.

Led by the Treasuries which eased on the spreading of scary bonus talk, domestic bonds developed a number of soft spots.

In the face of the Department of Agriculture estimate which showed a decline of 3,862,000 bushels in winter wheat to 431,637,000 bushels as of May 1, the wheat market eased after an early rally and closed with net losses of ⅜ to 1½ cents a bushel. Corn gave up ¾ to 1⅜ cents, while cotton yielded 5 to 25 cents a bale.

In the foreign exchange market the British pound gained ¾ of a cent to $4.86¼. The French franc was unchanged at 6.59 cents.

In reviewing the week Wall Street observers noted trading activity had expanded to 7,102,130 shares compared with 4,872,580 shares the week before, a growth which was reflected in the sale today of a Stock Exchange seat $95,000, the highest price since December last year.

News of the Week.

The passage of the Patman bonus bill—calling for $2,000,000,000 of fiat money—was sufficient to help churn up oil, non-ferrous metal and other shares regarded as inflation hedges, despite the clear indication that the measure would receive a prompt veto at the White House. The fact that Congress would vote such a measure, stock market bulls argued, was significant of the trend. But the bond market was unimpressed.

Steel operations receded further, and there were other indications of seasonal recession in industry, yet there was a substantial quota of favorable trade and corporation news to add fuel to the bullish fires in the share market. Residential building gained sharply in April, and the report of automobile production for the month placed the total at the highest for any April since 1929. There was a sharp rise in bank clearings to the highest levels in a long time. Electric Power and freight movement gained contra-seasonally, and retail trade was active where weather conditions were favorable.

Business indicators still showed a lop-sided situation, however. Steel production slipped to a new low for the year at 42.2 per cent of capacity, compared with 56.9 per cent a year ago. Textile mills continued to operate well under levels of this time last year. And despite the gain of 1.8 per cent over the previous week in freight movement, the total was 6 per cent under the corresponding week of 1934.

Money Market Factor.

Analysts looking for reasons for the bond market's apparent imperviousness to recurrent flurries of inflation jitters found adequate material in the banking statistics and the condition of the money market. With excess reserves of the banks still over $2,000,000,000, and banks and investment institutions seriously pressed to find profitable investment for their funds, investors who wished to concentrate more of their capital in stocks could do so without visible affect upon the bond market. The banking statistics indicated that the low rates in the New York money market had driven over $100,000,000 into the interior within the past three weeks or so. It was notable that four of the interior reserve banks cut their rediscount rates during the week.

From many points of view, the Supreme Court's 5-to-4 decision overruling the Railway Pension Act was regarded as the most significant development of the week. Some observers felt that it implied several momentous new deal measures would be found unconstitutional. But, as a market influence, it fell flat, probably because it had been too long expected, and because of its limited help the more hard-pressed railroads.

Closing price and net change of the 15 most active stocks: Briggs Mfg. 30, down ¼; American Power & Light 4⅛, up ½; Gen. Gas & Electric A ½, up ⅛; Radio 5¼, up ⅛; Unit. Aircraft Corp. 13¾, up ⅛; U. S. Pipe 19⅜, up 1½; Gen. Electric 24¾, unchanged; American & For. Pow. 4, up ⅜; Int. Tel. & Tel. 8, unchanged; Columbia Gas 7, up ¼; Elec. Power & Light pf 13¾, up 2¾; Cons. Gas 24½, up ⅛; Elec. Power & Light $6 pf 12½, up 2⅝; Texas Pac. Land Tr. 11¾, up ½; Chrysler 44⅛, unchanged.

MANUFACTURING ACTIVITY.

NEW YORK, May 11.—The National Industrial Conference Board in a survey issued today covering 25 manufacturing industries, said that manufacturing activity in March, as measured by man-hours, remained the same as in February. The board explained that the stationary level was the result of a decline in the average work-week which offset an increase in the number of workers employed. Employment rose 1.3 per cent from February to March, but payroll disbursement advanced only 0.3 per cent, it was stated.

Purchases of Zinc Decline.

By the Associated Press.

JOPLIN, Mo., May 11.—The purchase of zinc in the Joplin market dropped to 910 tons this week as a direct result of the miners' strike, which tied up the Missouri-Kansas-Oklahoma field Thursday. Zinc prices were unchanged at $25 and $26 a ton, with lead unchanged at $36. Buyers were hesitant regarding purchases because of their inability to load out supplies because of the strike.

AUTO OUTPUT ESTIMATE

DETROIT, May 11.—Cram's Reports, Inc., in an analysis of activity in automotive plants, estimates production for the week ending today at 87,395 units, a decline from 110,365 recorded for the week ended May 4, and comparing with 79,305 units for the same week last year.

The drop is due chiefly to production situation in some of the Chevrolet plants and associated with labor differences, and the fact the Ford company has gone on a five-day week basis. It has been operating six days weekly.

Total output of the Ford company this week was estimated by Cram at 35,045 units, compared with estimates of 40,055 last week and 23,780 for the same week a year ago.

General Motors production was estimated at approximately 21,350 units, compared with estimates of 39,825 last week and 26,350 units the same week last year.

Chrysler group production was estimated at 19,975 units, unchanged from last week's estimate. For the same week last year output was estimated at 18,650 units.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 11.—A drop of 2¾ cents in the managed Italian lira to $8.19½ cents, featured an otherwise dull foreign exchange market today.

Renewed tension between the Italian Government and Ethiopia, which have been digging each other in the ribs for several months, was believed to be responsible for the decline.

Other rates were steady. In London the dollar was lower at $4.86 7-16 to the pound sterling and in New York sterling advanced ¾ of a cent to $4.86¼.

In Paris the dollar was only slightly changed at an equivalent of 6.588 cents to the franc and in New York francs were unchanged at 6.59 cents. Other gold currencies held even.

Based on the franc at its final New York rate the dollar was at a premium at 66-100 of 1 per cent over par, the same as on Friday, and compared with a premium of 51-100 of 1 per cent a month ago.

'CHANGE SEAT PRICES $30,000 ABOVE APRIL LOW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 11.—A boom developed in New York Stock Exchange memberships today when two seats changed hands for $90,000 each and another sold at $95,000.

The advance in seat prices was attributed partly to the recent expansion of equities trading volumes and hopes of the commission houses that a pickup in speculative and investment operations will soon be reflected in substantial profits for the brokers who have for a long time been running "in the red."

Today's top membership price was $3000 ahead of a sale recorded yesterday and $30,000 above the 16-year low established early last month.

DECLINE IN MAY WHEAT AFFECTS OTHER OPTIONS

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, May 11.—Forecast of rain for the wheat belt over the week-end more than offset the lowering of winter wheat estimate and futures closed lower following a temporary rise. The action of May wheat at Chicago where heavy liquidation was reported in that delivery also exerted influence. Corn was lower with wheat; the extreme range downward of both grains extended beyond a cent.

Winnipeg was ⅛c higher early after opening ⅛c to ¼c up. The close was ¼c net lower.

Liverpool wheat closed ¼d up following ¼ @ ½d higher start.

The Government crop report suggested a domestic winter wheat crop of 432,000,000 bushels as of May 1, or 3,000,000 below the official indicated yield of the previous month.

MAY WHEAT LIQUIDATION DOMINATES THE MARKET

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 11.—Heavy deliveries on Chicago May wheat contracts led to sharp downturns of prices today in the wheat market as a whole.

Forecasts of a general rain in the wheat belt over the weekend added to bearish sentiment. Only transient bullish effects resulted from the Washington official monthly crop report showing a surprise reduction of the estimated domestic winter wheat yield.

Wheat closed weak, ⅜ @ 1½ under yesterday's finish, July 93⅞ @ 94⅛; corn ¾ @ 1⅜ down, July 80¼ @ ⅜, oats ⅜ @ 1 cent off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 5 cents.

Liquidation of May wheat holdings broke out following announcement that today's deliveries on May contracts here had reached a total of 1,057,000 bushels. May wheat quickly went to a wider discount as compared with July, and the market suffered an extreme drop of 2¼ cents from earlier top levels. Dearth of any adequate fresh speculative buying support was plainly evident, and numerous selling orders to stop losses were forced into execution by the fall of prices.

Contributing to the downward trend of wheat values was a statement by a Chicago trade authority that analysis of the Government report pointed to a winter wheat crop larger than the official estimate. He said that providing the crop condition is maintained, which seemed likely because of improved weather the past two weeks, a yield of 500,000,000 bushels would be returned rather than 431,637,000 the Government looked for. On the other hand, bulls laid stress on assertions the significant feature of the Government report was that the crop forecast in soft wheat territory east of the Missouri River is lower than a month ago.

Corn and oats sympathized when wheat became weak. Most traders construed the Government report on rye as somewhat bearish in view of the fairly large visible supply and the fact that additional quantities of foreign rye are now en route to this coutnry.

Decided curtailment of lard production gave firmness to the provision market.

ST. LOUIS CASH GRAIN

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was ¾c lower. Offerings were light and the demand was quiet. There was a pretty good demand. Order buyers were the best purchasers. Hard wheat was nominally ¾c lower. There were no offerings. Inquiry was good. At the close No. 2 was figured at $1.05½. Corn was 1 @ ½c lower. Decline in futures figured in the weakness. There was a fair demand early in the session, but it slackened late and holders were pressing the grain to sale. Industries were the main buyers, feeders taking an odd car or so. Oats were 1c lower. There were only two cars on the market, one, a car of choice No. 1 white was applied on contract, the other, sample grade, went to an elevator.

Local wheat receipts which were 21,000 bu., compared with 19,500 a week ago and 31,500 a year ago included 13 cars local and one through. Corn receipts which were 15,000 bu., compared with 30,000 a week ago and 34,000 a year ago included 10 cars local. Oats receipts which were 6000 bu., compared with 16,000 a week ago and 18,000 a year ago included three cars local.

Sales of cash grain made on the floor of the exchange Saturday, all being track sales, local weights, unless otherwise described, are recorded below:

COTTON LIQUIDATION BELOW 12 CENT LEVEL

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Liquidation just below the 12 cent level checked the advance in cotton today. Prices moved over a range of 5 to 8 points and closed at net losses of 1 to 5 points.

During the early trading July sold up to 11.98 and March, 1936, contracts to 11.99. The selling was credited to week-end liquidation and foreign sources, while at the same time buyers were more cautious.

The trade and locals brought moderately on slight reactions and some of the buying in the forward positions was credited to Government account. Final prices were off about 2 to 4 points from the best.

There were scattered showers from East Texas eastward with the precipitation more general in the eastern belt. The long range forecast was for local showers in the Gulf States during the first and middle of the week.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 62,000 bales against 72,000 last year and 110,000 two years ago.

FURTHER DECLINE IN GOVERNMENT ISSUES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Further declines in U. S. Government securities was the principal feature on the Bond Market today. Corporate obligations were narrow.

Investor apprehension over the latest turn in the soldiers' bonus controversy, coupled with week-end adjustments and some switching from one group to another, brought about declines of 2-32ds to 10-32ds among active Treasury loans and indirect Government Bonds. Nearby maturities showed the least resistance. Treasury 3¾s of 1944 declined 5-32ds to 105.25 and the 3⅜s of 1940 lost 10-32ds. The new 2⅞s of 1955, in which the turnover was the largest, declined 1-32d to 101.13.

Extremely small price changes were the rule among corporate obligations. Railroads were in supply and the Associated Press average of this group declined .2 of a point to 79.3, but the averages for other groups were unchanged for all except the foreign loans, which advanced .4 of a point to 68.6.

Among the rails, small losses were shown by obligations of Baltimore & Ohio, Cleveland Union Terminal, Great Northern, New York Central, Northern Pacific and Southern Railway. Advances were made by Delaware & Hudson 4s at 79¾, New Haven collateral 6s at 54⅝ and Western Maryland 4s at 94.

In the industrial and utility groups minor advances were recorded for obligations of Bethlehem Steel, Penn Dixie Cement, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, American Waterworks, Laclede Gas, Metropolitan Edison and Liggett & Myers. Losers included Armour 5½s at 105¼, Remington Rand 5½s at 103½, Columbia Gas 5s at 88 and Western Union 4½s at 88½.

An advance of 1 point was made by Postal Telegraph 5s, which ended at 31, or back where they were before a renewed wave of selling drove them to new 1935 lows during the middle of the week. International Telephone 5s held unchanged at 66¼.

The foreign section was more active and favorites showed a steady tone. Japanese 5½s got up to a new 1935 high at 87⅜, but slid back to 86¾, but the 6½s held a ½-point gain at 98½. Belgium 6s advanced 1¼ points to 103 following action of the Government in placing its obligations on a lower interest basis. Colombian 6s also were a feature at 27⅝, up ⅞ of a point on balance.

Transfers aggregated $8,254,000, par value, compared with $6,569,000 last Saturday.

BUSIEST SATURDAY OF YEAR ON THE CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 11.—The Curb Market continued its upward trend today in the busiest Saturday session this year. Advances generally were fractional, but a number of specialties gained sharply. Transfers approximated 185,000 shares, compared with 117,000 a week ago.

A. O. Smith rose 4½ points, while Gulf Oil was more than three higher. Shares of Dow Chemical, Technicolor, Sherwin Williams, Singer Manufacturing and Lynch Corporation were up one to two. Fractional improvement appeared in Electric Bond and Share, American Gas and Electric, Atlas Corporation, Wright Hargreaves, Pioneer Gold and Greyhound Corporation.

By J. Roy Stockton

Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—Frankie Frisch shook his lineup and jarred the Cardinals out of their batting slump this afternoon, but the managerial measures were not drastic enough and after lambasting the Phillies for a 15 to 6 victory in the first game of a double-header, the world champions lapsed back into their ways of weakness and Jimmy Wilson's men captured the second contest, 5 to 2.

Dizzy Dean was the winning pitcher in the opening game, toying with the enemy as a cat plays with a mouse as he registered his fourth triumph of the season, but the well-known firm of Dean & Dean got only an even break out of the afternoon, as Paul was on the losing end in the other. It was Paul's second reverse of the year and his first in a game in which he was the starting pitcher.

Redbirds Pound Three Hurlers.

With Dizzy pitching, the Redbirds whacked Euel Moore, Johnny Pezzullo and Joe Bowman for 17 hits and the Phils didn't break into the scoring part of the game until Jerome Herman had a lead of a dozen runs. Then, as he was merely lobbing slow curves over the plate, Johnny Moore spoiled his chance for a shutout by hoisting a homer over the right field wall.

After that Dizzy didn't bother about what he threw to the hitters and the Phils made seven of their 13 hits and five of their runs in the last two innings.

Collins Hits Two Homers.

Johnny Winsett, sent to right field to bolster the attack, hit two singles and a double, laid down a sacrifice and drew a pass in the first game and Ripper Collins accounted for more runs than the entire Philadelphia team, driving in six and scoring three himself. The Ripper hit two homers, one of them over the right field screen and one through a hole in the much-bombarded netting.

In the second game the re-arranged lineup didn't do so well and Winsett showed that he had runs in his glove as well as in his bat. He made one especially costly misplay when he failed to catch Ethan Allen's drive in the fifth inning. He had a double play in front of him as a runner on first was well on his way to second, but the ball broke through Winsett's hands for a double and a run crossed the plate to put the Phillipes ahead, 4 to 2. He also played several other drives badly in that second contest.

Another Rookie Beats Cards.

The defeat was the second of the series suffered by the Cardinals at the hands of a rookie member of Jimmy Wilson's staff. Bucky Walters, who was on the roster as an infielder three months ago, hung up his first major league victory Thursday, holding the world champions to four hits.

Orville Jorgens, who held them to seven safeties this afternoon, four of them in the first two innings, is a greenhorn from the Galveston club of the Texas League. But he looked like a seasoned veteran the way he disabled the St. Louis sluggers. And when Orville developed a wild streak in the ninth, our old friend Sylvester Johnson went to the rescue and threw a very fine strikeout ball.

The game in which the Rerbirds were defeated ended in a confusion of protest. With DeLancey and Pinch Hitter Charley Wilson on base Martin pulled back his bat at the final pitch of the game and Umpire Stewart, a hockey referee, made no sign that it was a strike. Catcher Jimmy Wilson, however, ran off the field and apparently Umpire Reardon, working on the bases, sustained the Phillie contention that Pepper had struck at the ball. He never did make a manual sign that it was a strike, but joined in the general exodus from the field, and was still shaking his head at protests from Frisch, Durocher and other Cardinals, as he disappeared through the dug out.

Medwick Gets Homer.

Winsett's single and Medwick's home run gave the Cardinals two runs in the first inning of the second contest, but Chiozza opened the Phillie half with a double to right

Mixed Bouts O. K. in Missouri, Commission Rules

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, May 11.

THE Missouri Athletic Commission today amended boxing regulations of the "Show-Me" State to permit competition of Negro and white fighters in mixed bouts.

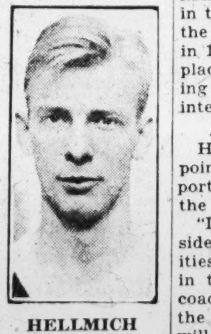
Garrett Smalley, commission chairman, said the change was made in behalf of Joe Louis, Detroit's "Brown Bomber."

Now that the Detroit heavyweight has attained heights in boxing," Smalley said, "we see no reason why he should not be allowed to show his prowess in Missouri."

Hudson Hellmich Named Track and Basketball Coach at Washington U.

One of St. Louis' most illustrious athletic sons comes home to coach the young hopefuls of Washington University in the art and science of basketball and track performance. Hudson Hellmich, a graduate of Soldan High and Illinois University, has been appointed coach of basketball and track, it was announced last night by the Washington University Faculty Athletic Committee, of which Dr. Frank E. Ewerhardt is chairman.

Hellmich succeeds Johnny Davis as track coach, and replaces Don White as chief instructor of basketball technic. In both sports, Hellmich was an outstanding star in both high school and college circles.



HELLMICH

Favored with an unusually fine physique, he gained honors early in his career at Soldan. Participating in four sports — baseball, track, basketball and football — he won 10 letters. He was center and captain of Soldan's basketball team and in his senior year he won the district interscholastic championship in the 100 and 220 yard dashes.

By the time he reached Illinois U., he stood 6 feet 4 inches and weighed 180 pounds. He continued his active athletic career at Champaign, and was center on the varsity basketball team for three years, and captain in '33 and '34. In track he specialized in the 100 and 220 yard sprints and ran on the relay team. He placed third in the National Intercollegiate championships in the 100-yard dash in 1933, and in the Olympic trials at Los Angeles in 1932 he was just nosed out for a place on one of the greatest sprinting teams Uncle Sam ever sent into international competition.

Athletics Horizon Broadens.

Hellmich is elated over his appointment which he views as an opportunity to establish Washington in the forefront of both sports.

"I understand there will be considerable improvement in the facilities for track at Washington within the next year," said the new coach last night. "I am told that the indoor equipment, especially, will be enlarged and modernized, and I know that plans call for greatly increasing the scope of our operations next spring. Washington will schedule meets with first rank schools, and an agreement has already been reached with Notre Dame for a dual meet. I am happy to have received the appointment and I hope to give Washington winning teams in both sports."

Horse Posted at 40 to 1 Wins, Pays $10.80; Texas Fans Riot, Stop Races

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., May 11.—Payoff of $10.80 on a race winner posted at 40 to 1 led to a riot of 1000 irate fans at the Alamo Downs track late today.

The crowd swept across the track, tore the mutuels figures off the boards, threw stones through the press box and prevented the running of the last two events.

The posting of Statecraft, winner of the sixth race, at odds of 40 to 1, on the board and a subsequent pay off of $10.80 brought about the disturance.

However, C. Parke, State Racing Inspector, looked over the sheets in the mutuels department and declared that the posting was an error. He said that Starkist, which ran second, should have been posted at 40 to 1 and Statecraft at 4 to 1. The fact that Starkist paid $15 to place, he said, supported his findings.

Forty officers rushed to answer riot calls when fights broke out at several places through the stands. They soon quieted the throng.

Chief of Police Owen W. Kilday headed a police riot squad of 20 policemen armed with guns and tear gas. A score of deputy sheriffs also helped place the crowd under control.

The start of the seventh race was halted by the crowd blocking the entrance to the track. The throng gathered in the enclosure in front of the stands where three ringleaders harangued large groups.

A newspaper man suffered cuts from flying glass when a stone came through a press box window. He was the only casualty reported.

The $10.80 payoff stood.

Omaha kept clear going to the first turn, bettered his position readily after going seven furlongs, swung to the outside of the leaders when moving to the front midway of the final turn, then drew out at will during the stretch drive to win with much to spare. Firethorn placed to a determined drive in the last five furlongs, was forced to circle his field when reaching contention, then closed willingly in the final drive. Psychic Bid went strongly in the early running on the outside of the two leaders, saved a lot of ground during the stretch drive but weakened steadily. Mantagna raced under pressure from the beginning. He passed tiring horses during the closing stages. Commonwealth dropped far out of contention, and was unable to reach a contending position. Brannon had much speed while setting the pace, but was unable to hold his command when vigorously urged. Nellie Flag had clear racing room from the beginning but failed to rally at any stage of the journey. Boxthorn went strongly for the first seven furlongs, then began tiring.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, May 11.—Once again asserting his right to rank with the turf's great, Omaha, William Woodward's chestnut son of Gallant Fox, capped his easy Kentucky Derby victory with an even more decisive triumph today as his flying hoofs left seven other three-year-olds far ni the rear in the 45th running of the Preakness at Pimlico.

Guided by Willie (Smoky) Saunders, the slim-barrelled speedster stepped through the stretch as if out for a morning breeze to finish the one and three-sixteenths miles six lengths clear of Walter M. Jeffords' Firethorn, which was eating Omaha's dust for the first time this year. Still another six lengths to the rear trailed Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Psychic Bid, seeking to duplicate the 1934 feat of his stable mate, High Quest.

Omaha was clocked in 1:58 2-5, one-fifth of a second slower than the race record hung up by High Quest, but the time might have have been shattered had Saunders so desired. Even at that it was more than two seconds faster than Gallant Fox made in taking the Preakness five years ago.

Odds-On Choice of 40,000.

Made the odds-on choice by the record crowd of 40,000, including many Congressmen and others high in the political and social life of the nation and State, Omaha never left the outcome in doubt once he swung into stride. He paid $3.90 for a $2 win mutuel while his owner, New York banker and chairman of the stewards of the Jockey Club, received $25,325. The victory boosted Omaha's total for the year to $66.600 and for two years of racing to $70,450.

With the victory went the honor of completing the first father and son double in the race and of being the fourth horse to win both the Derby and Preakness. Sir Barton turned the trick in 1919, Gallant Fox in 1930 and Burgoo King two years later.

The disappointment of the race was Warren Wright's Nellie Flag, the beaten favorite in the Derby. She was fourth at the Downs, but today with no excuse of being bumped, could do no better than seventh in an attempt to duplicate the 1924 triumph of her mother, Nellie Morse. Only E. R. Bradley's Boxthorn was back of the Western filly.

Running his usual style, Omaha was slow to get under way, but quickly settled into stride under Saunders' steady hand while Bobby Merritt shot Mrs. C. S. Bromley's Brannon into a long early lead as the eight horses sped past the grandstand for the first turn.

Brannon continued to burn up the track rounding the bend, with Merritt apparently making an effort to "steal" the race. Omaha was still far back, however, but he was ready to make his move at orders from his rider.

Brannon Folds Up.

As Brannon turned into the long back stretch, Saunders decided it was time for Omaha to begin to run, and he began to eat up the ground. In a few strides he was in fourth place but still trailing by eight lengths. Then, he was third, then second and as the turn leading out of the backstretch neared, he stuck his head in front.

"There he comes," roared the crowd. And coming he was.

Sticking to the rail, he held a half-length advantage as he looked toward the judges' stand. From there it was merely a gallop, as Saunders looked back at his field.

Firethorn also closed strong but he was no match for the flying chestnut. At that, however, he was easily the best of the others as Psychic Bid, tiring from trying to

U. S. IS VICTOR OVER CHINA IN DAVIS CUP SERIES

MEXICO, D. F., Hay 11. — The young California doubles combination of Donald Budge and Gene Mako defeated Guy Cheng and Sin Kie Kho in straight sets today, 7—5, 6—2, 6—1, thereby eliminating China from further Davis cup tennis competition and putting the United States in the American zone finals.

The American team, with Bryan M. Grant Jr., of Atlanta, as the third member, will clash with Mexico here next week. The winner of that series will qualify for the interzone final against the European zone finalist.

Already leading 2 to 0 as a result of victories by Grant and Budge in the opening singles matches yesterday, Budge and Mako chalked up the clinching triumph in doubles in easy fashion.

Cheng and Kho started off at a rapid clip and took a 4 to 1 lead and later held the advantage of 5 to 3. But here the American youngsters got their game in working order and reeled off the next four games in a row to take the set. Thereafter it was a breeze, for Cheng and Kho could not handle Mako's play at the net nor Budge's smashes from the back court.

Two more singles matches will be played tomorrow although they will have no bearing on the result of the series.

PIMLICO'S $884,221 HANDLE EXCEEDED THE 1934 BETS BY $80,000

BALTIMORE, Md., May 11.—The big Preakness mutuel betting handle at the Pimlico racetrack today totalled $884,221. Short of the $1,341,299 record of 1929 but $80,000 ahead of last year.

A total of $179,650 was wagered on the Preakness itself. This figure was $6000 better than 1934.

The aggregate for the day fell slightly short of the $1,000,000 anticipated by Matt L. Daiger, secretary of the Maryland Jockey Club, but was nevertheless a very gratifying total.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Mr. Rosofsky Sitting Pretty.

BARNEY ROSOFSKY, whose deft mitts already have won him titles in three classes at different times, under the fighting name of Barney Ross, is very happily situated. Next to world heavyweight champion Max Baer, Barney's prospects are the rosiest of all titleholders'.

ROSS

Briefly the Ross setup is this: Having resigned the lightweight title some weeks ago, Barney is matched to fight Jimmy McLarnin late this month, with the welter championship as the prize.

But should Jimmy McLarnin defeat him, instead of being just another beaten challenger, Ross will compel the lightweight champion to fight him. Being able to make the 135-pound weight, he can't be denied this match.

For the Third Time.

IT would again pit him against the rejuvenated title-holder, Tony Canzoneri, with every probability that he (Ross) would win and resume, thereafter, his defense of the championship he had previously vacated in order to make certain of a match with McLarnin.

That Ross would defeat Tony in such a contingency history proves, for in two fights Ross first took Tony's crown away from him and then successfully defended it when Tony tried to regain it.

No matter which way the cat jumps, Ross therefore is sure to have two title fights, make plenty of money and finish with one title.

Some Quick Thinking.

ROSS has had fine advice in the conduct of his title campaigns, from a commercial viewpoint at least. With the lightweight class drained of challengers due to the double defeat of Canzoneri, Ross was played up as a welterweight against the extremely popular McLarnin. He

By James M. Gould.

Manager Hornsby discovered another of his pitchers who could go the full route yesterday afternoon, and, as a result, the Browns defeated the Philadelphia Athletics, 4 to 1, taking the series two games to one. Jack Knott was in command at all times. He stopped an incipient rally in the fourth by snapping a man off second and, scattering the seven hits he allowed in all but the eighth frame was not scored upon until that inning.

Manager Mack used Marcum, veteran, and Lieber, a recruit, righthander. Marcum went along with Knott for four innings, but, in the fifth, his supporting cast went wrong and, before the inning was over, thanks to Burns' fly and a nice single by Burnett, the Browns had three runs—enough to win, as later events proved. Another came in the sixth, but was not needed. Lieber was not scored upon.

Three Hits for West.

As is getting to be his habit, Sammy West led the Browns' attack with three hits, making his total of safeties 11 in his last 15 times at bat. Strange and Hemsley each had two, as did Johnson, Foxx and McNair for the Athletics.

Foxx's single after Cramer had doubled in the eighth accounted for the single Philadelphia tally.

Knott walked three men and struck out five.

It was the second series of the season to be won by the Browns, the other decision being over the Chicago White Sox.

Today the Boston Red Sox, last of the Eastern clubs in on this trip will open a four-game series.

With both pitchers going along smoothly, scoring chances in the early innings were few and far between. Two singles with one out, the hitters being Bell and Hemsley—gave the Browns an opportunity in the second but Melillo and Strange couldn't continue the motion.

It was the Athletics' turn to muff a chance in the fourth when Bob Johnson and Jimmy Foxx opened up on Knott with clean singles. On Foxx's hit, however, Johnson got his wires crossed. He first decided to stop at second and then tried for third at which station he was retired. Knott got the next two without undue trouble.

Unsteadiness on the part of the Philadelphia defense gave the Browns another opening in the fifth and, this time, they took it. Melillo's grounder to Finney hopped away from the first-baseman and was good for a single. Strange then hit a grounder to Warstler and that worthy let it go through him. That put two men on. A still better break was in the offing for Knott, bunting for a sacrifice, was safe and the bases were filled with none down when Higgins played hop-scotch with the easy chance.

Many times this season the Browns have failed to cash in on as glorious chance, but this time they didn't miss. Burns' fly to Cramer admitted Melillo and then Burnett, hitless his nine previous times up came through with a clean single to left on which Strange and Knott counted.

Lieber Replaces Marcum.

The old Brownie danger signal was raised when Knott walked Cramer to start the sixth, but the big right-hander wasn't going to according to 1935 precedent and he set down Johnson, Foxx and Higgins in quick succession.

Thus encouraged, the Browns added one in their half and forced the retirement of Marcum, who gave way to Lieber. The run-combination was composed of a double by Hemsley to center and Strange's single to left.

Pepper tripled with one down in the seventh, but was left on third by Bell and Hemsley. In the eighth, Finney opened with a double. Knott got the next two, but Foxx singled the run over.

It rained hard throughout the Athletics' ninth inning, but that did not bother Knott, who set the enemy down as fast as they came up.

Set 17 Records.

EAST LANSING, Mich.—Current Michigan State athletes set 17 new school records during the indoor season, breaking six freshman and three varsity track records and eight swimming marks.

"Safe at the Plate!"—Blewett Outfielder Scores, Thanks to a Fine Slide

Jack Gold in all probability would have been safe, in any case, but there was no doubt of it when Catcher Blanke of the McKinley nine dropped the ball. It happened in the third inning of the game between the two high school teams, which resulted in a McKinley victory, yesterday.

Brownie Notes.

MANAGER HORNSBY intends to come right back today with Fay Thomas, who lasted less than an inning against the Athletics Friday. Either Ostermueller or Hockette are due for the Red Sox. Both are left-handers.

When Marcum pitches for the Mackmen they have another .300 hitter in action. If Johnny could run he'd not have to be a pitcher to stay in the majors, but he's no speedster on the bases.

Hornsby's charley-horsed leg still bothers him, but he expects the warm weather to soon help him back as a regular. The club certainly could use some extra punch. And he means to get in there, too.

There was considerable argument about Johnson's first-frame two-bagger. It seemed a bit foul, but fas ruled by Umpire Geisel and Bob got a two-bagger. The Brownie first-inning jinx wasn't operating, though, for Foxx was called out on strikes for the third out.

Some 3000, including women and girls, guests of the Browns, saw the final of the Philadelphia series.

Burnett is sure somebody's got the "old Wamby" on him. Friday he struck out four times. Yesterday, first time up, he hit into a double play and then went down on strikes on his second appearance. He got rid of the hoodoo when he singled two runs over in the fifth.

Fast, clever fielding stopped what looked like a Philadelphia rally in the fourth. Johnson and Foxx began the session with singles, but Johnson hesitated rounding second, tried for third and was retired on Strange's relay of Pepper's throw to Burnett.

Contrary to the habit of Hornsby's pitchers, Knott waited until two were down in the fifth before issuing his first pass. Pitcher Marcum got it. Then, Finney, next up, also accepted one.

Last season, Knott caught 10 base-runners napping at second. Yesterday he recorded his first victim, nailing Marcum off the bag in the fifth.

Knott stopped Bob Johnson in the sixth after the Indian outfielder had put together a collection of six straight hits.

McKinley Brushes Aside Blewett and Holds Lead In High School League

By Harold Tuthill.

Blewett had a chance to win the City High School League baseball championship but blew it at the Public Schools Stadium yesterday, losing to McKinley, 9 to 3. In the second game of the triple-header, Roosevelt defeated Cleveland, 4 to 3.

A five-run inning helped Beaumont win the last contest from Soldan, 6 to 5.

It was the last game of the season for Blewett, which finished with a 5-1 record, while the worst McKinley can do now is to tie for the championship, since it has won all five of its starts with only one game left to play.

Incidentally, McKinley is having quite an athletic year, for it tied for the football championship and won the basketball title.

For a time yesterday it seemed that Blewett was on its way to its first championship since it became a member of the league last year Coach C. Don Frankenberger's boys were even with McKinley at the end of two innings, one-all, and even assumed a 3-to-1 lead in the third. McKinley added another run in its half of the fourth and then came the fifth when things began popping.

Some Real Fireworks.

Colombo led off by stopping a pitched ball. He was sacrificed to second by Hughes. Monahan walked. Parrott singled to right, Taylor's perfect throw to the plate had Colombo caught, but Lemen dropped the ball and Colombo scored, Monahan reached third and Parrott second. On a squeeze play, Freeman grounded to Durnin, whose throw to first had Freeman out, but Cunningham dropped the ball, Monahan scoring and Parrott moving to third, from where he later scored on a wild pitch. On that same wild heave, Freeman moved to second. Cepicky walked Durnin had been slightly spiked in the leg on the collision at the plate on his first wild pitch, so Coach Frankenberger decided to yank him Gaines went in to pitch for Blewett Blanke singled to left, scoring Cepicky. Goldak then struck out to end the five-run inning.

It was fortunate that Beaumont picked up five runs in the third inning, because later on in the game Soldan came back with four runs in the sixth and counted once in the seventh and had the tying run on third, with one out. The rally was cut short, though, when Krueger tossed out Glazner and Garfield grounded to Blumintritt.

Goldag's Fifth Victory.

The Goldbugs picked up a pair of runs in the seventh on Monahan's home run to deep left center. Later in the same round, Freeman walked, stole second, went to third on Cepicky's infield roller and stole home.

After a shaky start, Johnny Goldak settled down to record his fifth consecutive victory. He was touched for three hits in the fifth, but no runs resulted either in that round or any of the other last four innings.

Goldak now has limited the opposition to eight runs in five games which is quite a performance for the ex-catcher.

A Pitching Duel.

Roosevelt's two hurlers and Ray De Greeff of Cleveland indulged in one of those high school rarities—a pitching duel. Each team collected six hits.

Rauscher started for Roosevelt, but he ran into a storm in the third inning, so Coach Lee R. Carlson waved him to the showers. Byron Watson then took up the burden and was later rewarded by becoming the winning pitcher.

Bob Stanton provided the offensive that won for the Rough Riders, who were on the short end of a 3-to-2 score after four innings, then with Weckl on first as a result of a single, Stanton duplicated his first-inning home run by parking another in the left field stands. And that ended the scoring between the teams.

GIANTS LOSE GAME AT HOME, THEN WIN ONE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Freddie Fitzsimmons held the Pittsburgh Pirates to three hits while Gus Mancuso pounded out two home runs to give the New York Giants an even break in their doubleheader today. They won the second game, 3 to 0, after the Pirates had won the opener, 4 to 1, aided by Guy Bush's four-hitter.

Hank Leiber's fielding in center featured the Giants' defense in the nightcap, Hank robbing Herman and Suhr of extra-base hits with great running catches of their drives.

ROOKIE HURLER HOLDS RED SOX TO 2 HITS AND WHITE SOX WIN

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 11.—The Chicago White Sox, checked for two days by Boston, went on the warpath again today, and behind a two-hit pitching job by silent John Whitehead who racked up his fifth straight victory of the season, pounded three Red Sox hurlers for a 13 to 3 triumph.

Whitehead, the sensational rookie righthander from Dallas, collared every Boston hitter except Ellsworth (Babe) Dahlgren, the Red Sox freshman first baseman. Dahlgren drove in all the Boston runs and banged out his third home run in two days with a double that came close to being a triple.

31 HITS MADE AS CUBS DOWN BRAVES

BOSTON, May 11.—In a genuine slugfest which found the Boston Braves using five pitchers and both teams hammering out a total of 31 hits, the Cubs this afternoon emerged with a 14 to 7 victory.

The Chicago team pounded Smith, Mangum, Rhem, Brown and Benton for 18 hits, while French and Root yielded 13. It was French's first triumph for the Cubs, although he was knocked out of the box in the eighth inning.

Lindstrom led the Cubs' attack with four hits. Chuck Klein hit a home run with one on in the seventh inning.

Babe Ruth failed to get a base hit.

CATHOLIC SOFTBALL LEAGUE BEGINS PLAY

After a week's postponement, the South Side Catholic Intermediate Softball League will open its 1935 season this afternoon at the St. Louis Softball Park, Ohio and Shenandoah avenues, with a double-header, starting at 1 o'clock.

won their first encounter and took the title with it. Then a return match was arranged and Ross lost that.

At this time the commission demanded that if Ross continued to claim the title he must defend it. But there was no foe in the lightweight realm able to draw flies. Pian and Winch Ross' managers, then suddenly discovered that Barney could not do the lightweight limit. He resigned his title. The third match with McLarnin immediately developed.

The real reason for Ross' abandonment of his lightweight honors was to enable him to meet McLarnin, a chance which he might have lost had he decided to defend his lightweight crown first.

It isn't every fighter who can eat his cake and still have it. But Barney can lose a couple of titles and still get one of them back.

Only Standouts Draw.

JOE GHNOULY and Cleto Locatelli, two high-ranking boys in the lightweight world, attracted only 3000 persons to the Chicago Stadium, although some very fine bouts were on the program. The house grossed under $5000 where, only a few weeks before, amateur championship bouts, intercity and international, had packed the building and rewarded the promoters with about seven times greater financial returns.

Nobody will contend that even the best amateur fighters compare with professionals; and yet, except in case of standout or "natural" matches, promoters of pro bouts can not look for large attendances such as the Chicago Golden Gloves championships invariably attract.

Except where the bait has been sweetened with a "championship" flavor, interest in either amateur or professional boxing seems to have sagged to a lower and lower level annually.

Mr. Average Man in the fight profession no longer is earning his salt.

Ghnouly Doesn't Click.

AS to Ghnouly and Locatelli, they would seem to be sufficiently renowned to draw a fair crowd. But, somehow, the American ringsiders have not taken Joe seriously, although Australia made a big fuss over him a year ago.

Joe is busy and game. He is tough and hard to hurt. But it is seldom anyone waxes enthusiastic about him—if we except Gus Wilson.

The spell of Jack Dempsey is still over the land; and the professional who can't put his opponents down hard, finds popularity has passed him by.

That, of course, is too bad. From the standpoint of boxing Dempsey was not much—his terrific punch overcame all handicaps. Most boys, aping the Old Mauler, tend to neglect their science in favor of whatever punch they may have. They try to weave in and slug—and wake up in the discard.

Today sound boxing knowledge would carry many fighters farther than a futile imitation of Dempsey.

Why Primo!

PRIMO CARNERA, pausing in St. Louis last week on his way to Hot Springs, told Bill McGoogan of this department that there were half a dozen fighters who can beat Baer, that Braddock probably would take Max, that the champion was not game and that his only asset was a right hand, that he had to be wound up before delivery. He intimated that it would be just too bad if Maxie ever again met that fellow Primo Carnera.

But to those who saw the Man Mountain reel around the ring under the blows of Baer, fighting like a novice and showing little that was commendable except an unwillingness to acknowledge defeat, Prime Beef's comments seem out of order and, in some ways, untruthful.

To say that Baer is not game or "can't take it" is to forget the record, which shows that he has had some very tough fights, two of them of 20 rounds, in which he took plenty and laughed it off. Max is, or at least was, a very rugged fellow who is hard to hurt and who himself doesn't seem to know when he's licked. He laughs it off.

Our Tip to Primo.

PRIMO speculates on what he would do to Baer if they meet again, with Manager Bill Duffy in his corner. But it takes more than a manager to put brains and intelligence into a fighter.

Carnera was bowled to the floor many times by Baer and yet not once did he have sense enough to heed the roars from his corner to "stay down" and take the count. A fighter with so little ring poise is not going to do anything to a cool, tough egg like Baer. Better stay home and let Baer alone, Primo.

Of course any fighter can beat himself by not training. But if Max goes to work in earnest, the odds of 7 to 1 against Braddock's winning in their June fight will not be extravagant, on their records. Yet Primo thinks Braddock is one of half a dozen who can beat Max.

The others? Don't ask us. Probably one is Primo, himself. No doubt another is Chief Chewchki, and very likely Al Stillman. You might even mention Ed Lewis—it's not so easy to find six heavyweight fighters.

Max Schmeling? Steve Hamas, Art Lasky? Hold evehything, boys. Baer made Schmeling resemble a Swiss cheese. Schmeling stopped Hamas. Braddock and King Levinsky punctured the Lasky boom.

Louis the Only "Hope."

AS heavyweight menaces the present challenging group couldn't be sure of stopping little Mickey Walker.

Baer is far from being the greatest heavyweight in history—Mique Malloy to the contrary notwithstanding. But few will dispute his claim to superiority over the men who are now striving for a chance to grab his title.

The heavyweight division is devoid of a challenger of outstanding merit, unless we except Joe Louis, the Negro youth. We'll have to find out something more about this boy. He's the only possibility. And even Jack Johnson, a great fighter in his day, confesses that he cannot see Joe, at this time, although Louis is one of his own race.

and Allen singled him to third. Martin fell down as he caught J Moore's foul and when Allen dashed for second, Pepper threw wild to that base and Chiozza scored.

The 2 to 1 Cardinal lead survived until the fifth when Watkins singled and took third on Ryan's one-bagger against the right field wall. Ryan stole second as Jorgens struck out, and Chiozza singled to center, scoring Watkins and Ryan. Then Allen doubled off Winsett's glove, scoring Chiozza.

The Phils added their final run in the seventh, with Haines pitching. Chiozza doubled to right and Allen sacrificed. J. Moore walked and when Whitehead grabbed Camilli's double play grounder, Frisch was unable to get over to cover second and by the time Whitehead reached the bag himself, it was too late to get a double play and Chiozza scored.

How Cards Scored in First Game.

Here's how the Cardinal runs were scored in the first game:

First inning — Winsett singled and was forced by Frisch. Medwick singled. Collins' drive found a hole in the screen above the right field wall for his fourth homer of the season, scoring Frisch and Medwick ahead of him.

Second inning—T. Moore doubled and scored on J. Dean's single, Diz taking second on the throw home. Martin singled Diz to third. Winsett singled, scoring Diz. Frisch singled, scoring Martin.

Fourth inning—J. Dean singled past Ryan. Martin was safe when Watkins dropped his line drive. Winsett bunted for a sacrifice and was safe on Vergez's fumble filling the bases. Ryan threw out Frisch, J. Dean scoring. Wedwick was passed intentionally, filling the bases. Collins walked, forcing Martin home DeLancey doubled to right center, scoring Winsett and Wedwick Collins scored while Whitehead was being thrown out.

Seventh inning—T. Moore, safe on Ryan's fumble, was forced by J Dean. Dizzy reached second when Bowman threw wild trying to pick him off first. Winsett doubled to right center, scoring J. Dean.

Eighth inning—Medwick singled to left and scored ahead of Collins when the Ripper hit over the right field screen for his fifth homer of the season and his second of the game.

Redbird Notes.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.

FIDGETY PHIL COLLINS, recently purchased from the Phils, probably will oppose his old teammates tomorrow in the series final.

Bill Walker will pitch against the Giants Monday in the series opener and Frisch plans to use Dizzy Dean in the second game and Paul in the third. They will be working with only two days' rest.

The double-header attracted the largest crowd of the season to Baker Bowl, the attendance being announced as 16,000.

ROOSEVELT WINS SENIOR TITLE IN DISTRICT TRACK MEET

CLASS WILL OUT! You Can't Find the Champion at Start, but You Can at Finish

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

Frank Rucker of Kirkwood, State High School mile champion, was just one of a big crowd when the mile event got under way at the district meet at Maplewood, but he was easy to pick out at the finish. The pictures show the start of the race, and the finish, with Rucker first, followed by Joyce of McBride and Wright of Webster. Rucker set a new meet record of 4 minutes, 39.5 seconds.

Roosevelt High School's track team broke the reign of University City's squad in this district by winning the senior division with 30½ points. Christian Brothers High finishing second with 27, and University City third with 24, in the eighth annual district meet yesterday at Maplewood Stadium. Webster scored 22½ points to take the junior division title with Beaumont second with 17, and Clayton third with 16 1-10.

Eight junior records were broken, two senior marks were bettered, and one was tied. The low hurdles were run over the new distance, 200 yards, and St. Denis, of Roosevelt, established the record at 23.3 seconds.

On the basis of combined points in both divisions, Roosevelt was first with 41½, Webster second with 39, and Christian Brothers High third with 36 6-10.

Schaeffer a Standout.

Marion Schaeffer, Clayton, was the standout of the meet. Competing in the jnuior dashes, Schaeffer set two records and came within a tenth of a second of breaking another.

He won the 50-yard dash in 5.5 seconds, breaking a mark that had stood since 1929, being tied by four runners. The old time was 5.7 seconds.

Schaeffer sped over the 100-yard route in 10.3 seconds to lower his own mark of 10.5 seconds, made last year. He also took the 220-yard dash in 23.5 seconds, one second slower than the record.

The showing of University City in both divisions was a distinct surprise, for the Indians had won the State outdoor meet last week and the Maplewood relays and the State indoor earlier in the season.

Indians Lacked All-round Strength.

The Indians lacked strength in every event, taking only two firsts, Howard Cory in the 120-yard high hurdles and the 880-yard relay.

But even more unexpected than the Indians' weakness in the seniors was the complete lack of point scorers in the juniors. There the Indians made only three points, whereas in previous years University City had always won that division with ease.

Canadiens Will Retain Franchise In Hockey League

By the Associated Press.

MONTREAL, May 11.

RATIFICATION of a new four-year agreement between Les Canadiens of the National Hockey League and the owners of the Forum today removed the fright given Montreal hockey fans yesterday when they learned Leo Dandurand, part owner of the Flying Frenchmen, was ready to let the franchise lie idle for a year or move the team out of Montreal.

Dandurand met the arena company executives today and later said the old agreement, with still a year to run, had been replaced by one for four years. Terms were not divulged.

Helen Stephens of Fulton, Mo., and Stella Walsh of Cleveland, O., two of the fastest girl runners in the world, have been matched for a special race of 80 meters here June 1. The race will be a feature of the Ozark A. A. U. girls' outdoor track and field meet at Maplewood Stadium.

Announcement that the match race had been closed was made yesterday by Dr. Norman F. Rathert, presiednt of the St. Louis Athletic Club, sponsor of the Ozark meet, after he had received Miss Walsh's acceptance by telegram. Miss Stephens had previously agreed to the race.

As St. Louis track followers know, more than appears on the surface centers around the closing of this race.

It Happened in March.

Miss Stephens it was who, at the National A. A. U. indoor meet here in March, unexpectedly and soundly beat the great Stella Walsh, and then quite naively asked, when congratulated on beating the internationally-known star:

"Who is Stella Walsh?"

"Humph!" Miss Walsh exclaimed. "She's a 'greenie' from the sticks. She couldn't beat me again."

Miss Walsh meant it, too. She immediately challenged the Fulton girl for a special match race at the St. Louis relays, but the challenge was not accepted. Miss Stephens, however, says she is now ready for her.

Each Set Record Week Ago.

To say that these two girls are "among the fastest in the world" is stating the case conservatively. They are, quite likely, the fastest. Only last Saturday Miss Walsh clipped two-tenths of a second from the National record for 780 yards by running it in 8.2 seconds, while Miss Stephens, down at Columbia, was clocked in world-record-breaking time for 50 meters with a mark of 5.9 seconds, and then tied Miss Walsh's world record of 10.8 seconds in the 100-yard dash. Miss Stephens' use of starting blocks, however, will keep these marks from being recognized.

Their race here will be one of the early events on the Ozark A. A. U. program, in order to give Miss Stephens time to rest for the regular events. She is entered in the 50-meter and 100-meter dashes, and the shotput.

St. Louis track followers will likely turn out in force to watch this battle between the international star, Stella Walsh, and a rival whom she termed a "greenie from the sticks."

Another Record Is Added to Miss Walsh's List.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., May 11.—Another record was added to Stella Walsh's string of 12 national and world track records when the dark-haired Cleveland's Olympic star this afternoon lowered the former world's standard of 7.4 seconds for the 60-yard dash by five-tenths of a second. She sped over the distance in 6.9 seconds. The former mark was set by Helen Filkey of Chicago in 1931.

EDWARDSVILLE WINS ILLINOIS DISTRICT MEET; SIX NEW MARKS

Edwardsville High won the tenth annual district track and field meet held yesterday afternoon at the Granite City Field with a total of 32 points. East St. Louis and Granite City tied for second with 28 points, while Hillsboro was next with 22. Edwardsville qualified its entire team for the Illinois State meet at the University of Illinois next week-end, while first and second place winners are eligible to compete from other schools.

The winning team collected but one first as Paul Burrus was the only Edwardsville athlete to finish in front. Burrus won the mile run in the new record time of 4:39.1 seconds. He clipped nine-tenths of a second from the old mark, held by Savage of Mount Vernon. Edwardsville counted two seconds, one third, one fourth and a fifth in track events, while a four-way tie for first, one second and two fifths were registered in field events, besides a second in the 880-yard relay.

Claude Beeler of Granite City proved to be the outstanding individual star of the day as he won the broad jump and 120-yard high hurdles. In the high hurdles Beeler established a new record of 16.5 seconds. The old record was held by Beeler. It was 16.8 seconds and was made by him last year. Steve Gallauer, another Granite City athlete, set a new mark in the 440-yard dash as he clipped a full second from the old mark, running the distance in 50.6 seconds.

Granite City proved to have a two-man team, as in all meets this year. Beeler collecting two firsts and Gallauer one, besides the two being mainly responsible for their school's victory in the 880-yard relay. Maurice Murphy and George Eubanks were the other two boys composing the winning team that set the new mark of 1:33. Granite City set the old record of 1:35.2 last year and with yesterday's running of the distance are expected to prove dangerous in the State meet next week.

Tony Corso of Hillsboro made the most impressive showing of any athlete as he tossed the shot put to a new record that is expected to stand for some time. Corso heaved the shot 52 feet even, while the old record for the event was 48 feet 11 inches. The Illinois State record for the shot is 52 feet 6¾ inches. Stephen Luther of Belleville was the other man to turn in a new record. Luther ran the 880 in the record time of 2:04.1.

The most exciting finish of the day came in the 880-yard run as Luther was well out in front, while Taylor of East St. Louis and Fischer of Lebanon were running stride for stride throughout the last 60 yards with Taylor barely getting a "nose" in front to take second place at the finish.

HEAR the jingle of the dimes,
Silver dimes!
As merrily they multiply an hundred thousand times!
How the letter carriers curse 'em
From the peep of dawn till night,
As they wearily disperse 'em
To the left and to the right,
Keeping time, time, time,
In a sort of Runic rhyme,
To the dimes, dimes, dimes, dimes,
dimes, dimes, dimes,
To the tintintabulation of the dimes!

Every time Louis knocks over a palooka which is about two or three times a month he gets nothing but the long end of the purse. WHITE COCKADE AND COLDSTREAM WIN 2-YEAR-OLD STAKES

JAMAICA VICTOR PROVES HIMSELF BEST JUVENILE OF THE MEETING

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 11. — Ogden Phipps' White Cockcade, big, handsome son of Diavolo-White Favor, demonstrated anew today that he is the class of the Metropolitan juvenile division, winning the twenty-third running of the Youthful Stakes at Jamaica in easy fashion.

The big bay led home Mrs. Payne Whitney's previously undefeated Galsac by four lengths in a common gallop and ran the five furlongs in the brisk time of 59 3-5 seconds.

The Sage Stable's Pullman was beaten eight lengths for the place while C. V. Whitney's Microbe was fourth in the field of six.

A crowd of close to 15,000, favored by summer-like weather, came out for the day's sport. They made White Cockade, now unbeaten in three starts, a 1 to 2 favorite to capture the major portion of the purse, amounting to $3220.

White Cockade was fractious at the start and finally was placed outside the stalls. Frank Horn broke him behind the field but the strapping colt rushed up so fast the others appeared to be standing still. White Cockade opened daylight in the first furlong and never faltered.

Easy Sailing, with Jockey L. Machado up, won the Leland Handicap of a mile and 70 yards at Aurora, defeating W. Himphy's Dark Woman by two lengths. Joe Flores, which was coupled with the winner as the L. Beyda entry, was third. Easy Sailing ran the distance in 1:42 3-5 and paid $5.90 for $2 straight.

The Texas Central Centennial Handicap at Dallas went to Blessed Event which galloped the seven furlongs in 1:26 3-5 to lead home Rip Van Winkle and Bold Lover. Blessed Event paid $7.40 for $2 to win.

Fishing Season to Open May 30.

A full week-end of fishing at the outset of the 1935 Missouri fishing season which starts May 30 will provide anglers the best break they have had in many years. The season will open on Decoration day, which this year falls on Thursday, thereby permitting three holidays during the week-end.

Not only are the fishermen elated over the desirable arrangement for the calendar when the season opens after having been closed since April 1, but resort owners and float trip operators as well have been making arrangements for the event. Because fishing plays such an important part in the attractions of the Ozarks, the opening of the bass fishing season each year marks the official opening also of the resort and State parks season. Many of the State parks and resorts, however, have been operating for several weeks, some of them having remained open all winter.

Anglers on the streams and lakes this year will find no new regulations to observe. State Game and Fish Commissioner Wilbur C. Buford, however, suggests that all fishermen refresh their memories in regard to regulations and specifically points out the following:

Anyone fishing outside his own county must have a fishing permit; non-residents may obtain either $3 yearly permits or licenses good for 15 days for $1; sale of game fish from State waters is prohibited, fishing within 200 feet either side of a fishway banned excepting with pole and line.

Creel limits are 10 trout, bass or channel catfish, 15 crappie and white perch, five jack salmon, 20 goggle eye.

The department also points out that many of the State's principal fishing streams and lakes are shown on the new outdoor life guide recently published at Jefferson City. This guide contains a large State map showing fishing streams, State parks, national forests and how to reach them via the State highways. A game and fish schedule and condensed game laws also appear on this map which will be mailed free to anyone requesting them from the game and fish department.

State and Federal fish culturalists are co-operating in a small-mouth bass propagation project on Missouri's state fish hatcheries. More than 125,000 small mouth-bass fry have been used to stock several state rearing ponds and when additional ponds can be constructed, as anticipated for this year, more bass will be available for stocking purposes.

Waterfowl Refuge.

The first waterfowl refugee to be established in Missouri—the Squaw Creek Bottoms refuge in Holt County—is to be developed by a Civilian Conservation Corps camp, state game and fish department officials were advised this week. This refuge will contain 6400 acres. Most of the land for the project has already been purchased and options on adjoining acreage is being taken by Federal agents. Developments will consist largely of fence and levee construction.

Lake of the Ozarks.

Plans for the summer's activities on the Lake of the Ozarks will be discussed at a meeting of the Lake of the Ozarks Association at Camdenton May 14. This association is the largest of its kind in the central Ozarks region and has been responsible for much of the planning and development work already accomplished in the new Lake of the Ozarks area. Members are resort owners on the lake and business men in towns within the area.

Illegal Nets Destroyed.

When game wardens dragged the Osage River between U. S. Highway No. 50 and the U. S. Government lock and dam one day this week they retrieved several large nets which fishermen were using illegally. When the nets were collected on the banks of the Osage, Joe E. Green, chief of wardens for the Missouri Game and Fish Department, had kerosene poured on them and then had them burned.

A Hi-Skeet Tower

Here is the newest in skeet-shooting—a "Hi-Skeet" tower from which targets are released. This tower is part of a layout at "kilsyth" Long Island on the estate of Mr. Gerald H. Huntington. He maintains a fine shooting range, where he keeps in practice for field shooting by "killing" targets.

Another Dam Built.

Civilian Conservation Corps workers at Roaring River State Park in Barry County have completed another dam on Roaring River thereby creating a lake which adds 32 acres to the water area within that park. The new lake will be the third in a series of lakes between the Roaring River Spring and where the stream leaves the park boundaries. One small lake is used as rearing pool for brood stock rainbrow trout while the two other lakes, including the new one, are to be stocked with fish for public fishing. The newest lake also will be a swimming and boating place.

Rifle and Pistol Shoot.

The ninth annual shoot of the Missouri Rifle and Pistol Association was started Saturday on the State's range on U. S. Highway 50 east of Jefferson City with one of the biggest entry lists in several years. The shoot is to be completed this afternoon.

Entry lists showed a steady increase in interest in rifle and pistol shooting by civilians. More girls also are taking up rifle shooting, association officials said, with both co-educational and girl schools offering instruction in rifle and pistol shooting.

LATONIA ABANDONS TRUE DERBY DISTANCE OF MILE AND A HALF

LATONIA, Ky., May 11.

THE Latonia Jockey Club announced today it is cutting the distance to a mile and a quarter for the $15,000 added Latonia Derby to be run June 1.

Latonia's Derby has been at the mile-and-a-half, the same as old England's Derby, throughout the 52 years of its history. It is being cut this year, club officials said, because of the early running.

The race will be the feature of the meeting, opening May 25 and concluding July 6.

Sixty-three nominations have been made, with Omaha, winner of the Kentucky Derby and The Preakness, outstanding.

Victory for William Woodward's Omaha would bring him an additional $5000 and a silver trophy. Every starter in the Kentucky Derby has been named for Latonia.

SLOW TO START, THE BASHFORD WINNER COMES WITH A RUSH

CHURCHILL DOWNS, May 11.—Coldstream, which races for C. D. Shaffer of Chicago, established himself as an outstanding 2-year-old prospect of the Midwest, when he made a show of his opposition to win the thirty-fourth running of the Bashford Manor stakes before 15,000 racing fans at Churchill Downs today.

Bright Light and Lemont, coupled in the betting as the Shandon Farm entry, also owned by a Chicagoan, finished second and third and although much the best of the eight other members of the field, were no match for the winner.

Coldstream was in close quarters early, as Erin Torch set the pace but once straightened out, took a commanding lead and won as Jockey Paul Keester elected. At the finish of the five-furlong event, the slashing son of Bull Dog was coasting by five lengths. Bright Light beat his stablemate a neck for the place. The former suffered light interference and was lucky to get through at the turn, but closed with determination.

Erin Torch quit to nothing and the others were never serious factors.

Coldstream, despite his easy victory, came within 2-5 of a second of the track record of 59 seconds flat, held jointly by Yankee Notions and Ruddy Light. He was backed into 1 to 2 favoritism, paying $3 mutuels. His victory marked the second in two years for Coldstream Stud, St. Bernard having won the 1934 renewal in almost as handy fashion.

Mantagna from deWitt Page's Maemere Farm was fourth, beaten by two lengths for third place. Then in order trailed Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Commonwealth, Brannon, Nellie Flag and Boxthorn.

Nine ordinary route performers matched their strides for the mile and one-sixteenth of the third number and it saw Brillfalon registering in a decisive fashion when he tripped to the end of the route five lengths in advance of his nearest pursuer. Ridden by C. Hanford the colt reached the finish five lengths before Drastic Delight who in finishing second paid $103.30. Third honors fell to Post Brigade, with the disappointing choice Mintana before the others.

GOLFERS TO QUALIFY TOMORROW FOR NATIONAL EVENT

20 "PROS" AND 12 AMATEURS WILL SEEK FOUR POSITIONS HERE

By W. J. McGoogan.

Twenty professionals and 12 amateurs from the St. Louis district will compete tomorrow for four places in the National Open tournament to be played June 6, 7 and 8 at Oakmont Country Club, Pittsburgh, Pa. The district test will be 36 holes at Norwood Hills Country Club.

In addition to the four who qualify, Orville White, Meadow Brook professional, will compete in the National by reason of his having been among the low 30 scorers in last year's tournament.

The trial here will be one of 25 throughout the country in which 1087 amateurs and professionals will seek 122 places. The number of contestants in the open has been raised to 162 from 150 and 40 places are already occupied by the low scorers in last year's event and the foreign professionals, who will be in this country, including the six Japanese stars, who play at Sunset next Saturday and Sunday.

After listening to some of the comments about Oakmont, however, it is a question as to whether it is worth while to win a place in the Open.

Oakmont has long been regarded as the severest test of golf in this country if not in the world. Its founder, W. C. Fownes Jr., held the national amateur championship in 1910.

It is said that Fownes, with his Sunday morning foursome, went around the Oakmont course and each time one of them hit a bad shot he would beef about it and say 'that shot should have been penalized,' whereupon another trap, chocolate drop, or other hazard was added until it is has been said that for every 17 yards of fairway there is a trap.

When the Open was last played there in 1927, Tommy Armour, now of Chicago, and Harry Cooper, also of Chicago, tied with 301 at the end of the regulation 72 holes and Armour won in the 18 hole playoff with a 77, defeating Cooper by one stroke.

St. Louis was represented in that tournament by Clarence Wolff, an amateur, and three professionals.

Wolff said that Oakmont must be seen to be appreciated, that Bobby Jones once declared it the hardest golf course in the world and that it was easy to believe.

Traps and Then More Traps.

"It is trapped terribly," said Wolff. "It requires long, straight shots always and, furthermore, the second shots on the long holes have to be placed just as well as the tee shots. If you miss a trap you're in the rough. Either way, you just waste a shot, because the rough is so bad that you have to blast to get onto the fairway, just as you do from a trap.

"But it is always in grand condition. Its fairways are like most of the greens around the St. Louis district.

"The traps bite into the greens in such a manner that you have a difficult time hitting the putting surface, and there are few, if any, 'squirrel' or run-up shots.

"It is a marvelous test of golf, [illegible] with the greens slick and fast. I remember in 1927 that you had to readjust your putting touch. Even the Englishman, accustomed to fast greens, squawked.

"It is so big and comprehensive that you need all the clubs in your bag and wish you could find a few mongrels to take care of situations which arise."

So much for the expert opinion of the course. But in a membership of 650, which Oakmont boasts, all of the 650 won't be par shooters or even 80 shooters. There will be some struggling to break a hundred, even as you and I.

Bernard W. Stemmerich, a member of Algonquin Golf Club, formerly lived in the Pittsburgh district and played Oakmont a number of times.

Stemmerich, or "Stem," as his associates call him, is not a Clarence Wolff, but rather a Sunday morning golfer, who buys the drinks when he breaks 90.

When he played Oakmont, he says, he used to add five or 10 strokes to his normal score at his home club of Edgewood, Pittsburgh, where he was accustomed to shooting about 90.

"Why," he declared, "most of the business men golfers of Pittsburgh, used irons off the tees. The traps were so placed that if one of them should happen to hit a good shot with a wooden club they would be in it, so they played it safe with an iron. But what a course."

Morning and Afternoon Rounds.

And that's what 20 professionals and 12 amateurs will be striving for at Norwood Hills. A chance to play a course which even the best of them think is tough. It has been said that the 301 of Armour and Cooper will not be bettered this [illegible] duplicated.

However, tournament golfers are real gamblers. They pit their own [illegible] against the toughest in the [illegible] at their own expense and if [illegible] lands within the low 30 in [illegible] they have done something.

So they will struggle at Norwood tomorrow, 36 holes, 18 in the morning and 18 in the afternoon for a [illegible] Oakmont, to say nothing of meeting the Runyans, the Re[illegible], the Hagens and the Armours of the golfing world, amateur and pro.

Those Coaching Macks! Connie Jr. at 22, Never Played on a Professional Team

Youngest Major League Coach Directs Play of Major League Stars From His Post at First Base.

The Athletics' Board of Strategy Includes Three Members of the MacGillicuddy Family.

By Damon Kerby.

Only 22 years old, and without an inning of playing experience in minor or major league baseball, yet a coach of a big league baseball team!

A 6-foot 5-inch son of Connie Mack—Connie Jr.—fills this picture. He was on the first-base coaching line for the Philadelphia Athletics during their series with the Browns, concluded yesterday.

On the coaching lines or in a hotel lobby, Connie Jr. is easily identified as the son of his father. The same gaunt, spare frame, even if four inches taller, the same lean face, and the same blue eyes.

He ambled across the lobby of the club's hotel while here, dressed in a brown coat, gray trousers and white shoes, and by request sat down and talked about himself. He was quiet, almost grave in manner, but a smile broke through every now and then to lighten up his face and his blue eyes.

Raised in BB Atmosphere.

"Come to think of it, I guess it is a little odd for a fellow of my age and my lack of experience to coach on a big-league club," he said. "However, it shouldn't be so terribly strange in my case. I was raised in a baseball atmosphere. I love the game, and if I could play well enough I'd be right out there on the field. As it is"—and he smiled—"I've gotten as close to it as I can.

"As a youngster I pitched for my prep school team, but my arm went bad and I changed to the outfield. When I went to college I spent most of my time coaching, so I have a general knowledge of what is expected of me out there."

Young Connie attended Duke University for two years, where the former major league pitcher, Jack Combs, is baseball coach. It was through Combs' influence that he went to Duke. However, he gave up school after two years in order to marry.

"The duties of a coach at first base are not too heavy," continued the young man. "When the play is in front of a runner it's up to him to look out for himself. Of course, the coach keeps talking all the time, but whether"—and another smile lurked at the corners of his mouth—"but whether the runner hears you or not is just one of the many things you never know.

"Of course, if a runner is on second as well as on first, the first baseman is usually near the bag, and the first-base coach has to be on top of everything, keeping the runner advised whether to lengthen or shorten his lead toward second. That's about all there is to it."

Sells Oil in the Winter.

Connie Jr. hopes to make a life work of baseball, but he believes—and practices his belief—that a young man in major league baseball should develop himself in another line of activity during the off season. He has a winter job with a Philadelphia oil company.

"There are 23 players on a big league club," he explained, "and new men are coming in all the time, forcing the veterans out. Only three jobs are possibly available to a veteran after he is through, those of scouting, coaching or managing. And sometimes not one of these jobs is open. Therefore, it is up to the young man in baseball to keep other irons in the fire during his playing career; otherwise he may find himself with no job, and no ability to hold one, after he is through with baseball."

The addition of Connie Jr. to the coaching staff makes the Athletics' board of strategy pretty much of a family affair, as Earl, another son of the veteran manager, is still with the team. He is listed as a coach, but serves during the game as bullpen catcher.

Spitting Scandal Develops From Cardinals' Game

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.

A SPITTING scandal developed in the National League today. Burgess Whitehead of the Cardinals was hit on the thumb by a pitched ball in the ninth inning. Umpire Stewart called it a "foul strike."

"It hit me on the thumb," Whitehead protested. "Here, I'll fix it," said Stewart. "I'll spit on it for you."

Coach Gonzales ran in, protesting, as Stewart held the finger in front of his mask, and Mike was ordered out of the game by Umpire Stewart.

Syl. Johnson then relieved Jorgens and Whitehead, missing his swing at Johnson's first pitch, was out on strikes.

Whitehead went to a doctor tonight and an X-ray showed his thumb was fractured in three places. It was the thumb which Umpire Stewart tried to fix with spit.

The club will forward a report to President Ford Frick of the National League. Several of the players saw Stewart do the spitting.

CENTRALS IN NEWARK FOR SOCCER FINAL WITH RANGERS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEWARK, N. J., May 11.—New York and Jersey soccer fans are expected to turn out in large numbers to witness tomorrow night's national cup final between the Central Brewers of St. Louis and Pawtucket Rangers. This will be the third game of the series between the clubs and the Centrals will hold a three-goal advantage, which is extremely important for in the event the Rangers win tonight, the Centrals may still win the championship provided Pawtucket does not outscore the St. Louisans tomorrow by more than three goals.

In the opening game of the series, played at St. Louis two weeks ago, the Centrals won, 5 to 2. At Pawtucket, a week later, the Rangers held St. Louis to a 1-1 score. In order to obviate a prolonged series, the national challenge cup competition rules specify that "the team which wins two games, or leads in total goals," shall be adjudged winner of the final series.

When the St. Louis team arrived here today, the center halfback, Bill Lehman, was missing, but his teammates received word this evening that he was flying East aboard a TWA transport plane, accompanied by Jim Burke, club owner, and Ray Egan, a St. Louis player.

TROLLEY LEAGUERS TO PLAY THREE GAMES

With a three-way tie for first place now existing between Belleville, Collinsville and Mount Vernon in the Missouri-Illinois Trolley League, the six clubs will take the field this afternoon to resume play after last week's layoff due to wet grounds with Belleville taking on the Blue Jays of Edgemont at Belleville starting at 3 o'clock.

At Mount Vernon, the champion Mount Vernon club will entertain the Red Birds of Collinsville, while the St. Louis Alpen Braus are down to open the season at Centralia, meeting the Boosters.

Big Jess Doyle, former Brownie right hander, will make his initial debut for Manager Otis Miller's Belleville squad, while Johnny Harshany, the Edgemont ace, who lost his first start two weeks ago to Collinsville, will get the assignment from Manager Ray Besse.

Ollie Eckert, Collinsville's star who let Edgemont down with four scattered hits in his first appearance, will go to the hill for the Red Birds against the champions. Manager Jimmy McLaughlin, of the Car Builders, is expected to start Nick Zanter.

At Centralia, the Boosters will put on their inaugural game on their home grounds by sending Vic Osterero to the pitching mound in an effort to get going against the St. Louisans. Vic relieved Beiser in the latter innings against the Car Builders two weeks ago and held the champions safe.

BURROUGHS DEFEATS PRINCIPIA TRACK TEAM

The Burroughs track team defeated the Principia team yesterday afternoon at Taylor Field by the score of 78½ to 43½. Priesmeyer was high point man for Principia with 7½ points while Rice and O'Neil shared the honors for Burroughs with 13½ points each.

HARVARD WINS BIG SEVEN TRACK AND FIELD MEET

PRINCETON, N. J., May 11.—Producing a succession of brilliant individual performances, featured by the victory of a sophomore, Emile Dubiel, over the great Keith Brown of Yale in the pole vault, Harvard's powerful team returned to Eastern track and field heights today by capturing the first annual "Big Seven" championship meet in Palmer Stadium.

Dubiel sprang the most sensational upset of the heptagonal games and thrilled a crowd of 5000 spectators by vaulting 13 feet, 7⅞ inches, the best performance of his career, Brown could do no better than 13-6 in an event that he has monopolized throughout his intercollegeate career.

It was the first time the Eli ace has been beaten by other than a Yale rival. Brown lost several college duels to his old teammate, Wirt Thompson, but has been unbeaten in championship competition until today.

MATCH BETWEEN KING LEVINSKY AND JOE LOUIS IN THE MAKING

CHICAGO, May 11.—Joe Louis, sensational Detroit Negro heavyweight, will be swamped with offers for contests if he manages to defeat Primo Carnera in New York June 25.

The one bout which has Chicago by the ears is a possible Louis-King Levinsky fight, and that one likely will be held, no matter what happens in the Carnera affair, but, of course, a victory for Louis over the big Italian would make the Chicago venture all the more attractive.

A Willing Kingfish.

Levinsky is willing. He strolled into the office of the Illinois Athletic Commission the other day when they were weighing Joe Ghnouly and Cleto Locatelli. The King just can't keep away from any place where anything pertaining to the fight game is going on.

The minute he entered the room there were calls for Joe Louis, for it has not been so long ago that Levinsky announced that Chicago was not big enough for both and that Louis had better move back to his home town.

The King took the ribbing goodnaturedly and asked them to bring on Louis, that he would fight him anywhere, any time.

"Sure, Baer knocked me out," remarked Levinsky, "but I ask you, is that any disgrace to be knocked out by the world's champion? Schmeling was knocked out, Carnera was knocked out, so what?

"But this Louis. I'll fight him and beat him."

All of which sounds good for the promoter who lands the scrap, for they say the interest is great enough here that such a bout would draw a gate of $100,000, even if Louis loses to Carnera, and $200,000 if he beats Carnera.

Davey Day, Barney Ross' stablemate, who is being groomed for the lightweight championship by Sam Pian and Art Winch, has the same boxing style as Ross. In fact, he looks somewhat like Barney, physically. He is rather tall, dark hair and eyes like Ross and he likely will have the same trouble staying under the 135-pound limit after a short time that Ross experienced.

He is reputed to be a good puncher with his right hand but his general style is a stab with his left, then a strategic retreat, or so it appeared in a short workout he had with a lad, George Vlk, who was boxing with him.

Wright Turns Pro.

Herman Wright, Chicago Negro bantamweight, who created quite a stir in the early rounds of the National Amateur tournament, at The Arena, has turned professional. He is working at George Trafton's gymnasium and looking for bouts, in company with a small army of fighters.

Jack Hurley said there was a story carried by a press association recently that he was looking for a successor to Billy Petrolle with the result that he had letters from 400 youths from all parts of the country asking for a trial.

"Some of them even paid their own expenses to Duluth," said Jack, "and why I don't know. Some didn't even know how to hold their hands up, others didn't even have the necessary physical requirements for boxing but they all thought they were Petrolles. It was a shame to even mention Billy's name in the same breath with them. I don't suppose I'll ever see another Petrolle but I did get a letter from a friend in Ironwood, Mich., who wrote that he had a boy who was not another Petrolle but came close, that he had seen Petrolle start his career and his lad looked a great deal like Billy. So I went to look him over and it was true. His facial resemblance to Billy is startling. His style is similar and he is the same rushing, punching type that Petrolle was when he started. I don't expect him to turn out like Petrolle but he may come close. His name is Pete Koloff, a Bulgarian."

General Motors Begins $3,500,000 Pontiac Production Expansion

Will Spend Sum on Auto Plant and Fisher Factory Building Pontiac Bodies.

A statement by H. J. Klingler, president and general manager of the Pontiac Motor Co., says that General Motors will spend $3,500,000 in the next few months on expansion of production facilities for Pontiac automobiles at Pontiac, Mich.

Expansion of the Fisher Body Corporation plant, which supplies bodies for Pontiac cars, will cost $2,500,000. In addition, $1,000,000 will be spent in enlarging the Pontiac plant.

The enlargement will include new buildings, machinery and equipment. Construction work has been started.

April production of Pontiac automobiles reached the high point of the year with a total of 18,749 cars, according to A. W. L. Gilpin, vice-president and general sales manager of the Pontiac Motor Co.

"This brings our total production of 1935 models up to 70,558 cars," said Gilpin, "a figure which is 92 per cent of the total for last year of 1934 models. The entire 1934 model production was 76,553 cars.

"At the present rate of operation, the 1934 model total will be passed before the middle of May. The number of unfilled orders on hand will put us over the 1934 total with several thousand to spare."

Time to Check Tires For Safe, Economical Warm Weather Driving

Opening of another Spring and Summer season of increasingly heavier automobile traffic should cause every car owner to consider the condition of his tire equipment, not only from the standpoint of safety, but for the sake of tire economy, says C. M. Van Epps, manager for Goodyear Service, Inc.

A car owner should have his car's tire equipment carefully checked, not necessarily to buy new ones, but maybe to change the tires around on other wheels on his car to equalize wear, or to check the alignment of wheels to be certain that undue wear is not exacting its tool from tire mileage.

"Many car owners are driving their automobiles with wheels slightly out of line, or driving tires that need repairing and could be repaired or retreaded at slight cost with big mileage recovery, or some owners are taking chances driving on tires that are ready to let go at any time, which is dangerous in today's speedy traffic.

"Tire repair methods have kept pace with the many changes and new developments in motor manufacture. So it is significant that Goodyear maintains a group of tire repair schools located at various points in the country where dealers may send their tire men every year or so to learn and practice new ways of handling repairs."

Millions of Old, Worn Tires Declared to Be Real "Public Enemies"

There are at least 10,000,000 public enemies in the form of old, worn tires roaming the highways of the United States today, if a survey made recently in New York City may be taken as a basis for an estimate.

This survey, sponsored by the United States Rubber Co., was carried on by men walking along the streets—Broadway, Fifth avenue, Park avenue and other well-known thoroughfares—and checking the tires on parked cars.

It was found that an average of one of two cars had at least one tire which had been worn dangerously smooth. Considering that more than 20,000,000 cars are on the road today, it was figured that half of this number, or 10,000,000, are harboring a public enemy.

The phrase, "public enemy," is especially appropriate, in view of the fact that smooth, skiddy tires caused more deaths than did gangsters last year. Measured by their records of death dealing, smooth, dangerous tires should be classified as Public Enemy No. 1.

Decatur Auto Firm's Organization Honored For April Sales Feat

P. A. Jarrue, regional manager for the Dodge Motor Co. in the St. Louis territory, entertained the B. B. Burns, Inc., organization of Decatur, Ill., at a luncheon at the Bevo Mill Tuesday noon, in recognition of an outstanding sales record that organization made in April by selling 110 used cars and 170 new ones.

After the luncheon, the 18 members of the Burns organization were taken to the ball game by Burns, and were guests at a banquet at Hotel Claridge in the evening. Talks were made by H. Elliott, sales manager for the Burns organization; Warren Frame, district manager who covers Decatur out of St. Louis, and D. M. Vredenburg, assistant in the Dodge advertising department at Detroit.

King of Iraq Orders Supercharged Auburn

An order has been received by the Auburn Automobile Co. from the young King Gahzi of Iraq for a 150 horsepower super-charged Auburn speedster.

The youthful ruler is an ardent motorist as well as a horseman and takes as much interest in his motor cars as he does in his stable.

A gold replica of the royal crown, three inches high, will appear on each door of the car. The body of the speedster is to be finished in lemon yellow with fenders, belt and raised portions in Desdemona blue. The upholstery is of a special imported blue leather.

Gets Luggage Out of Way

In the new Ford V-8 sedans, travelers stow their luggage in a concealed compartment back of the rear seat. The compartment is exposed by dropping the seat back forward. The luggage space is large enough for an overnight bag and two suitcases or Gladstone bags, which can be stowed out of sight and out of the way, protected from dust and scuffing toes.

De Soto Airstream Convertible Coupe Shown in St. Louis

The new De Soto Airstream convertible coupe, with double frame construction, is being shown for the first time in this territory by Mound City Motors, distributer, and associated dealers.

"The double frame construction is an exclusive Chrysler Motors development," George Weber Sr., president of Mound City Motors, said yesterday. "It solves a problem that has confronted the automobile industry for years. It overcomes the fundamental weakness of previous convertible bodies; namely, that they have been mounted directly on the frame with nothing to support them and give them rigidity but their own body panels.

"The two frames are the regular six-inch chassis frame, and a special four-inch frame built inside the body. They are bolted together to form a 10-inch steel girder, similar in size and strength to the steel girders used in the construction of skyscrapers."

A special demonstration, designed to give motorists of the city a chance to ride in one of the newest engineered cars and discover what the latest mechanical and luxury developments mean has been started by Mound City Motors.

"Today's new car is so improved over those of other years," Weber said, "that the average motorist has little or no conception of their riding and handling ease until he has driven and ridden in one. Cars selling for less than $700 this year offer a great deal more in extra values than did the $4000 cars of a few years ago."

Standard Oil Dealers Told of Best Methods For Serving Motorists

Three hundred dealers from St. Louis and St. Louis County attended the first of a series of meetings Tuesday night at the Coronado Hotel arranged by the Standard Oil Co. sales department.

The meeting was held to acquaint the dealers with the most efficient and modern methods of serving motorists. The newspaper advertising plans for 1935 were disclosed and explained in detail.

Speakers were R. W. May, assistant manager for the St. Louis division, who discussed "The Opportunities of 1935"; R. B. McFarland, sales manager at St. Louis, whose topic was "Standard Service," and F. B. Kramer, advertising representative in St. Louis, who presented the advertising campaign.

Conferences, planned to follow this meeting throughout the year, will present to the dealers other phases of best way of serving motorists as revealed by extensive research studies conducted by the Standard Oil Co.'s market and research committee.

The management of the company has already reported a satisfactory profit for the first quarter of 1935, and has indicated that April also was a profitable month. The Hudson company now has a larger number of retail outlets than at any time since 1930.

Oldsmobile Dealers Set All-Time Record For Retail Deliveries

Setting a new all-time record for retail sales in a single month, Oldsmobile reports delivery of more cars in April than in the first four months of 1934.

The new peak was 18,554 cars, a substantially greater number than was delivered in the previous all-time record month, March of this year. In the final 10 days of the month Oldsmobile dealers delivered 6272 units, an increase of 87 per cent over the corresponding period of 1934.

Retail deliveries for the year reached 51,916 on April 30, almost three times as many as in the first four months of last year.

A new all-time production peak also was reached in April, when 20,311 cars were built and shipped in this single month. This was greater by 11 per cent than the previous monthly production record established in March.

From Jan. 1 to April 30, 64,557 Oldsmobiles were produced, as compared with 26,309 a year ago.

Packard Production 6100 Cars Per Month

Production of Packard cars is exceeding all records of the Packard Motor Car Co. With the plant in which the new One Twenty car is being built now producing to nearly capacity, production in May is being maintained at the rate of 6100 cars per month. The best previous production month for Packard was October, 1928, when 5548 cars were built. This was a year in which Packard shipped 49,698 cars.

On Tuesday of the past week all records for daily shipments in the 35 years Packard has been building cars were broken. The record for the day was 333 cars. The highest number of Packard cars previously shipped in one day was 303, on Aug. 30, 1929.

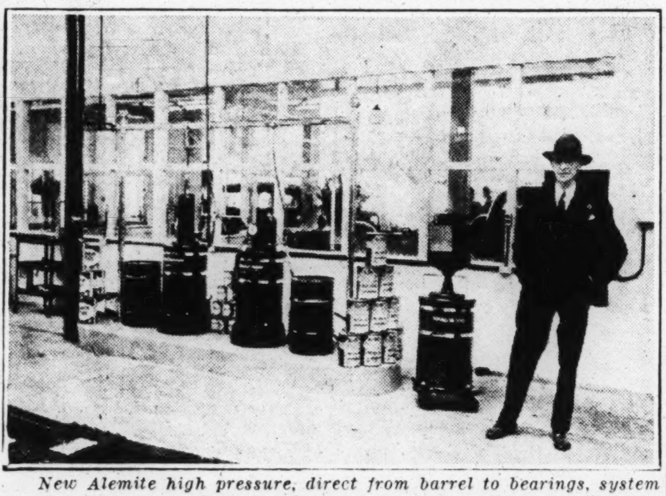
Barrel to Bearings Lubrication



New Alemite high pressure, direct from barrel to bearings, system installed in the new Roberts Chevrolet Co. sales and service plant at 5877 Delmar boulevard. This Alemite system, which works with overhead swivel, develops great pressure and keeps lubricant clean and free from dirt and grit. It was perfected recently. The installation for the Roberts Chevrolet Co. is one of the first on a 100 per cent basis in this territory. It is the result of 30 years of experience in building lubricant equipment. The installation was made by Dan F. Hyland, inc., distributor of Alemite equipment, lubricants and motor oil.

Rear Seat Comfort In New Reo Cars

"Experienced railroad travelers always pick seats or Pullman berths near the center of the coach, in the interest of comfort. For the same reason staterooms near the center of an ocean liner are always preferred to those too near the bow or stern. Reasoning along these same lines, and not without justification, motorists have always felt that it was far more comfortable to ride in the front seat of the average motor car than in the rear seat," says H. C. Merry, of the Merry-Krauss Motor Co.

"In the new Reo Flying Cloud, however, rear seat passengers now ride just as comfortably as those in the front seat. Exceptional riding comfort for all passengers in the new Flying Cloud was achieved by Reo engineers by moving the engine forward, redesigning the chassis to shift the passenger seats further forward, and increasing the flexibility of the springs."

In an effort to decrease traffic fatalities, city officials of Los Angeles have sanctioned a plan to mark the automobiles of reckless drivers with the sign "Traffic Violator."

Aircraft Engine Bearings Designed Constant Reliability

New aircraft type copper-lead floating connecting rod bearings are an important improvement in the engine of the Ford V-8 for 1935.

The bearing material is similar to that used in high speed airplane and racing car engines, where reliability is of paramount importance under the most severe operating conditions. It is a copper-lead alloy known as "aircraft type high-leaded bronze."

The new bearing material is especially suitable for use with the cast alloy-steel crankshaft, engineers have determined. The bearing material contains 65 to 70 per cent of copper and 30 to 35 per cent of lead. The copper content provides the hardness necessary to withstand the pressures incident to high engine speeds and continuous open-throttle operation. The lead content improves the friction-reducing qualities of the bearings.

Twenty-Three Makes Of Cars Manufactured in U. S. During 1934

Twenty-three makes of automobiles were manufactured in the United States last year to one in Canada, according to ratios worked out by headquarters here of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, F. W. A. Vesper, president, says. The statement, obtained from figures furnished by the U. S. Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, Vesper says, show that manufacturing of automobiles in Canada in 1934 progressed a few points ahead of the preceding year of 1933 in comparison with manufacturing in the United States. In 1933 the ratio was 29 for the United States to one for Canada.

The total of 1934 cars made in the United States was 2,778,739 and Canada, 116,890. The United States manufactured 2,189,613 passenger cars and Canada 92,538, according to the Government figures. There were 588,640 trucks manufactured in the United States to 24,352 in Canada.

Other sources of information reported by N. A. D. A. give the domestic sales production volume in Canada last year as 68 per cent higher than that of 1933 and 96 per cent in excess of the 1932 figures, with conservative estimates placing sales in 1935 at 20 to 25 per cent greater than in 1934.

Buick Carefully Selects Candidates for Plant Engineers

Recruits for the engineering department of the Buick Motor Co. undergo a thorough training in factory and shop methods before they are taken into the department and given a designing board.

Each year a small group of graduate engineers is selected from leading universities and enter a two-year training course in the Buick factories, at the successful conclusion of which they are taken into the engineering department.

The students are routed through various plants, working periodically in each to acquire a general manufacturing knowledge of the entire plant and the relationship of this manufacturing unit to the engineering department.

Inspection Now May Save Trouble Delay, Danger Later

Modern tires give so much trouble-free service that the average car owner gives little thought to his tire equipment as long as the casings hold air," a statement by them says, say engineers of the B. F. Goodrich Co.

"This is a short-sighted policy, particularly at this season, for hot pavements and increased driving induced by better weather may cause hidden troubles to develop," comments C. F. Newman, manager for Goodrich-Silvertown stores.

"Many potential tire faults are not visible at a casual glance and as tire inspection service is free, every car owner should take advantage of it before summer arrives.

"For instance, a tack or nail cannot always be seen, unless it happens to be where it catches the eye, and bruises are not usually evident unless the tire is subjected to a thorough examination.

"In many cases cuts or other breaks in a casing are not found unless tires are removed from the rims. Service men have the tools necessary for quick, accurate inspection and can give advice based on experience.

"Inner tubes cause frequent troubles due to improper inflation, pinching or leaking valves and cause many tire difficulties on the road.

"Rims should have the rust removed in the spring, and wheels should be checked for alignment before the period of heaviest driving arrives.

"Now is the proper time to have these details looked after. The small amount of time involved may save hours of delay at some later, more inconvenient time, in addition to assuring safety, always a matter of first importance."

20-YR. EXTENSION OF RESTRICTIONS ON LINDELL DRIVE

SOME ANTICIPATED APARTMENT ENTRY

Originally Known as Catlin Tract — Property Rules First Established in 1908 Following World's Fair—All Large Lots.

By Berry Moore

The restrictions governing what was originally called the Catlin tract have been renewed in advance of expiration for a period of 20 years without alterations. The present restrictions terminate in 1938. The extension will now carry them to 1958.

Facing Forest Park, the tract, known as Lindell drive, extends from Union on the east to Skinker road. It has a total frontage of 7480 feet with a depth of 530 feet, exclusive of a 20-foot strip on the north line, reserved for an alley. The Rock Island Railway and the University street car line parallel the tract on the north.

In real estate circles it had been thought by some that the restrictions eventually would be amended to permit the erection of apartments on the north half of the tract.

Replete with safeguards, the restrictions, established in 1908, forbid the erection of apartments or buildings for business or professional purposes. The tract is restricted to residences costing not less than $12,500, with lots in no instance less than 100x530 feet. A 100-foot building line also must be observed. No walls or fences are permitted on the premises.

Several years ago Claude E. Vrooman, large real estate owner and operator, sought the north half of the tract, with the restrictions altered to permit the erection of apartments. He proposed to treble the frontage of the tract by subdividing and constructing a street through its north half from Union to Skinker road, regarded as feasible with its extensive depth. The north half was to be given over to apartments, while the Lindell frontage was to be reserved for residences. The project was halted, however, with the advent of the depression. Vrooman built the first three residences on the Lindell frontage of the tract, a speculative venture that yielded him a record profit.

Lots Uniform in Size.

All the lots in the Catlin tract have a uniform frontage of 100 feet by a depth of 530 feet to the concrete wall on the north, which separates it from the Rock Island tracks east of De Baliviere avenue line, with the exception of the east end of the block at Union.

Removal of the Rock Island tracks, now abandoned, and the University street car line is urged to make way for a proposed boulevard. The Rock Island passenger trains have quit using the Wabash tracks east of De Baliviere avenue and enter and leave the city over the Terminal's North Side line. The St. Louis County Plans Commission has considered a plan to convert the roadbed into a boulevard between Page avenue and De Balivier. Rock Island officers have been quoted as saying they would sell the right-of-way for which they hold the title. Abandonment of the Rock Island tracks has abolished dangerous grade crossings at Skinker, Big Bend, Forsythe boulevard, Maryland avenue and Ladue road.

A Board of Trustees composed of Frank A. Stiers, Harry Prufrock, and Edw. G. Platt has supervision of maintenance and enforcement of restrictions. The Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. is named to serve in the absence of all three of the trustees. An annual charge of 65 cents a front foot is made for maintenance of the tract.

Scene of "Pike" During Fair.

The Catlin tract, forming the north boundary of Forest Park between Union and Skinker road, was purchased in 1904 for $1,000,000 from the late Daniel Catlin by a syndicate headed by the late Thomas Wright, vice-president of the old Third National Bank, in a deal engineered by the late Moses Greenwood, a large operator in the local real estate field in the early 90's. Acquiring it on the eve of the World's Fair held in commemoration of the Louisiana purchase, the syndicate leased it to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition for the "Pike", a side show of the Fair, at a fabulous rental.

Several years after the Fair, the tract was purchased by a group, including among others, Festus J. Wade, Paul Brown, Daniel K. Catlin and William K. Bixby, the Forest Park Land Company being incorporated to take title to it. The tract was restricted for high class residences for which its location made it highly eligible. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were expended for streets and municipal improvements. Approximately two-thirds of the Lindell frontage is now occupied by residences on a scale with some of the most pretentious in the city.

Federal Housing Administration Reports Results on Specific Days.

WASHINGTON, May 11. — The Federal Housing Administration on Monday last week received applications for insurance mortgage loans totaling $2,195,871, according to a statement by Stewart McDonald, Acting Administrator. This sum, of which 32 per cent, or approximately $600,000, was for construction of new homes throughout the country, was an increase of almost $1,000,000 over the highest day of last week.

Heretofore the figures for each week have shown that the applications for insured mortgage loans increased at the rate of 25 per cent over the total of the week immediately preceding. Monday's figures indicate an increase last week of almost 100 per cent over the total of the preceding week, if this rate was kept up.

On Tuesday the number of modernization loans insured by the Housing Administration was 2660, representing a gross of $1,060,948, an increase of almost $200,000 over the previous high day.

What Missouri Region Has Done.

Meredith C. Jones, director of Region 8, which comprises Missouri, Arkansas, Kentucky and Tennessee, states that 1050 applications have been received from the region in the amount of $4,300,000, with 631 applications, totaling $2,900,000, coming from Missouri. This constitutes more than half of the total applications for the four states. Out of $2,900,000 in applications for the State of Missouri, there are 410 applications totaling $2,195,000 for just the eastern half of the State.

Jones further states of the above mentioned 1050 applications covering the region, 180 are for the construction of new homes, amounting to more than $1,000,000,000, loans having been closed on 80 of these applications totaling $500,000. Of this amount 'only four applications for construction of new homes have been rejected by the administration. The remainder of the above applications are in the process of examination.

The tract comprises 15 acres, subdivided into 56 lots, ranging in frontage from 60 to 125 feet, and from 100 to 150 feet in depth. Plans contemplate the erection of 50 houses in the addition, seven of which are now under way. Construction of 10 others is scheduled to start within the next 10 days. Four houses recently completed have been sold from the plans.

The houses will range from five-room bungalows to eight-room houses, with from one to two baths. English and Colonial in style, each house will be distinctive in design. Features will include concealing lighting effects, air conditioned heat, tiled kitchen, bath and large rathskellar.

The tract, lying on the west side of Elm avenue, about five and one-half blocks south of Big Bend boulevard, is one of the most attractively situated in this territory.

BUSINESS BLDGS. ON S. GRAND BL. CHANGE HANDS

Property at Corner of Wyoming and at 3173 S. Grand Acquired as Speculative Investments.

Purchases of business property on South Grand boulevard within the last week have aroused renewed speculative interest in holdings of this type in this part of the city.

A feature of the week was the sale of the comparatively new two-story building at the northwest corner of Grand boulevard and Wyoming street, to Christian Steiner, through the Henry R. Weisels Co. The price was not announced.

Substantial in construction, the building is designed with two large stores on the first floor and four offices and six apartments on the second floor. A garage is on the rear of the lot. The site has 80 feet on Grand and 120 feet on Wyoming. The purchase was made as an investment. Steiner was represented by the Slonim Realty Co. and the seller, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Parnell, by the Henry R. Weisels Co.

Another significant purchase in the Tower Grove Heights district was that of a modern two-story building at 3173-75 South Grand boulevard, 25 feet north of Connecticut street, by Theodore Hemmelmann Jr., on behalf of a client. Edward Thornhill handled the transactions, representing both interests.

The building comprises three stores and six apartments. The site is 75 by 150 feet. Adjoining the northeast corner of Grand and Connecticut street, the building is regarded as very attractively situated. The consideration is withheld.

Speculative purchases, involving, notably, corners on Grand boulevard south of Arsenal street, have been a source of handsome profits. Prices paid for corners available for chain stores, in several instances, have rivaled those recorded in the downtown district. Several strategic sites, not available through outright purchase, have been acquired by various chain store concerns under 99-year leases.

APPLICATIONS GRANTED FOR LOANS UP TO $428,000

Since the first of this year when the plan became effective, Mississippi Valley Trust Co. has granted applications for $428,000 in Federal Housing Insured Mortgage Loans, which include new mortgages, the refinancing of mortgages and the financing of new building on which construction has been completed. One hundred and seventy-five thousands dollars worth of loans have been definitely closed and the remainder have been approved by the bank and are at the Federal Housing office for approval. These loans are made under Title II of the National Housing Act.

During the last few months a distinct upturn has been noted at Mississippi Valley Trust Co. in the demand for Federal Housing loans for repairs, improvements and modernization of both home and business properties. The company has closed a total of 408 loans amounting to $180,707. These loans come under Title I of the National Housing Act which has been in effect since August of last year.

FHA MODERNIZATION ADVANCES AT NEW PEAK

Credits Totaling $2,968,882 Were Extended to 7352 in the Week Ending April 27.

A new peak was reached last week in modernization credits for financing improvements to all types of real property, extended by private financial institutions insured by the Federal Housing Administration, Acting Administrator Stewart McDonald announced today, according to advices from Washington, D. C.

Credits totaling $2,968,882 were extended to 7353 persons in the week ended April 27. This brings the grand total to 143,828 credits for a value of $60,151,986.

Actual modernization credits extended represent only a small part of the modernization work created by the better housing program, it was pointed out. The value of modernization work completed since inauguration of the program last August is estimated at $381,288,975.

Acceleration of the modernization phase of the better housing program is shown graphically in the comparison of the four weeks from March 4 to 30 and April 1 to 27. In the four weeks of March, 17,610 credits were extended for a total of $7,428,783, a weekly average of 4402½ credits for $1,857,198.25. In the four weeks of April, 25,010 credits were extended for $10,035,110, a weekly average of 6252½ credits for $2,508,827.50.

Actual defaults up to the present have been negligible. Seventeen defaults for a value of $6665.95 have been paid by the administration to approved financial institutions.

Delinquencies also remain remarkably low. A check-up around the first of the year showed that less than one-half of one per cent of the monthly installments were 30 days overdue. It is the belief of the administration that the 30-day delinquencies remain below one per cent.

There is someone who misses you sadly
And finds the time long since you went;
There is someone who thinks of you always
And tries to be brave and content;

But the rolling stream of life rolls on,
And still the vacant chair.

SALESMEN WANTED

MEN

AN EXECUTIVE OF OUR COMPANY WILL BE HERE MONDAY TO INTERVIEW REPUTABLE, INDUSTRIOUS MEN FOR PERMANENT POSITIONS. SUCH MEN SHOULD APPLY IN PERSON AT ONCE.

If you are adaptable to this work; if you have the disposition to study and strive to acquire skill in what you do, and if you have good reputation and the will to succeed, we will employ you, and back you in work that is paying qualified men $4000, $5000, $6000, $8000 per year and higher, regularly, in our Missouri branches, and throughout the entire country.

These incomes are cash and just as stable and permanent as any business or professional opportunities possibly could be. Such earnings represent success, and these new openings make similar success available to a few more men who can think and work successfully. Our expansion program is dictated by the amazing success of an extraordinary Electrolux invention (not refrigeration). For example, in our St. Louis branch, a former dress manufacturer, H. Tenzer, earned well over $110 for his latest week reported; while F. Tringali, formerly an opera singer, made around $91 for the week; E. Been, $63; H. Couch, $42; A. Schultz, $45; J. Cochran, $89; A. Olson, $64.

Men selected will have to take the time to learn and acquire skill and during this time will have to be satisfied to get along on nominal earnings of $125 to $200 per month, if necessary; some men $115 to $150 per month.

No deposit or investment, but good references required, if we are to back you. Married men of good character, 23 to 50 years, given preference. Men selected will be given complete training, without charge, at our factory branch sales office in St. Louis. Must have use of a car.

If you feel you can qualify, and if you really would appreciate this opportunity this position offers, call for personal interview at 512 Paul Brown Bldg., 9th and Olive sts., Monday, between 9:15 and 1:15.

CHIEF WITNESS IS MISSING IN FLORIDA KIDNAPING TRIAL

Police Think Andrew Olsen May Have Been Murdered; Defendant From Marion, Ill.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., May 11.— Police here today continued their search for Andrew Olsen, 60 years old of Boston, principal witness against Phil Gregory of Marion, Ill., held in the Pineallas County jail on a charge of kidnaping for ransom. Fears that Olsen may have been murdered were expressed by Capt. E. E. Lipphard, investigating the case.

Lipphard has asked police at West Palm Beach to hunt for Olsen.

Olsen, apparently willing to testify against Gregory, told Lipphard in February that he intended to visit West Palm Beach. He said he would keep in touch with Lipphard.

Olsen charged two men approached him, accused him of misconduct, and then offered to fix things up. Not wishing trouble, Olsen later told police he gave them more than $900 and arranged to return to Boston with one of the men to secure more money—several thousand dollars. As they were about to board an airplane Gregory was arrested.

Other organizations registered in the fight against the bill in the last week were Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, Grand-Gravois Business Association, Wyman School Parent-Teacher Association, Blair School Mothers' Circle, Oak Hill School Parent-Teacher Association, St. Louis Presbytery, St. Louis Conference of Methodist Episcopal Church (South), Longfellow School Patrons' Association, Missouri District of the Evangelical Synod of North America, and the Evangelical Young People's Conference of the St. Louis District.

Long's Legislation Upheld.

NEW ORLEANS, May 11.—By a 4 to 3 vote, the Louisiana Supreme Court today held constitutional the legislative act reorganizing the New Orleans Sewage and Water Board which gives the state administration of Gov. The majority opinion held the board was not an ordinary governmental function of the municipal government.

STEEL INDUSTRY OPERATED AT PROFIT FIRST QUARTER

Institute Estimate—Says First Forceful Return Since Second Quarter of 1934.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 11.—The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today that the steel industry operated at a profit during the first quarter of 1935 for the first time since the second quarter of 1934. Aggregate net earnings for the period were estimated at $8,300,000, after all charges but before dividends.

In the second 1934 quarter, however, earnings were estimated at $25,000,000, but during the first 1934 quarter there was a deficit of $8,600,000. For the entire year, the Institute estimated losses of the steel industry at $25,500,000.

The average rate of operations based on steel ingot capacity was 49.32 per cent in the first 1935 quarter compared with 40.27 per cent in the first 1934 quarter. "It appears, therefore," stated the Institute, "that an increase of nine points in the rate of operations was enough to shift the balance of income from red to black."

Payrolls of the industry in the first 1935 quarter were reported by the Institute at $135,305,596, an increase of 21 per cent over the same 1934 quarter, and the average number of employes for the March quarter was 417,552 compared with 405,196 a year ago.

Ingot production in the first quarter was 8,406,995 gross tons, the Institute stated, the highest first quarter production since 1930. Last year, 6,915,785 gross tons of ingots were produced.

FINANCIAL NOTES

NEW YORK, May 11.—American Telephone & Telegraph Co. heads the list of important dividend meetings scheduled for next week. Directors are expected to meet on Wednesday, and on this day action on the American Sugar Co. common stock dividend is also looked for. Other meetings on the calendar include Beech-Nut Packing, Electric Storage Battery, International Harvester, Penick & Ford and Texas Gulf Sulphur.

The New York Federal Reserve Bank today reported the arrival at San Francisco of $384,000 gold from China.

Shipments from the lumber mills during the week ended May 4 were the heaviest of any week since 1931, the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association reports. New business booked was slightly under that of the two preceding weeks and with these exceptions was the largest since November, 1933. Production was below that reported for the previous eight weeks.

Deliveries of sugar by domestic refiners continue to run substantially ahead of the same period last year. From Jan. 1 to April 27, the Sugar Institute announced today, the refiners shipped 1,215,000 long tons against 910,000 tons in the like 1934 period. In the same space of time the melt of the refiners was 1,345,000 tons against 1,060,000 in 1934.

Increased stock market activity starting last month and continuing to date brought further improvement in the price of New York Stock Exchange seats. A membership was arranged for transfer at $88,000, an increase of $2000 over the previous sale rise of $23,000 from the 15-year low mark established for seats early last month.

New offerings of state and municipal bonds scheduled for next week total $9,591,672, says the "Daily Bond Buyer." This compares with the revised total of $23,794,180 for the past week. The largest individual offering on the list is $2,840,000 State of Delaware highway refunding bonds.

Stockholders of American Crystal Sugar Co. will consider a proposal to recapitalize the company for the purpose of caring for accumulated dividends on the preferred stock at the annual meeting on June 11. The plan provides for creation of new cumulative 6 per cent preferred to be exchanged for the present 7 per cent preferred on the basis of 1 6-10 shares of new stock for 1 of old stock. It is expected that a cash disbursement of $3 a share will be authorized to complete liquidation of arrears on the 7 per cent preferred.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Last week's record of dividend actions shows 18 favorable changes against 19 the week before, reports the Standard Statistics Co. Only one unfavorable change was noted compared with two the week before.

WEEK'S METAL REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Copper was the outstanding performer in the metal markets last week.

Domestic and foreign buying was considerably enlarged as consumers became impressed by the prospects for the successful enforcement of the restriction plan inaugurated May 1.

While domestic Blue Eagle held unchanged at 9 cents a pound, export business was done up to 8.05, establishing the highest price since June 19, 1934.

Domestic sales for the month thus far total well over 8100 tons.

There continued to be a good selective demand for lead at unchanged prices. While intimations of an advance were still heard, the more conservative interests were moving cautiously, being reluctant to take action that might curtail demand.

An advance of $2 a ton in zinc was coupled with reports of fair-sized buying for future delivery and the anticipation of an advance in ore prices. While ore stocks are the largest in three years, buyers were apprehensive as a result of labor unsettlement in the tri-state ore fields.

Tin was generally quiet with prices ending the week in a steady position after some early unsettlement caused by reports of a scarcity of pig tin at London.

Antimony was unchanged. Buyers have been holding off pending developments in the Orient, with the latter market in turn being dependent upon the consuming requirements of Europe.

A further slight shrinkage occurred in steel operations, dipping from 46 to 45½ per cent of capacity, and while a rebound is looked for upon settlement of labor difficulties in the automobile industry, the general trend of production appears to be downward.

TRADE TRENDS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Figures reported to the National Electrical Manufacturers' Association show that domestic sales in March continued to run substantially ahead of the like month last year. Units sold totaled 159,383, against 120,685 in March, 1934. Sales for the first three months 327,236 units, against 213,935 last year.

Production in most branches of the glass industry is being maintained at good to high levels, considering the seasonal conditions, according to the "American Glass Review," which adds that the tempo is above that of 1934. In the flat glass industry manufacturing and shipments continue to run well ahead of the corresponding period last year.

Tanners in recent weeks have been active buyers of both light and heavy hide stock, according to trade quarters. Some estimates place the purchases at more than 250,000 hides. Leather consumption for the first quarter was about 8 per cent larger than in the same period last year, it was estimated by Armand Schmoll Jr., a trade authority.

Sugar consumption is on the rise abroad as well as at home, it is indicated by statistics supplied by Lamborn & Co., brokers. The 14 principal European countries in the seven months ended March 31 used 4,316,391 long tons, raw sugar value, against 4,188,893 tons in the like period last season. Shipments by domestic refiners to the end of April show a sizeable gain over last year.

The Stich index of weekly average tobacco prices, based upon the 1926 average of 13.1 cents a pound as 100 for U. S. type 31, air cured burley, declined last week to 125.2 from 129.8 in the previous week.

SALES OF COPPER FOR EXPORT REPORTED MADE AT 8.075C

NEW YORK, May 11.—Sales of copper for export have been made on a basis of 8.075 cents a pound CIF Hamburg and other European base ports, it was reported in metal circles today. This is an increase of 2½ points from the high established Friday and the highest since June, 1934, when the price reached 8.13¾ cents a pound.

Dealers in New York report the buying continues strong and profess to see no letup in European demand.

Domestic copper markets have been fairly active this week, but sales so far this month are running behind last month, according to estimates in trade circles. In the first 11 days of April sales aggregated 16,380,000 pounds, while sales so far this month amount to about 16,370,000 pounds. The price for Blue Eagle metal remains at 9 cents a pound delivered to the end of August.

LITTLE ENTENTE SEEKS NON-AGGRESSION PACT

Decides to Propose Treaty to Bulgaria and Hungary, Which Are Rearming.

By the Associated Press.

BUCAREST, Rumania, May 11.—The little entente and Greece, acknowledging that Bulgaria and Hungary already are rearming clandestinely and they are powerless to stop it, decided today to try to bring them within a new non-aggression pact to safeguard peace in Southeastern Europe.

Taking a "realistic" view of the situation, ministers of Czecho-Slovakia, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Greece agreed not to oppose rearmament of their World War enemies provided Bulgaria and Hungary would enter with them into a six-nation pact of non-aggression and mutual assistance.

They reaffirmed, however, their absolute opposition not only to territorial revision demanded by the vanquished states, but also to any attempt by Austria to restore the Hapsburg monarchy. The four countries are now bound together by a Balkan pact.

At the forthcoming Danubian conference in Rome the four for "practical" purposes will formally veto the request of Bulgaria and Hungary for rearmament.

A new problem, Turkey's demand that it be allowed to rearm in the vital Dardinelles, since Germany is rearming, was left for the great Powers to settle. Delegates will hold a final session tomorrow.

Attending the conference are Foreign Ministers Nicholas Titulescu of Rumania, Demetrios Maximos of Greece, Tewfik Aras of Turkey and Premier Bogoljub Yevtich of Yugoslavia.

Mussolini and Schuschnigg Discuss Austrian Armaments.

By the Associated Press.

FLORENCE, Italy, May 11.—Italy and Austria will stand together in the forthcoming Danubian conference, at least so far as Austria is concerned, well-informed circles said tonight.

This disclosure followed a conference between Premier Mussolini and his Fascist follower, Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria. Only a brief and guarded communique, which admitted "principal problems which interest the two countries were examined in an atmosphere of cordiality, was issued.

Schuschnigg authorized his minister to Rome to say in his name: "I am very satisfied with the results of the conference." Mussolini departed for Rome tonight.

Austrian circles said the conference dealt particularly with the internal situation in Austria and its armaments. Another important point, it was said, involved inclusion of a loophole in the forthcoming Danubian pact which would permit a possible Hapsburg restoration in Austria.

Austria appears assured of Italy's support, principally for its armament demands, at the Danubian conference.

LIQUOR STORE APPLICANT GETS WRIT OF MANDAMUS

Excise Commissioner Compelled to Issue Package Permit to Maurice A. Oberman.

A writ of mandamus compelling Excise Commissioner Anderson to issue a license to Maurice A. Oberman for the sale of liquor by the drink and by the package was issued yesterday by Circuit Judge O'Malley.

Former Excise Commissioner Harry Scullin told the court he had approved Oberman's application, but had not issued the license when Anderson succeeded him in office during April. Oberman testified he had leased a store on the southwest corner of Clara avenue and Delmar boulevard and spent a considerable sum for fixtures on the strength of the approval.

Anderson found there already were six licensed liquor bars and two licensed package liquor stores in the 5600 block of Delmar, and, following protests from property owners in the neighborhood, held up issuance of the license.

PAROLE ISSUED TO WOMAN WHO KILLED ST. LOUIS MAN

Lillian Johnson to Be Freed Friday After Serving Over Five Years of 10-Year Sentence.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 11.—Lillie Bowenkamp, of St. Louis, who has served nearly five years and three months of a 10-year sentence in the Missouri penitentiary for second degree murder, will be released from the prison May 17, at the expiration of seven-twelfths of her sentence plus allowances for good behavior and for time spent in jail awaiting trial.

A so-called merit parole, issued under the seven-twelfths of sentence system, was signed by Gov. Park yesterday. The State Penal Board recommended extra allowances of 203 days, including 90 days for good behavior and 113 days spent in jail. The prisoner is about 49 years old.

Lillian Bowenkamp, tried and convicted under the name of Lillian Johnson, killed Frank H. Bowenkamp, a stonecutter with whom she lived at 1641 Sublette avenue, with a paring knife during a quarrel Oct. 2, 1929. The pair quarreled frequently, and police reported making 30 to 40 visits to the cottage to quell disturbances. The defendant pleaded self-defense, testifying before a jury that Bowenkamp had raised a chair to strike her. She stabbed him in the chest.

In 1910 she shot and killed Charles Martin, a man whom her late husband, Fred J. Wellbrook, brought to their home. She claimed that Martin had been drinking and tried to attack her. A Coroner's jury verdict exonerated her.

POSTAL WORKER WHO ADMITS THEFT WAS PAROLED CONVICT

Hunter (Mo.) Man Given Job There After Release From Algoa Reformatory.

By the Associated Press.

HUNTER, Mo., May 11.—Robert H. Bondurant, 20 years old, former postal worker, arrested Friday at Memphis, Tenn., and who admitted taking approximately $10,000 from the post office here April 30, had planned to marry a young woman at Memphis and sail for South America, he was quoted by A. A. Mehl, postal inspector, as saying. Bondurant was in company of the woman when arrested, and was in the midst of a spending spree which had taken him to Tampa and Miami, Fla., then back to Memphis to keep his engagement with her.

Inspectors found Bondurant had slashed the money pouches then hid the bags in a twine bin at the Hunter Post Office, and threw the registry forms in a waste basket. According to inspectors, Bondurant had spent approximately $1000.

It was learned he was under parole from the Algoa Reformatory at Jefferson City, at the time of his employment at the post office here. The postmaster had known him since a boy, Mehl said, and was interested enough in his welfare to give him a chance. He was sentenced for burglary and larceny and was paroled by Gov. Park June 1 last year. Only $4200 of the missing currency has been recovered.

DEATH SENTENCES IN GREECE AGAINST 31 OFFICERS IN EXILE

Life Terms for Two Who Faced Court-martial; 155 Others Sent to Prison.

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, May 11.—Thirty-three naval officers, only two of whom are now in the country, were sentenced to death today for participation in the recent revolt.

After the verdict by a Navy court-martial, President Alexander Zaimis commuted to life imprisonment the sentences of the two who appeared for trial. The court sentenced 155 others to terms ranging from two years to life.

Efforts have been made by loyalist authorities to court-martial 20 Orthodox priests and bishops who allegedly participated in the uprising, but the Holy Snyod intervened and declared it would try the accused prelates.

The Government intends to eject even Americans and other foreign company employes who were sympathetic toward Venizelos, the revolutionary leader. Rigid censorship still exists.

Recently revised Missouri beer regulations do not prohibit sale of 3.2 beer on Sunday, but it was pointed out in legislative debate that an old blue law, more than a century old can be invoked to prevent Sunday sale if officials desire.

DISSENT ON GARGOTTA CONVICTION REVERSAL

Judge Woodrough Cites "Reasonable Inference" Against Kansas City Defendant.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 11. — A "reasonable inference" that a person having pistols stamped "Property of the United States of America" in his possession had knowledge that such weapons had been stolen, may be drawn by the fact of possession, Judge J. W. Woodrough declared in his dissenting opinion filed in connection with the reversal of the conviction of Charles Gargotta of Kansas City on a charge of illegal possession of Government property. The opinions were filed here yesterday.

Judge Woodrough said, "Light is thrown on the question by occurrences too widely published and generally known to be ignored by the courts, namely, the frequent robberies of armories and arsenals in late years and the arming of public enemies with Government weapons so obtained." He pointed out that "ordinance property belonging to the Government had never been offered for sale to the public," and asserted that Gargotta's having in his possession pistols "belonging to the United States stolen not an hour's ride distant from the place of his arrest," was basis for the "reasonable inference."

Majority Opinion.

The majority opinion, written by Judge James A. Donohoe, a District Judge of Omaha, sitting with the Federal Court, and concurred in by Judge Charles B. Faris, held that Gargotta's knowledge the pistol taken from him were Government property and had been stolen had not been proved. It declared there was no evidence to show, either direct or circumstantial, the circumstances surrounding the acquisition of the pistol by Gargotta.

Woodrough admitted "perhaps it was not impossible for him to haxe come into possession of the weapons without anything to put him on notice that they were the property of the United States and stolen."

"It may not be impossible that he found them on the street in the dark, just before his arrest; or had them handed to him there; or had not had a chance to read the inscriptions on them, such speculative possibilities can always be conjured up because we have no absolute demonstration of knowledge or intent.

"It ought not to be assumed that a man who is found with two such weapons so stolen from a neary armory has never read or heard about it like his neighbors," the Judge continued.

"An individual who is found with two of them (Government weapons) on his person, clearly marked and proved to have been stolen, and who has falsely denied his possession is more than a suspect. There is proof against him which sustains belief and calls for explanation if he is innocent. . . . If he came by the guns in some way that he did not know they were stolen property, the fact could doubtless be shown; but I think in the absence of any such showing the duty of the court was to let the jury decide."

On conviction in United States District Court in Kansas City, Gargotta was sentenced to three years in prison and fined $5000.

He was arrested by Sheriff Thomas Bash of Jackson County, Mo., at the scene of the murder of Ferris Anthon, a liquor runner, Bash disarmed him and tagged for evidence a pistol taken from him. Gargotta was acquitted of murder in state court, but Federal agents arrested him on a charge of possessing the pistol, which had been stolen from the National Guard Armory at Kansas City.

In this connection Leonard L. Claiborne, a Kansas City detective at the time, was convicted of perjury. He testified before the Federal grand jury that the army pistol in the case was the one taken from Gargotta. At Gargotta's trial he changed his story and swore the pistol was not the one Gargotta had, but a second one found on the ground near the scene of the Anthon murder. Claiborne's conviction for perjury and sentence to four years in prison were confirmed by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here a week ago.

COMPROMISE REFUSED IN ALIENATION SUIT

J. F. Cannon Rejects Offer of Judge Who Set Aside $125,000 Award Against Him.

By the Associated Press.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., May 11.—Joseph F. Cannon, Concord millionaire, refused the court's proposal to sign a compromise settlement of a "reasonable" amount, after Judge W. F. Harding set aside the $125,000 verdict for alienation of affections awarded by a jury to F. Brandon Smith Jr., Cannon's former son-in-law. Judge Harding declared the award was excessive and unreasonable and ordered a retrial of the case. Smith sued for $250,000, charging that Cannon, fearing his daughter would assert her claim to custody of her little daughter by a previous marriage to the late Smith Reynolds of Winston-Salem, heir to a tobacco fortune, forced her to obtain a divorce through threats to disown her and by other devices The jury awarded him $75,000 actual and $50,000 punitive damages.

Just when the new trial will be held is indefinite. Under ordinary court procedure, it will not be for several months.

Judge Harding said he did not question the honesty of the jury's intentions, adding:

"Frankly, gentlemen, when I heard the jury's answer to the issues involved I was knocked off my feet. A Judge must maintain his own conscience and sense of judgment. The theories which must have been involved as the jury reached this verdict would never be allowed to pass by the Supreme Court."

He did not refer to the contention of L. T. Hartsell, of Cannon's counsel, that in losing Anne Cannon Reynolds Smith, the 29-year-old Charlotte real estate man had been deprived of a liability rather than an asset. Smith had testified that his wife's drinking interfered with his work, and that his debts were many times multiplied during the 20 months' of their marriage, despite Cannon's contributions of more than $26,000 to their support and her own income of $600 a month.

Fined $100 as Careless Driver.

John Schmidt, a laborer residing at Baden Station, was fined $100 and costs for careless driving by Police Judge Vest yesterday. Testimony was that Schmidt, southbound in Kingshighway boulevard March 25, drove into the rear of an automobile at Raymond avenue and then crashed into a tree 40 feet away. The other driver, Eugene Koester, 5031 Raymond avenue, and Schmidt had filed cross charges of careless driving.

Meramec Canoe Club Carnival To Be June 1

CARNIVAL time is coming around again at the Meramec Canoe Club. Giddy red and blue handbills circulated last week among its members and received also by members of the Bachelor Club and the Watch and Ward announce that the second annual spree will be held Saturday, June 1, from 4 p. m. to 4 a. m. Concessionaires will set up booths for play at "African Dodgers, Spindle Wheel, Japanese Roll Board, and Spill the Milk Bottle;" bartenders will tend bar in the open air, and the "Eight Eight Balls" will play for dancing under the stars.

Field days, regattas and carnivals have been part and parcel of the Canoe Club since its founding at old Meramec Highlands in 1903. The following year it took up headquarters in the rambling farm house on the Timerman estate near Valley Park, which it occupied until 1920 when the clubhouse was destroyed by fire. The new clubhouse, surrounded by sleeping pavilions for hot summer nights, is set in a grove of 75 acres about a half mile from the river. A steward and housekeeper tend the premises and prepare food and drink for stag parties during the week and for the Sunday evening suppers which have become part of the tradition of the Canoe Club.

Two or three times a year the clubhouse is the scene of costume dances and frolics climaxed by the June carnival, which younger members revived last year. There was

Junior League Gives Cabaret After Follies

Mrs. Garneau Weld Official Hostess for Party at Jefferson Hotel—James H. Platt Master of Ceremonies.

JUNIOR LEAGUERS, their Follies production over, romped and played like boys and girls just released from the tyranny of routine, at a cabaret they gave at Hotel Jefferson last night after the final performance. And patient husbands, whose households have run themselves during rehearsal weeks, fiances whose future brides have been more concerned with the costumes of Terpsichorines and Minnies of Moocher fame than hope chests and wedding arrangements, and just beaux whose only opportunities to see their girls of the moment were during hurried trips to the Municipal Auditorium, joined in the frolic.

Several hundred members of the organization, admiring families and solicitous friends crowded the Gold Room, given over completely to the party, and overflowed into the Crystal Room to watch fresh laurels heaped on star performers, many of whom had gained their first only a few hours before.

Bubble Bursting, the title given to the entertainment by Mrs. Garneau Weld, official hostess for the evening, was emphasized in green

House Parties at Princeton

PRINCETON, N. J., May 11.

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY'S 18 upper-class eating clubs or fraternities are entertaining more than 600 young woman guests at their annual spring house parties this week end, the major social event of the college year. Formal dances were held at each of the club houses last night, and informal ones were given tonight.

The following young women from St. Louis are being entertained: Miss Virginia Elmer, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Warren P. Elmer, a student at Vassar College; Miss Betty Caulk, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John R. Caulk, who came from St. Louis with Miss Gladys McRee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McRee, and Miss Virginia Moser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Moser, who is attending Wells College.

A highlight of the occasion is the presentation of "Holiday" by the combined casts of the Sarah Lawrence College dramatic group, the Princeton Theatre Intime and the Princeton Triangle Club. The Philip Barry comedy was presented in McCarter Theater last night and was repeated tonight.

Social and sports events in the afternoons have supplemented the evening festivities. Yesterday the Princeton Inn gave a tea dance. The first annual heptagonal track and field games between representatives of seven Eastern colleges was held at Princeton Palmer Stadium. On Lake Carnegie crew enthusiasts saw the Columbia, Pennsylvania and Princeton eights in a regatta. Earlier in the afternoon the Princeton polo four met Yale.

The closing event of the week-end will be the annual Milbank Memorial recital tomorrow at 4:30 p. m., given by the university choir, in conjunction with the Scuola Cantorum of New York. Mme. Anna Leskaya, Russian mezzo-soprano, will be the soloist.

COL. AND MRS. WALTER F. SIEGMUND, 225 West Swon avenue, Webster Groves, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Catherine Elizabeth Siegmund, and William Henry Dittmann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Dittmann, 547 Sherwood drive. The announcement was made Friday night at a cocktail party at the Siegmund home preceding a dance given by Kappa Kappa Gamma, of which Miss Siegmund is a member, at the Algonquin Country Club. The guests were about 35 members of the sorority and their escorts. Refreshments were served from a buffet

Little Helpers' Benefit Party

FOR the first time in three years a benefit card party will be given for the Little Helpers of the Holy Souls. The party will be held at the convent, 4012 Washington boulevard, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Their convent offers hospitality to working girls who are also taught sewing and French.

Horse Show Opens Thursday

THE city and county bridle paths, jumping courses and the headquarters of the Horse Show Association at Hotel Chase, have been the scenes of much activity in the last week in preparation for the Spring Horse Show which will open Thursday night at the Missouri Stables Arena to continue through Saturday, including a Saturday matinee. The performances will be preceded and followed by a series of social events to include teas, dinners and suppers.

The show, originally planned as a small affair to keep alive the interest in St. Louis horse shows, has reached proportions exceeding all records for spring shows in the past.

The feminine riders, who have always evidenced keen interest in the social affairs given during the show and to some extent in the competition in the ring, will be almost as well represented in the various classes this year as the men. Riding against expert gentleman and professional riders in the three-gaited stake will be Miss Betty Butler. Miss Norma Engle will ride in the five-gaited stake event. Entered in the hunter and jumper stake events are Miss Elsie Rauh, Miss Jacqueline Busch Jones, Miss Gladys G. Grey, Miss Jane Johnson and Mrs. Elmer Kerckhoff. In the harness classes Miss Jones, Miss Charlotte Rosse and Mrs. Percy J.

and white balloons hung in cloisters from balcony rails. Palms and ferns converted the stage into a miniature garden.

Under the direction of James H. Platt, no novice in the role of master of ceremonies, the floor show moved rapidly. Veteran troupers of other Follies contributed reminiscent skits from the production of 1922 and principals repeated bits from the revival. In the opening number, called Time Marches On, Miss Jane Johnson, who was carried off stage, a tiny baby, by Marion Niedringhaus, in the last show, listened again while he sang the same lullaby — "Dear Little Baby." The melody is by George O'Neil, who wrote much of the Follies music of other days. Mrs. George R. Wendling, whose "Wondering" was a song hit of the last show, sang a mother and daughter number with Miss Peggy, a star of the present.

Giving thanks for "old habits and new Follies," Mr. Platt introduced Miss Grace Switzer, who repeated the choruses of the Peacock song and her solo with the Ladies of Sophistication. Mrs. Donald Bixby, premiere danseuse of the show, executed a bubble dance to a balloon with the grace of her debutante days.

By special request 12 couples danced during the evening in a contest judged by William R. Holbrook, Follies producer; Mrs. Donaldson L. Lambert, league president, and Mrs. O. P. J. Falk, general chairman, until eliminated, to a group of three, from which the winning couple was chosen by popular applause.

Later Mr. Holbrook demonstrated, with a partner chosen from the audience, how dancing should be done, and the show concluded with the Dance of Fame, a surprise number dedicated to Mrs. Lambert and her committee chairmen. As the name of each was announced by Mrs. Weld, the young women whose efforts were largely responsible for the success of the production, walked into the spotlight, were decorated with leis of flowers and danced to their tables by ushers, whose duties heretofore had been nominal.

Principals in this number and their dancing partners were Mrs. Lambert and Virgil Lewis; Mrs. Falk and Whitelaw Terry; Miss Christine Jones and Carl J. Koehler; Mrs. John Kennard Wallace and David R. Calhoun; Miss Roccena Baldwin and Barney Maloy; Mrs. Thomas Wright Pettus and Clinton L. Whittemore Jr.; Mrs. Henry T. Brinckwirth and Thomas K. Niedringhaus Jr.; Mrs. Ralph Bixby and Louis A. Meramec Canoe Club Carnival to Be June 1 a time when the Canoe Club staged frequent tennis tournaments and water races, giving stiff competition to the Saddle and Paddle Club, its chief rival on the Meramec. Nautical enthusiasts still take annual floats on barges down Missouri's streams and still meet fellow-members on the tennis courts and baseball field with which their club is provided.

The original roster of the club listed about 100 members, among them David Fentress, Henry Ferriss, Mark Anderson, Archie Douglas, Fred J. Cornwell, Robert W. Knapp and Chester Burg, who remained a member until just a year ago. Many of the older clubmen have been retained as honorary members, but the greater number have given way to a second generation, which took over the club after its membership dwindled a decade ago to only six.

Now there are 35 of them, headed by John M. Hall as president. The other officers are J. Boyd Ware, vice-president; C. Todd Clark, secretary and assistant treasurer, and Dr. Henry A. Carleton, a member of 20 years' standing, treasurer.

T. C. Noel and George L. Dyer are assisting them in arrangements for the carnival next month.

THIS NEW YORK

By LUCIUS BEEBE

SOME of the glamour of rail travel is being restored on the great lines radiating from Manhattan. The New York Central's celebrated Twentieth Century Limited has cut its Chicago run to 17 hours, and when the Pennsylvania reduced the schedule of its Broadway Limited to meet competition, the two trains raced in, neck and neck, over the Ohio fields and uplands, the Century winning in a breathless burst of speed from Albany by a seven-minute margin. The Baltimore & Ohio, known as a "gentleman's railroad," furnishes what are reported to be the finest luxury appointments in the way of club and restaurant cars of any line in the world, and the New Haven supplements the services of its crack Down East clippers with a new stream-line cannonball out of Providence which thinks nothing at all of streaking across the New England countryside in a blaze of blue and silver at 110 miles an hour.

There is a wealth of romance in train travel, and if the roads would only exploit the personalities of picturesque engineers and revive the old-time traditions of steam and steel, they might recapture the public imagination. Most folk are heartily bored by corporations run with the dreary efficiency of a trust company, and a few old-time whiskered conductors and a pilot-to-pilot race now and then would do the railroads more good than all the sleek executives and skyscraper offices in the world. Crack trains once had color and individuality, and there is no reason why they shouldn't again.

The whole town, and greatly to its decorative credit, has gone window-box conscious, and all the better avenues are sprouting flower beds in the pleasant manner of Continental cities. The biggest and best display, naturally, has been at the Radio City plaza, where enormous troughs of blossoms have been laid out and entire cherry trees set up in tubs. The Waldorf boasts a handsome show of blue and white hyacinths over its main Park Avenue entrance, and Fifth Avenue is brighter for the Plaza, the Gotham and, of course, the Finley J. Sheperd's annual displays. Fifty-eighth street, between Fifth and Madison, is practically a garden row, what with Reuben's, the Savoy Plaza and the Madison, and in a few days now the green box hedges of the sidewalk cafes will be all over the place.

More than any other practitioner of the calling of professional hostess, Marion Cooley has evolved a technique that has made her the most sought-after personality in the cafe society scene. Rotund, gay and chatty, she has more pulling power than a whole harnessed team of "society" entertainers with the crowd of semi-professional, celebrity-minded people who make not only the best resort patrons, but also the best news and photographic copy. At the moment she is at Sherman Billingsly's new Stork Club and at her cocktail parties and Thursday evening levees there are so many folk to focus on that Bill Plankington, the smoothest of white-tie lens men, has to come with three bulb bearers to ply his trade. The regulars like the place because of the extra dressiness and spectacular qualities of the people, the food and the whole scene. The brandy glasses are big as pails; the simplest dish is served with elegance quite devoid of pretentiousness, and a high percentage of the customers are actual somebodies, which serves as an inducement to the solvent peasantry from out of town. Between Mr. Billingsly and La Belle Marion, gin and vermouth vespers are a ritual deserving the attention of the knowing, the witty and the ornamental.

Harry Ellerbe writes from Hollywood that the Universal offices "are entirely trimmed in unborn baby Laemmle." . . . Although the great European sailing season is at hand, the bloom seems to have gone from midnight departures, once so dressy and alcoholic. . . . Repeal did the institution in. . . . Henry C. Potter, producer of "Kind Lady" has a new cabin plane for commuting with Southampton, and terrifies passengers with adroit stunting. . . . Billy Rose is naming the monkeys in his new circus after his friends. . . . The new busses have actually made it possible to sleep along Madison avenue. . . . Recommended to gourmets: The fromage de maison at Jean's in Sixtieth street next the Metropolitan Club. . . . It's a combination of Roquefort cream cheese, Worcestershire, thick cream and paprika, and worth your trouble. . . . The Pulitzer Memorial in the Plaza, as seen from the air looks finished. . . . Why in heaven's name don't they take down the dreadful fence around it? Lots of clubs and restaurants, particularly at banquets, parade waiters with dummy cocktails on their trays, just to suggest drinking and stimulate trade for the bar. Andre Simon is back in town and the pious cause of good living is once more on the mend. The nearest thing to an old-time frontier dance hall for smoke and hurrah and gals in sequins and picture hats is Saturday night up at Ben Marden's Riviera. Don't miss the fun. . . . Lloyd Smith keeps a Kreuger & Toll stock certificate pasted over his desk, just to remind him of things when he is about to make an investment. . . . Tom Shevlin, never seen in anything but dinner clothes, is suspected of possessing no street suits. . . . Such a sun dodger.

Jubilee Parties Held in London

LONDON, May 11.

KING GEORGE AND QUEEN MARY survived the opening Silver Jubilee festivities better than many of their socially prominent subjects, most of whom went to resorts this week-end for a rest. The royal family remained in London.

Among functions in connection with the Jubilee celebration was the English-Speaking Union's ball and Lady Nancy Astor's reception and dinner party, at which the guests of honor were the Duke and Duchess of Kent. The party coincided with the Empire ball at Grosvenor House, and most of Lady Astor's guests proceeded there from the Astor London residence.

Another highlight not generally reported was that the Prince of Wales, at his reception in St. James's Palace, selected Mrs. Robert W. Bingham, wife of the American Ambassador, as his partner when they partook of refreshments soon after he had welcomed his 800 guests.

Among the many Americans who entertained during last week's festivities was R. L. Parish of Chicago, among whose guests were Lord and Lady North.

Recent arrivals from the United States include Mr. and Mrs. Francis James Ridsdale. Mrs. Ridsdale is the former Anita Morrison Phelan of New York. She was married recently in New York.

Mrs. E. F. Oehler, 5386 Pershing avenue, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Wanita Oehler, and John D. Lischer, son of Mrs. Daisy Lischer, 4615 Maryland avenue. The ceremony took place Friday in the rectory of the St. Louis Cathedral, the Rev. Nicholas Brinkman officiating. Mrs. Mary Quan attended the bride, and Dr. Jack Collins was best man. Because of the death of the bride's father, the late Dr. E. F. Oehler, a few months ago, arrangements were simple, and there was no reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Lischer will live with his mother at the Maryland avenue address.

Wisa-Krato

The marriage of Miss Margaret Krato, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Krato Jr., 2115 Obear avenue, and Edward R. Wisa took place last night at 7 o'clock at St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, with the Rev. Otto Rothe officiating. Mr. Wisa and his bride will make their home at 2055A East Prairie avenue.

Casey-Burnham

Mr. and Mrs. Lew Burnham, 6250 Enright avenue, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Vergene Burnham, to William J. Casey, son of Mrs. John Casey, 5222 Minerva avenue, which took place Tuesday at 8 o'clock in the morning. The ceremony was performed at St. Mark's Catholic Church, with Father Daley officiating.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Robert J. Ready, as matron of honor. Miss June Geary and Miss Margie Sailsbery were bridesmaids. Leo Monckton served as best man and Robert J. Ready and John Ready, ushers.

The bride was dressed in ivory satin made on princesse lines, and wore a veil of ivory tulle. She carried lilies of the valley and white roses. The matron of honor wore orchid transparent velvet, with a hat of deep purple tulle, banded in orchid velvet. She carried purple violets and yellow roses. The bridesmaids were dressed in royal purple transparent velvet, with orchid tulle hats banded with deep purple. They carried orchid sweet peas and talisman roses.

Mrs. Casey is a graduate of Rosati Kain, and Mr. Casey of Washington University.

Mr. and Mrs. Casey left immediately after the wedding breakfast, which was held at Hotel Chase, for New Orleans by motor. On their return to St. Louis they will live at 7533 Buckingham drive.

TRAVEL TO FAR EAST IS GREATEST IN YEARS

Scenery in China, Japan, India and Bali at Its Best in Summer.

It is only a short time ago that favorabde rate of exchainge made Americans travel-minded. Now, having acquired the travel habit, they are turning their attention to many foreign ports. Transportation companies say travel to the Far East is the greatest in many years. China, Japan, India, Bali are only a leisurely voyage's distance across the Pacific. At no season of the year is the Orient with its flowering gardens, its green mountains and lily ponds and lakes more beautiful than in the summer.

Japan is a land of extreme contrasts, old temples and shrines side by side with architectural examples of Western civilization. There is a new department store in Tokio where the shoes come off at the door, Japanese fashion, and yet one may ride up to the second floor on an escalator. Japanese coolies in faded cotton gowns with the name of their family stamped on the back rub elbows with the young Japanese who wears a derby and has his trousers creased in sleek Western fashion.

Holy Place Since 766.

Nikko, only four and one-half hours distant from modern Tokio, is thousands of years removed from this busy, teeming center. It has been a holy place since 766, a place of beautiful temples and tombs. There are stone Buddhas, moss-covered with age, the sacred Red Bridge over a roaring mountain torrent, the Great Bell held by a gilded dragon and sounded with a beam by an old priest whose sole duty is to strike the hours; the Abbot's Garden, and the Sunrise-till-Dark gate which one may study for hours; a bewildering series of buildings and stairways, all leading to a single tomb.

Japan, because of its romantic past and important future, is a country that the traveler enjoys visiting. He leaves it with memories and regrets.

With history extending 5000 years, China is truly the "Old World" of the Far East. The Great Wall is known to every grammar school child. Peiping, once the capital of the "Celestial Empire," still possesses countless treasures of art and architecture. Set against this quiet and dignity of ages is the busy life of present day China as seen in the great cities of Shanghai, Hongkong and Canton. In Shanghai the policemen are Sikhs, all well over six feet tall.

Hongkong Like Bee Hive.

Hongkong with its rows of buildings clinging to the sides of huge cliffs resembles an enormous bee hive. This British-owned island offers many new attractions to the summer visitor. Through a maze of streets lined with beautiful shops one may take a trolley ride to the European Riviera of Repulse Bay, under the shadow of the island's mountain peaks. Huge pavilions are being constructed, a new polo field, golf courses and cricket grounds are being laid out. Hongkong is eminently a city of sports shown in a setting of amazing contrasts. Many roofed temples with colors mellowed by time stand between the more sober Christian churches. From a new ferry station one may embark to the rising Monte Carlo of the East, Macao.

On the coast from Hongkong to Shanghai a new tourist mecca will be opened shortly. From the center of Swatow where 40,000 of its residents live on harbor boats under canopies of colored bamboo shelters, a new motor road runs to the "Embroidery Cities" of ancient needlecraft. Amoy, where the Tiger Guards of the once Celestial Empire still wear their iron masks and aprons, will be the scene of the July Dragon Boat Festival. More than 17,000 native decorated crafts will patrol the harbor to celebrate the Great Chu Yuan.

Special Dragon Festival.

Beginning July 10 at the famous Island of Pagoda Anchorage, which once held the many-sailed clipper ships that crossed the China Sea with Foochow tea for New England ports, a special Dragon Festival will be held for 10 days. Among the summer excursions from Hongkong will be the ride over the new motor highway from Foochow to the ancient Kushan Monastery. Wusih, the Venice and Little Manchester of China, will present historic summer fairs which promise to be among the attractions of coastal itineraries.

EARLY AMERICAN GLASS FROM MOSS COLLECTION EXHIBITED

Complete Sets of Camphor Type Predominate; Rare Ones Commemorate Westward Movement.

A portion of the early American glass collection belonging to Mrs. John Trigg Moss and said to be one of the finest of its kind in the country has been on exhibit at Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney during the past week as part of an early American exhibit.

While a great many types of early American glass are represented in the collection, complete sets of camphor glass, opalescent and canary hobnail and milk glass predominate. The rarest specimens of the camphor glass type are compotes, goblets, pitchers and covered dishes of the famous Westward Ho pattern which commemorated the westward movement. Indians, buffalo, mountains and antelope in the decorative scheme make this pattern distinctive.

The collection also includes Staffordshire nesting hens that range from large and lifelike replicas to very small pieces, and Staffordshire dogs.

AMERICANS IN CHINA SEEK DROUTH-RESISTING PLANTS

Expedition to Collect Also Medicinal Herbs Used by Mongols in Treating Cancer.

By the Associated Press.

KALGAN, China, May 11.—An expedition, which has left this frontier city for Mongolia, led by Prof. Nicholas Roerich, founder of the Roerich Museum of New York, with the backing of the United States Department of Agriculture, will search the Gobi Desert, north of here for drouth-resisting grasses which may be adaptable to the arid regions of the American West.

Forage plants which survive in that region could, it is thought be grown successfully in many areas of the United States which are barren because of lack of rainfall.

Medicinal herbs used by the Mongols will be collected by Dr. George Roerich, who is accompanying his father, as second in command of the expedition. A special study will be made of certain herbs which are used by the Mongols in the treatment of cancer.

The explorers will spend the entire summer in the field, returning to the United States next autumn.

1400 SCOUTS ENROLL IN SPRING CAMPARALL

Combination Rally and Encampment to Be Held in Forest Park, May 24-26.

More than 1400 scouts and cubs have registered for participation in the Spring Camparall, a combination rally and group encampment, which will be held on the Old Aviation Field in Forest Park, May 24-26.

The scout patrol, composed of eight boys of the same troop, is the unit on which plans for the Camparall are based. Each of the 174 patrols entered has been informed of ground rules, and the list of events, performance of which will be required as a part of efficiency testing.

All activities will be carefully judged and scored by 200 observers, selected from the adult leaders of the council. They will meet at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Michael School, 4568 Forest Park boulevard, for complete instructions. The chief observers are: A. H. Baum, South District; Elmer L. Lenz, West District; Harry C. Noe, North District; L. D. Leverington, Central District; H. A. Brereton, Suburban District.

Many of the competing patrols have planned over-night hikes for this week-end and next for final preparation in Camparall tests. Camping, cooking, first aid, mapping, signaling, making fire by friction and by flint and steel, judging and pioneering are among the activities they will be expected to perform.

Cubs will contribute a dog show and a kite flying exhibition to the Camparall.

The executive board of the St. Louis Council has made public a recent ruling which emphasizes portions of the scout constitution forbidding scouts, troops, or leaders to engage in selling tickets, tags, or advertising, without the board's authorization.

Sea Scout Ship "Rainbow," of Lafayette Park Presbyterian Church, entertained guests Thursday night with a Mother's day social program.

Troop 166 and Cub Pack 49, George Dewey School, joined with the Girl Scout troop and the Safety Patrol of the school Friday night in an exhibition before a Parent-Teacher Association meeting.

A new cub pack of 31 members was organized Thursday at the Jackson Park School, University City, with F. A. Bertram as cub master. The committee includes A. P. Thursby, M. A. Drury, and W. L. Reiman. Another pack will be formed this week at the De Mun School, Clayton.

GIRL SCOUTS.

A course in camping and hiking, required of all leaders who take groups on over-night hikes, opened Wednesday, and will continue once each week until June 2, from 4:30 to 8:30 p. m., on Wednesdays. There will be instruction in all forms of hikes, fire-making, trail cooking, shelter, woodcraft, and nature lore.

Miss Eleanor Stevens, 7439 Wellington avenue, is chairman of the training committee. Miss Cecelia Orr, captain of Troop 3, Normandy, and Miss Emelie James, captain of Troop 102, are instructors for the course.

The West District committee of the Girl Scout Council will entertain with a garden tea Saturday, from 2 to 5 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Frank M. Mayfield, McKnight and Dromara roads. Objects made for garden use by Girl Scouts will be on display.

CLAIMANTS RECOVER DEPOSITS SOUGHT BEFORE BANK CLOSED

A. H. Goodwin and Son, Howard F., Demanded Payment Before Run Started in Depository.

The claims of A. H. Goodwin and his son, Howard F. Goodwin, 4543 Harris avenue, for a total of $4940 against the closed Lowell Bank, 3948 West Florissant avenue, were put in the preferred class by Circuit Judge Ryan yesterday. The father's claim was for $4379 and the son's for $561, both savings accounts, which the Court held were special deposits.

Testimony showed that early in Jan. 13, 1933, the Goodwins went to the bank and attempted to withdraw their accounts, each signing a withdrawal ticket. They were told by the teller to wait until the money truck arrived, and while waiting an officer of the bank said the bank was sound and that the money truck would soon be there with $90,000 and they could have their savings.

However, when the truck arrived and the two Goodwins again presented their pass books and withdrawal tickets the teller, who had started to count out the cash, refused to give it to them, acting on instructions from an officer that no more money on savings accounts would be paid out until 30 days' notice had been given. A run on the bank began that day and it was taken over by the State Finance Commissioner two days later.

In his opinion, Judge Ryan found it had not been the bank's custom to enforce the 30-day notice requirement and at the time there was sufficient cash in the vaults to have made the payment. The amount of cash on hand was $27,287. The awards represent the balance remaining of claimants' deposits. They previous received a 30 per cent distribution.

WIDOW AND TWO SONS TOLD TO GIVE UP DEEDS OF TRUST

$40,000 in Securities Must Be Inventoried With Rest of C. A. Schwind's Estate.

A decision was returned yesterday by Probate Judge Arnold directing the widow and two sons of Charles A. Schwind, who resided at 3949 South Grand boulevard, to surrender deeds of trust totaling $40,100 to Anthony A. O'Hallaron, temporary administrator of Mr. Schwind's estate.

O'Hallaron said the deeds should be inventoried along with other property. The widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Schwind, and her sons, Ferdinand and Eugene Schwind, said that the securities had been given to her by her husband shortly before his death on March 10. In his will he left his entire estate to his widow, appointing their son, Ferdinand, as executor. He filed an inventory showing assets of $2015, but the deeds of trust were not listed.

A daughter, Mrs. Edna Koch, has filed a will contest, asserting her father was not mentally competent to make a legal will when it was drawn last Oct. 19. She further charged it was drawn for the benefit of her brothers and their wives, who would eventually control the property. O'Hallaron is acting as administrator of the estate pending termination of the will contest.

$10,000 AWARDED FOR INJURY

Woman Alleged Missing Tile Caused Fall in Hotel Lobby.

Mrs. Grace Parker of the De Soto Hotel obtained a jury verdict in Circuit Judge Sartorius' court yesterday for $10,000 against the Eleventh Street Hotel Co., which formerly operated the hotel under the name of Missouri Hotel.

The verdict was based on a claim for damages for injuries to Mrs. Parker's spine May 11, 1934, when she fell in the lobby of the hotel. She alleged that the accident was due to a missing tile.

POSTMEN AND BANKERS IN SAME ORCHESTRA

Chicago Amateurs, Representing Cross-Section of City, Close 14th Season.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 11.—The tailor laid aside his piccolo and the postman his flute as the Chicago business men's orchestra ended its fourteenth concert season. In front of the footlights in Orchestra Hall, as the orchestra moved through Tschaikowsky's Symphony No. 6, "Pathetique" B minor, Opus 74, in its finale this week was a cross section of society.

Hundreds came to hear husbands, fathers, brothers and sweethearts bring to a close what is regarded as the best year in the orchestra's history.

The orchestra numbers 115 active members who can play something or other and do it for no remuneration. As a matter of fact, they pay $10 a year for the chance.

"We're All Amateurs."

"We're all amateurs," said Avern B. Scolnik, president, who spends his days pleading law cases and his nights fiddling. "This has been the best year in our history."

Since the late George Lytton, State street merchant, organized the orchestra 14 years ago, it has flourished until it has a waiting list of 150, and an associate membership of equal number.

George Dasch, conductor of the Little Symphony Orchestra of Chicago is its conductor. Rehearsals are held once a week from September to May.

Almost every field of endeavor in the city is represented. One French horn player is C. H. Babbe, sign painter. Sitting nearby, sawing away on a viola, is George R. Jones, vice-president and treasurer of a public service company.

Bankers Favor Violin.

The violin section leans heavily on the banking profession. It includes, among others, Frank R. Leinhard, who is head of the United States Government bond department at the Federal Reserve Bank.

From Northwestern University comes Dr. Edward Blackwell, professor of operating dentistry, to play the trombone.

Engineers can get in too. There's Kay Lorentzen, a traffic engineer, who plays the viola. Playing first violin and concert master is Sidney V. James, a mechanical engineer.

Lawyers fit in everywhere. Some are violinists, others blow big horns. One, Malcolm Barton, is a flutist.

Mailman and Tailor.

There are a mailman and a tailor in the ranks. The former is George Arvidson, who has been tooting his flute for the orchestra since 1921. The shirt maker—and piccolo player—is Albert Michaelis.

There's a man for every job except one—the harp.

"We used to have a man harpist," said Scolnik, "but he moved away and we had to get a woman."

MELLON CHURCH DEDICATED

Five Generations Worshiped at Site of $4,000,000 Structure.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, May 11. — The new $4,000,000 East Liberty Presbyterian Church will be dedicated on Mother's day as a memorial to two mothers and in fulfillment of a plan of the late Richard B. Mellon.

The structure, with a 300-foot spire, rises on the site where five generations of Mellons have worshiped since the first chuch was organized in 1819, the gift of Mellon forebears. The $4,000,000 donation was extended by the late brother of Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, and his wife, Jennie King Mellon, as a memorial to their mothers, Sarah Jane Negley Mellon and Sarah Cordelia Smith King.

It is built in the ancient Gothic tradition but embodies a modern interpretation. The edifice covers an entire block in the heart of Pittsburgh's East Liberty section.

CATHOLIC CHARITIES' 1934 COST $1,300,000

Archbishop Reports on Activities of 37 Organizations in St. Louis.

More than $1,300,000 was spent on Catholic charities here last year, according to the twenty-fourth annual report of Catholic Charities of St. Louis yesterday.

In reviewing the activities of the 37 organizations and institutions covered by the report, Archbishop Glennon said:

"While the Federal, State and local governments have supported millions of persons, at the same time our institutions and organizations have been able to provide for the needy who applied to us. We feel that the United Relief, Inc., has been a valuable force, not only in providing funds for its member agencies, but also in uniting the forces of our city in plans to study and meet the need. I hope United Relief will continue to function and that in unity we will be able to serve our less fortunate brethren."

Total cost of Catholic charities in St. Louis last year was placed at $1,330,616.55. A total of 119,288 individuals received free medical attention at hospitals and dispensaries. Eleven hospitals furnished 178,029 "free days" at a cost of $642,095.59.

Institutions and organizations aided 29,225 individuals, including 1928 dependent children and aged poor in permanent homes. The cost of maintaining 13 orphanages and homes was $387,768.41.

"The personal service, which the church has to offer, is well exemplified in the work of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul,'" the report stated. "Out of the depression there has developed a realization of the need for both the public and the private agency and the value of co-operative planning among organizations caring for the unemployed. The Society of St. Vincent de Paul adopted this policy when it became a member agency of the Citizens' Committee on Relief and Employment and in this way cared for large numbers of the unemployed and participated in the disbursing of public funds."

It was pointed out that Catholic hospitals, although experiencing decreased revenues from private patients, risked a financial deficit in the interest of medical science. Improvements noted included enlargement of the occupational theraphy department at Alexian Brothers' Hospital, installation of new X-ray and theraphy equipment at De Paul Hospital, additional outpatient clinics and a maternity unit at Desloge Hospital and introduction of a physiotheraphy department at St. Vincent's Sanitarium.

A golden jubilee pageant will be presented by the Catholic Charities at the Municipal Auditorium at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in honor of the golden jubilee year of Archbishop Glennon, and to demonstrate the type of work accomplished by Catholic charitable institutions. More than 300 children will participate.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY TO TAKE NO NEW CASES

First Time in 26 Years That Organization Has Found Such Action Necessary.

Decision of the St. Louis Children's Aid Society to accept care of no more children this year was announced yesterday by Herschel Alt, executive secretary of the society, following a meeting of the finance committee. This is the first time in 26 years such action has been necessary. It is estimated 350 children will be turned away.

Hilgard F. Tittman, chairman of the committee, said that the action was made necessary by drastic cuts in the appropriations by United Relief for this year.

By discharging five workers since Jan. 1, curtailing acceptance of new children and by returning children to homes where possible, the organization has reduced monthly expenditures from $10,500 to $8500 per month, Tittman said. He added, however, that if it were to continue spending at the present rate, it would still incur a deficit of approximately $10,000 for the remainder of the year. For this reason, he said, the decision has been made not to accept any new children and to furlough as many of the staff as possible during the summer months in the hope that by autumn expenses will be sufficiently reduced.

The major portion of the agency's funds come from the Community Fund and the United Relief Campaign. The total cost of maintaining a child in a boarding home, including board, medical care and supervisory services, is about $300 per year.

The agency will continue to support about 450 children now under its care, Alt said. It is the expectation of the society, he said, that as children now under care return to suitable homes or are placed in free homes, the cost of maintenance in boarding homes will be reduced gradually so that finally the expense will not exceed the funds available. It is hoped that this reduction can be accomplished in a period of from four to six months.

The Children's Aid Society is the largest child placing agency in St. Louis. Last year it assisted 1856 children. It serves children in their own homes, places children in boarding homes, and helps the unmarried mother in making plans for herself and her child.

DEPARTMENT STORE GAINS FOR QUARTER

Federal Reserve Board Says Increase Is Less Than Estimated Seasonal Amount.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 11. — The Federal Reserve Board's summary of business conditions showed that for April department stores sales were 12 per cent greater than for the same month last year. Based on reports from 513 stores in 238 cities, sales for the first four months of the year showed a gain of 3 per cent. Nevertheless, the gains as compared to those of a year ago, increased considerably less than the estimated seasonal amount.

The outstanding gain in the four-month period was in the San Francisco district with 8 per cent, and in the Richmond and Chicago Federal Reserve districts with 7 per cent.

For April, the gains in the San Francisco district amounted to 22 per cent over those of the same month last year. In the Richmond district the increase was 21 per cent and in the Philadelphia district 16 per cent.

The Federal Reserve Board's index, which makes allowance for differences in the number of business days, for usual seasonal movements and for changes in the date of Easter, was 74 in April, on the basis of the 1923-1925 average as 100, compared with 82 in March and 75 in February.

For April as compared with the same month a year ago, there was no change in the St. Louis Federal Reserve district while others showed gains as follows:

Boston 8 per cent, New York 6 per cent, Philadelphia 16, Cleveland 13, Richmond 21, Atlanta 12, Chicago 11, Minneapolis 11, Kansas City 5, Dallas 14, San Francisco 22.

"Handout," New Anonymous Book About Washington, Likely to Stir Up Propaganda Inquiry

Inaccuracies and Absurdities, However, Show Author Is Not So Well Acquainted With Political Scene as He Pretends.

By Raymond P. Brandt,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 11.

ANOTHER anonymous "shocker" book about political Washington is on sale at the book stalls and, despite glaring inaccuracies and unreasoning bias, it is likely to cause a Congressional investigation of the Government propaganda organization perfected by the Roosevelt Administration.

The title of the book is "Handout," and is taken from the reporter's term for any printed announcement intended for news publication. The author hides behind the pseudonym of "George Michael," and his thesis is that the Roosevelt administration has erected over all Washington news a positive propaganda system that includes newspaper, radio, motion picture and word-of-mouth news, and a censorship, operating negatively, that keeps the real political news of Washington from reaching American citizens. Many of the author's statements are so inaccurate as to be absurd and ludicrous. He represents that he attends the President's press conferences and has confidential informers in the departments and in Congress. If this is true he is a most inaccurate reporter. He has not even learned to spell names correctly, and only the devotee of detective stories could follow his deductions from farfetched clews.

Wins Political Notice.

But the book has already attracted a political following and Senator Dickinson (Rep.) of Iowa cited it in support of his resolution, introduced Tuesday, for an investigation by the Senate Appropriations Committee of the Government press services. It is probable that the resolution will receive a favorable report from the Appropriations Committee. Senator Glass (Dem.) of Virginia, chairman of the committee, has been a bitter critic of the news releases of the Government departments, and a Virginia publisher, John Stewart Bryan of the Richmond News-Leader, recently told a convention of publishers that the Government press services should be investigated. If Glass supports the Dickinson resolution, it probably will be approved by the Senate.

There isn't the slightest doubt that the Roosevelt administration greatly augmented the propaganda organization it found on taking over the Government in 1933. The Official Register of Employes shows it, and the swollen stream of mimeographed and printed sheets coming to the bureau offices proves it. Much of this material represents a misexpenditure of Government money and merely fills waste baskets; many press offices are overstaffed and some press agents are more zealous in protecting their superiors than they are in giving out the facts of their departments. But if there were no governmental press agents, the country would be deprived of much real news, and the most industrious and intelligent Washington correspondent imaginable could not ferret it out. If the "handouts" serve no other purpose, they show where there may be news. It is up to the reporters to determine whether they shall accept the departmental news releases without question. It is up to the good reporters to go behind them if necessary. They are windfalls to the lazy or pro-administration reporters. They are merely an incentive, a clew, to the skeptical writer.

Key Men and Staffs.

"Handout" declares that each department has its "key" man through whom all information concerning that department is issued to the press. "This key man," the book continues, "is generally a former Washington newspaper man who has been given a Government position carrying more salary than that which he was receiving from all his newspaper dues. In every instance he is surrounded with a corps of newspaper people, all 'drafted' through the high-salary method from their newspaper posts."

This is not so. Many departmental heads may wish to have all the news of their departments passed on by their press agents, but correspondents of long standing in Washington have their own sources of information in these departments who can be relied upon for the facts. And even among the press agents, it is the rule that although they are to volunteer news favorable to the department or bureau, they are expected to hide nothing when specific questions are asked.

The author of the book neglected to find out the exact number of press agents in the Government and many on his list of press agents are men holding executive positions, such as Harllee Branch, a former Washington correspondent, now Second Assistant Postmaster-General, who has charge of the international postal, the railway mail, the air mail and rural services. The list has been greatly increased since Roosevelt's inauguration. At that time many newspaper men were without jobs, and the number "drafted" was much less than the number who were jobless when put on the Government payrolls.

Control of Papers.

Theodore Joslin, former Secretary to President Hoover, made a similar charge in a magazine article, declaring that the Roosevelt administration was luring reporters from their newspapers. .

The newspapers themselves, "Handout" indicates, are already in the hands of the Government.

"Newspapers are controlled to a great extent by the Government;" the book says, apparently in all seriousness, "through the Post Office Department. This control is maintained through the Postal Laws which decide what will and will not be sent through the mails."

"Under the Postal Laws of the United States," it goes on, "the legal division of the Postoffice Department is empowered to set up rules and regulations governing what shall and shall not be sent through the mails. This relates particularly to second-class matter, into which classification newspapers are placed. The legal division of Mr. Farley's department determines, under this section of the Postal Laws, just what newspapers may and may not print in the way of news and advertising matter. Should the Postoffice Department rule against a newspaper under this clause of the law, that edition of the newspaper is barred from the mails. The only alternative remaining to the newspaper is to appeal the ruling to the Federal Courts, a tedious and expensive action.

"It is worth noting that, since the code for newspapers was adopted with the clear statement of a free press, there has been a considerable tightening up of Postal Laws and regulations as related to newspapers. This tightening of the regulations has resulted in more money being spent in radio advertising and less in newspaper advertising. The Government-licensed radio is allowed to broadcast types of advertising that are forbidden newspapers, because the Postal Department claims it would violate postal regulations!"

Two Things Wrong.

There are only two things wrong with the foregoing statements. Newspapers, like other mailable communications, may be denied the use of the mails only if they contain advertisements or

THE COTTON TAX PROBLEM

Objectors to Processing Levy and Crop Restriction Predict Ruin Under Present Program

Loss of Exports and Increase of Foreign Competition Charged Up Against Farm Administration's Price Maintenance Plan.

Growers' Income Increased by Higher Market and $225,000,000 in Bounties — Government Holds 6,000,000 Bales for Loans.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.
WASHINGTON, May 11.

COTTON has its roots deep in the economic life of the United States; the South is said to live by it, and industry depends on it in a multitude of ways.

It is not strange, then, that major dislocation in the businesses of growing, marketing and processing cotton should cause economic and political reverberations that carry a real threat to the administration's agricultural program.

The disturbance over the cotton question has become so serious that after it was carried to the executive desk of the White House by an impressive delegation, President Roosevelt appointed a special committee of four Cabinet officers to study the problem. It is the purpose in this article to examine the economic importance of cotton and to see why the Government's policies toward this crop have stirred up controversy of amazing proportions.

Briefly, the significant facts about the cotton situation are:

For years the cotton crop has averaged between 13,000,000 and 17,000,000 bales, with cash value frequently exceeding a billion dollars; regularly, about 50 per cent of the crop has been exported.

With the depression, the price of cotton declined drastically, to less than 6 cents a pound; in the recovery program the Federal Agricultural Adjustment Administration has "pegged" the price at approximately 12 cents by making loans on cotton at that figure.

To assist in the price maintenance scheme, the Government instituted a crop reduction program under which cotton growers are paid bounties for reducing their acreage, the funds for such payments coming from a tax of 4.2 cents a pound on all cotton used for the manufacture of cloth and other articles. This tax is collected from the manufacturers, or processors.

Against this background of basic facts the controversy has raged, bitter critics of the administration program contending it is destroying the export market for American cotton and impoverishing the textile manufacturing industry at home. On the other hand, the program is defended by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and others on the ground that it is necessary to maintenance of fair prices for farmers.

Loans Recall Losses in "Pegging" Wheat

The fact that the Government has an investment of more than $300,000,000 in loans it has made on approximately 6,000,000 bales of cotton is a matter of concern to some critics who recall the huge loss suffered by the Government a few years ago in the Farm Board scheme for "pegging" the price of wheat by making loans on grain held in storage.

In the South complaint has come principally from exporters and other handlers of cotton, and from cotton textile manufacturing mills. Share-croppers and tenants who have been set adrift by the reduction of acreage have voiced a protest, though a rather inarticulate and feeble one. The plantation owners and farmers, who in addition to receiving higher prices for their cotton, or loans from the Government, have received in two years direct bounties of $225,805,000, are said to be pretty well satisfied.

Joining in the protests, which in recent weeks have become more and more insistent, are the textile mill operators of New England and the Eastern seaboard. Their grievance is principally against the processing tax of 4.2 cents a pound, although they find fault also with the NRA wage code which allows the Southern mills to pay a minimum wage that is $1 a week less than the permissible minimum in the North.

Evil effects which the mill operators, in both North and South, say have flowed from the processing tax are first, price advances for finished cotton goods so great as to check buying and destroy markets; second, increased competition from foreign textile manufacturers, especially those of Japan, still further threatening the market for products of American mills.

The cost of cotton to American manufacturers is the normal market price, which the Government has been maintaining at around 12 cents a pound, plus the processing tax, or a total of approximately 16 cents a pound. Up to last March 1 cotton processing taxes collected by the Government totaled $210,375,157, and in addition $11,673,460 had been collected on jute, paper and other products competing with cotton. Thus the total of $221,948,617 came near to balancing the sum of the bounties to plantation owners and farmers.

The Government also has collected $555,000 from the tax of 50 per cent of market value levied on cotton ginned for growers which is in excess of quotas fixed by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration for the individual growers.

Roosevelt Refuses to Use Works Fund to Lift Levy.

The processing tax has been subjected to the most severe criticism. One of those attacking it bitterly was Senator George of Georgia. He succeeded in getting an amendment in the $4,000,000,000 work relief bill authorizing the President to use part of the work relief fund to abolish processing taxes; thus the farmers would get their bounties out of general public revenue and the manufacturers would be relieved of the tax.

In one of his attacks on the processing tax, Senator George pointed out that with the market price of cotton slightly under 12 cents (as it was at the time) the tax of 4.2 cents was a levy of nearly 40 per cent. He added that it was paid in the end by the consumers of cotton goods, that approximately 70 per cent of all cotton clothing manufactured is worn by persons engaged in physical labor.

President Roosevelt indicated that he had no intention of using any part of the work relief fund to eliminate the cotton processing tax. Then there moved on Washington an impressive and well organized protesting group from New England, with Governors and other political leaders as spokesmen. Administration officials and members of Congress were told that the textile industry was on the verge of ruin, mills were closing, thousands of workers were being thrown out of jobs. Gov. Lewis J. Brann of Maine and Gov. James M. Curley of Massachusetts were outspoken in demanding relief for the cotton industry.

When the fight reached this threatening stage, President Roosevelt announced appointment of a special committee composed of Secretaries Hull of the State Department, Wallace of the Department of Agriculture, Roper of the Department of Commerce and Perkins of the Department of Labor to study and report on all phases of the problem—processing tax, foreign competition, bounties for farmers. This committee has been holding conferences with interested groups.

One of the earliest cries of distress was from the exporting interests. Soon after the domestic price level was raised to approximately 12 cents by the Government's plan to lend 12 cents a pound on warehoused cotton, exporters at Southern ports predicted a decline in the foreign market. They asserted the artificially-maintained domestic price was enough higher than the world price to cause foreign consumers to shift to other sources of supply.

Probably not enough time has elapsed to determine the accuracy of the prediction. Cotton statisticians, however, report that whereas formerly American cotton made up about 45 per cent of the world consumption, it now consttiutes only about 30 per cent. Cotton consumers in Germany, England, Japan and elsewhere have been able to buy cotton from Egypt, India, Brazil and other producing countries at prices substantially below the American domestic price. It is said, however, that the facts that much foreign textile machinery was adapted to use American cotton and that the American product was superior have held in check somewhat the movement toward other sources of supply.

Startling increases in production in other countries are reported. The Brazilian crop for 1934-35 season is estimated at 1,591,000 bales compared with 970,000 last season, an increase of 64 per cent.

Jump in Exports of Ginning and Compressing Machinery.

Perhaps one of the most significant facts bearing on the increase in foreign cotton production is the striking advance in shipment of ginning and compressing machinery from the United States to other countries. Total exports of such machinery in 1934 exceeded $1,000,000 in value, five times the total for 1933 and double that of the high year 1928.

Actual exports of American cotton held up well through the depression until the early part of 1934. In fact, the 1932 exports, 9,000,000 bales, were the highest for many years. There was a slight decline in 1933 to 8,353,000 bales. For 1934, however, exports fell off to 5,793,000, the lowest figure in about 25 years.

The decline has continued into 1935, exports for the first three months of this year running 744,000 bales behind the first quarter of 1934.

Germany and other European countries have already reduced their takings of American cotton. Germany is said to be using cotton from other countries and fiber substitutes. Japan continues to take large quantities of American cotton. She became an important buyer a few years ago when the price was at its lowest. She has intensively developed a vast textile manufacturing industry and is aggressively going after world

Herriot Declares Franco-Soviet Pact Is Directed Against No One, Only Against 'Horrible Idea of War'

Says New Treaty Accords With League Covenant — Expects Russia to Evolve Toward Normal Forms of Democracy.

By EDOUARD HERRIOT,
Former Premier of France.

PARIS, May 11.

AND now the Franco-Soviet pact is signed. This agreement will remain an important one in the diplomatic history of these times.

One wonders why discussion of the text took so long. The fact is it was settled long ago, but new difficulties arose.

The truth is that France and the Soviets have never wavered in their desire for co-operation since that memorable day when Foreign Commissar Litvinoff had his nation enter the League of Nations.

We recall our conversation in 1933 with him on this subject. At Geneva Russia began showing herself a nation most realistic and assiduous in asking for efficacious organization of security and concrete definition of measures to be taken, and since that time Franco-Soviet co-operation has been inevitable.

But France intended to be fair in drawing up the treaty. She had already contracted several engagements. Above all, she wanted to be faithful to the covenant of the League of Nations.

In case there is threat of conflict—a hypothesis which unfortunately cannot be excluded—she intends that the League of Nations shall dominate and direct the action necessary for maintaining peace.

Fitting Pact to League Rules.

So our Government's first preoccupation was to make the new pact accord with Articles 10, 15, and 16 of the covenant and the assistance which the French Republic and the Soviet Union are to give one another eventually does not suppress, but, on the contrary, implies regular intervention of the Council of the League of Nations.

Besides, France remains bound by the Locarno and Rhine pact agreements. The new diplomatic document has to respect promises already made. That has been done. The difficulty was to insert in its place a new part in the still incomplete and imperfect machinery of peace. It was necessary to break none of the machinery, not to deny the past and not to trouble the future.

The truth is that the pact which we greet with joy does not fulfill all our hopes. What we French democrats wanted, as stated many times, was a general charter of peace including all nations. This thought was expressed in the protocol of 1924.

For want of this solution we had to be contented with the Locarno agreement. More recently, we suggested an Eastern Locarno. We would have reserved in it a place for Germany, which also has a right to security. We also hoped Poland would enter it. Refusals led to a narrower solution, only Czecho-Slovakia seeming willing to share in this agreement, which is limited to Europe.

But, in adopting the solution consecrated by the Franco-Soviet Treaty on May 2, we did not mean to renounce the universal peace policy of the French Republic. The method had to change—the plan and goal remains the same.

Results of Treaty.

As Foreign Minister Laval forcefully said: "We shall exclude no country from our diplomatic dispositions."

While Soviet Ambassador Potemkine declared the agreement, "an important contribution to the organization of European security." Like us, the Soviets also wish to see this bilateral agreement enriched by new signatures. Unable to proceed by the deductive method, we are proceeding according to the inductive method which will allow us to go from the particular to the general.

This is clear: The two Powers undertake to practice, so far as they are concerned, and to study, if possible, the precepts of the pact of the League of Nations.

In general, what are the results of the Franco-Soviet pact? In our opinion, the general result is fortunate modification of the equilibrium of pacific organization and relief for the Western Powers of Europe which, since 1918, alone and with the co-operation of the uneasy Little Entente have carried a very heavy burden.

Great Britain, France, and Italy have been until now the three pillars upon which have rested the whole temple of peace, at least that which has been built. Now Great Britain is grappling with keener and keener preoccupations. The debate in the House of Commons of May 2 showed that clearly.

I remember that in 1933 when I was in Washington I had the honor to say to President Roosevelt who permitted me to recall the fact: "The German problem should be examined witb binoculars."

This truth has been confirmed. Recent declarations of the German Government prove that all has not been said to Foreign Secretary Simon of Great Britain.

From now on one must realize that definitely the whole naval status of the world is again in question. The United States wishes to absent itself from the debate without being concerned in Germany's unilateral decision.

Hitler's Methods.

Germany is following more and more the method of facing others with an accomplished fact, a method which, before coming to power, Chancellor Hitler denounced in the celebrated document addressed to Von Papen.

At the very moment when the Franco-British agreement of Feb. 3 demanded revision of the Treaty of Versailles, having already left the League of Nations, Germany disassociated herself with the nations seeking peace, wishing justice for Germany herself only.

After such a serious event, after Hitler successively announced creation of a military aviation establishment, conscription, and construction of submarines we are losing neither our calm nor our desire for peace, but we cannot remain inactive.

With Prime Minister MacDonald I believe we should continue our constructive efforts. With MacDonald we invite Germany to enter what she professes to approve—the Eastern non-aggression pact.

If she does not intend to attack Russia, has no designs on Ukrainia, nothing prevents her from doing so. As the British Prime Minister said in the House of Commons: "A multilateral pact and the Franco-Soviet pact could very well include one another, thus aiding realization of a complete system of collective security in Eastern Europe."

Door Open to Germany.

As Germany wishes and as George Lansbury requests, we intend to leave the door open to Germany. If unfortunately that door must be shut, it will be Germany who will have to shut it.

It will inevitably be thus because the Franco-Soviet agreement prevents nothing, not even—but quite the contrary—limitation of armaments.

Sir John Simon assured the House of Commons that the Franco-Soviet agreement respects Locarno, thus showing he understands our attitude. It is valuable for us to see our idea of the pact and its possible extensions approved by the British Prime Minister. In this we find proof that our diplomacy has worked well.

We must limit ourselves for the moment to these observations. We shall have to watch the evolution

Dr. Jastrow's Book.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MR. NEIHARDT'S penetrating criticism of Dr. Joseph Jastrow's "Wish and Wisdom," in your issue of May 5, has for its basis the apparently irreconcilable viewpoint of the naturalistic as opposed to the spiritual conception of the universe.

Perhaps, in view of the inability of science to penetrate to the ultimate nature of things, an arbitrary stand for naturalism may justify the sarcasm in the criticism; still, in behalf of Dr. Jastrow, may it not be said that he is justified in going to the length of naturalistic proofs and assuming, as an a priori conclusion, that from there on, future developments will justify any assumptions which can be made therefrom?

One lays down a book like Sir James Jeans' "Through Space and Time" with the unavoidable notion that, through all the unimaginable reaches of trillions of light years, nature seems to have been sufficient unto herself. And that from the primordial gases from which our present universe evolved, down through nebulae, suns and planets into human life, including its uttermost refinements of thought, the law of cause and effect appears to be sufficient as a determining factor.

It is possible, of course, that such conclusions may be wishful results of an inherently rationalistic intellect, but I cannot help but doubt it. Logic does not always have to wait for proofs. It may use what facts it has as guideposts and chart an unknown path to truths which later proof will verify. Such, I imagine, is Dr. Jastrow's position. JOHN HEINTZ.

The Socialist Labor Party.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN A reprint from the Detroit News, there is mention of the Socialist Labor party as a wrecked third party, inferring, since it is mentioned along with all the dead political parties this country has known in the past, that the Socialist Labor party is dead. Not on your life. The Socialist Labor party still exists — the third oldest political party in this country. It is the only political party that has a cure-all: the complete overthrow of capitalism and the setting up of the Industrial Republic of Labor.

It advocates the organization of the workers into industrial unions to give them the necessary strength to accomplish this. It offers no reforms as every national election will prove — no principles of Socialism that can be stolen by a Roosevelt. The Socialist Labor party has nothing in common with any other political parties. Therefore, it cannot join in a third-party movement.

At the Berne Trial.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IT is hardly conceivable that in our period of civilization, there could spring up such a movement as Nazi-ism, whose aims are to spread hatred, dissatisfaction and ultimately to throw the world into a disastrous war.

At the Nazi trial in Berne, Switzerland, the Jews are accused of all the calamities that ever befell the human race. The Jews are accused of bringing on the World War and plotting for another war. Then, on the other hand, they are blamed for the armistice, the Kellogg Pact and the League of Nations, organizations which are aimed at settling worldly affairs without wars. It is really quite contradictory.

Concerning the Nazi accusation that the Jews were the cause of the armistice, the Nazis should be thankful to the Jews for it. It would have been a lot worse for Germany if the Allied armies had marched on Berlin. And as for the Jews being the cause of America throwing in her lot with the Allies, Hitler's friends should not forget that it was the sinking of the Lusitania, with the terrible loss of American lives, that brought the United States into the World War. It was not the Jews' dollars that the Nazis talk so much about, but it was the short-sightedness and the brutality of the German General Staff. MEYER HURWITZ.

Applauds Crossley, Kasius.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN your issue of April 30, you carried a news story from Washington about the Senators and Representatives from Missouri making a fight on Wallace Crossley, the Relief Administrator for the State, who is assisted in carrying on this work by Peter Kasius of St. Louis.

The President is responsible for this activity and he has his chosen men without the assistance of any politicians of either party. There is plenty of work at Washington for the Congressmen and Senators to keep them busy without trying to play petty politics at home by dictating to the relief committees as to whom they shall employ, what they shall pay them and how the work shall be done. It is good to know that Crossley and Kasius are trying to run a clean administration that has caused no fair criticism up to this time. Other surrounding states have had rotten relief administrations—so rotten that the Federal Government had to step in.

Citizens should write to Harry Hopkins at Washington and tell him to ask the Missouri politicians to keep their hands off. A TAXPAYER.

A LARGER SUPREME COURT?

The suggestion is being made in some quarters that President Roosevelt would be justified in asking Congress to increase the size of the United States Supreme Court if that tribunal takes a generally adverse attitude toward the New Deal legislation. It is argued that with two more Justices on the bench by appointment of Mr. Roosevelt, the Railroad Retirement Act would not have been held unconstitutional, or at least that the strict construction of the commerce clause would not have prevailed. It is argued that Mr. Roosevelt, by the suggested device, could insure favorable action on important test cases yet to come before the Court.

Because of the seriousness of this proposal, it is well to examine it in the light of history and experience. For in the first place, the argument is one which is premised on reasoning which either may or may not be supported by the course of events. In the second place, it is in order to ask whether enlargement of the court would not alter the manner of its functioning in a way which would prove undesirable.

The constitutional basis for the Supreme Court is in the first sentence of Article III, which reads: "The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one Supreme Court and in such inferior courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish." Acting in accordance with this general provision and the ideas of Oliver Ellsworth, later third Chief Justice, on how to carry it out, Congress in 1789 approved the First Judiciary Act, which created a court of six members—one Chief Justice and five Associate Justices.

This was the size of the Supreme Court until 1807, when, early in the long chief justiceship of John Marshall, the court's "creative statesman," its membership was increased to seven. Just 30 years later, at the outset of Roger Brooke Taney's chief justiceship, Congress provided two more seats. The number stood at nine until the Civil War period, when it reached a maximum of 10. During the administration of Andrew Johnson, Congress, to prevent the President from making appointments to the court, reduced the membership to seven. In the only other change, that which came between the legal tender cases, Hepburn vs. Griswold (1869) and Knox vs. Lee (1870), Congress re-established the court on a basis of nine members.

It is not due to lack of agitation for a change that the size of the court has not been increased in the past 65 years. The proposal has been raised time and again. As recently as 1922, it was one of the major recommendations of the American Bar Association, only to meet with the plain-spoken disapproval of the then Chief Justice, William H. Taft.

What would be the effect of the creation of two or more new Supreme Court seats? So able a student of the court's history as Prof. Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard University Law School says that "experience is conclusive that to enlarge the size of the Supreme Court would be self-defeating." In his brilliant article on the court in the Encyclopedia of the Social Sciences, he shows how the court's internal procedure has been an important factor in its attainment of high standards of judicial administration. As he puts it, it is not that there is magic in the number nine, but rather that there are limits to effective judicial action. Plainly, nine men are better able, other things being equal, to indulge in responsible deliberation than a larger number.

Furthermore—and this is a most important consideration—experience has demonstrated that advance notions about the attitude of Supreme Court members are frequently in error. The case of Chief Justice Hughes is in point. His nomination as head of the court by President Hoover in 1930 provoked a veritable storm in the Senate. For a time, it appeared as if a group of Senators who objected to the appointee's supposed social and economic views might prevent confirmation. Yet Mr. Hughes, once on the bench, very soon joined hands with Justices Brandeis and Stone and the late Justice Holmes. The result was that when Justice Roberts sided with them, the old minority became a new majority.

It is a noteworthy circumstance, too, that Woodrow Wilson, in naming Justices Brandeis and McReynolds, gave the bench two men of widely different philosophies. Again, the fact stands out that in close divisions of the court Justices Sutherland and Butler are regularly found ranged against Justices Stone and Cardozo, notwithstanding they were all appointed by successive Republican Presidents whose economic and social policies were substantially the same. It would be easy to marshal additional evidence of this sort.

The agitation to increase the size of the Supreme Court must be investigated in the light of such considerations as these. Whether the court enjoys greater esteem than either the legislative or the executive branches of the Government, as many students of government hold, there can be no denying that it is looked up to, and rightly so, by the people. For this reason alone, any plan to change its structure and thereby reshape its internal procedure should be subjected to the most searching analysis.

Aside from and above these considerations stands the obvious one that enlargement of the Supreme Court with a view to securing favorable decisions on administration policies would savor strongly of sharp practice. Traditionally the American people have disapproved of changing the rules during the game to gain an advantage. They would most certainly object should it be applied to so venerated an institution as the United States Supreme Court.

A WAR THAT DOESN'T COME OFF.

What is holding up the war in East Africa between Italy and Ethiopia? For weeks the Italians have been sending troops, with all the paraphernalia of war, to the Ethiopian border, but not a cap has been snapped. Perhaps, as a letter-writer to the Post-Dispatch suggested recently, Emperor Haile Selassie is a benighted ruler who does not understand the rules of colonial expansion. Rule 3-C, for example, requires the Emperor to furnish what the diplomats call "a border incident." A border incident might be almost anything. It might consist in an Ethiopian soldier tweaking the nose of an Italian soldier. Or, it might arise from a failure of some Ethiopian to be able to quote a few stanzas from Horace or Vergil.

Anyway, the honor of Italy has got to be involved. And when it is, the Italians are on the march and have captured Addis Ababa before you can say "Dollar Diplomacy." Meanwhile, Mussolini's press agents and personal relations counselors have released to the world their prearranged statements about making East Africa safe for Fascism, painting Haile Selassie as a fiend in human form and otherwise assuring the civilized world that the Italian Government has been actuated only by the highest and loftiest motives. In impolite circles, such statements are known as "Blahblah."

While the Italian front is seething with activity, Haile Selassie is keeping his warriors in check. He has not even mobilized them, because, he explains, then they would refuse to remain inactive, but would insist upon fighting. Their old King Menelik defeated the Italians in 1895 and 1896, and the Ethiopians think they can repeat. But the Emperor insists upon refusing to knock the chip off Italy's shoulder, thereby spoiling Mussolini's plans. We suppose the latter will be ingenious enough to find a way to start the slaughter, but, in the meantime, the black ruler is making the Italians look ridiculous.

IN TIME'S PERSPECTIVE.

Only in the perspective of time can we truly appraise some men for their social service. It is so with John Brown of Osawatomie, whose statue was dedicated recently in his former Kansas home. Another monument was dedicated last week in celebration of Brown's one hundred and thirty-fifth anniversary at North Elba, N. Y., where he was buried after the execution at Harper's Ferry, Va.

In Maine a monument is being projected to Elijah P. Lovejoy. There is already a Lovejoy monument at Alton, Ill., where Lovejoy was killed. The second will be built at the place of his birth, the village of Albion, Me.

Both these men were the objects of probably more epithets than we are hurling at anyone now. Lovejoy published the St. Louis Observer. He advocated the abolition of slavery, but that was too much for St. Louis a hundred years ago. Advised to leave this city, Lovejoy went up the river to Alton. When he attempted to continue his work there, he was slain by a mob and his press thrown in the river. This was in 1837.

It is much easier to kill men than it is to kill ideas. Two years after Lovejoy was killed, John Brown set out to capture the arsenal at Harper's Ferry. He also was opposed to human slavery. Brown believed in direct action. He was captured and hanged, to give the Union troops in the Civil War one of their most inspiring songs. All of Grant's men, in bivouacs at Fort Donelson, at Shiloh, at Missionary Ridge, at Lookout Mountain, at Iuka and at Vicksburg, sang:

> John Brown's body lies a-moldering in the grave,
> John Brown's body lies a-moldering in the grave,
> John Brown's body lies a-moldering in the grave,
> But his soul goes marching on.

A year after Brown was hanged, Abraham Lincoln was nominated for President. All human progress has its Browns and its Lovejoys. They are the prophets of better things to be. It is not in their own generation that such men are seen for what they are. The generations judge one another, and it is our own generation that builds monuments to Brown and Lovejoy. Such is time's perspective.

DISSENT.

In the general chorus of approval that has followed the award of the Pulitzer Prize to Miss Josephine Johnson's "Now in November," we have discovered a dissent. It is registered by the New Orleans Times-Picayune, which says the book "impressed various persons as being extremely dull." Of course, dullness is entirely a matter of taste. There are many who regard as dull the plays of Shakespeare, the essays of Montaigne and the poetry of Homer.

The Louisiana newspaper goes on to say: "It (the novel) rode into 'best-seller' rating on the crest of a wave dealing with the hard times and capitalizing the wish of the jobless city man to be back on the old farm, where there was certainly no lack of work."

It is impossible to believe the author of this sentence could have read "Now in November," for it pictures farm life in its most tragic and forbidding aspects. Not that "Now in November" needs any defense, but uninformed criticism deserves exposure.

VALUABLE SERVICE BY THE F. P. A.

> Although it is very true that we ought not to involve ourselves in the political system of Europe, but to keep ourselves always distinct and separate from it if we can, yet to effect this separation, early, punctual and continual information of the current chain of events and of the political projects in contemplation is no less necessary than if we were directly concerned in them.

Those words were written 138 years ago by President John Adams in a message to Congress, and they are even truer today than then. To meet this desirable objective is the reason for the Foreign Policy Association's existence, and its recent annual report shows how well the duty has been carried out. The association advocates no specific course of action, but devotes itself to impartial research and the fostering of discussion of issues in foreign affairs and their bearing on this country's problems. To achieve this end, it issues bulletins, pamphlets and books by recognized authorities and sponsors radio talks, with the aid of some 12,000 members over the country and contributions by educational foundations.

The high esteem in which the publications and research facilities of the F. P. A. are held testify to its value. Its aid is sought not only by editors, students and members of Congress, but by Government departments, foreign embassies and the League of Nations secretariat. Its publications, invariably of scholarly objectivity, often arouse widespread discussion. Secretary Wallace's "America Must Choose," which the F. P. A. published, is the most widely discussed pamphlet of the day.

In a time of crisis in world affairs, when a knowledge of developments abroad is essential to all who would understand or lead in America, the country is fortunate to have available such a service as that given by the Foreign Policy Association.

EIGHT ILLINOIS SENATORS.

In a time when pressure to limit civil rights is being brought on every hand by groups which have forgotten the fundamental concepts of human freedom upon which the United States was founded, eight members of the Illinois Senate have done the fine thing of voting in favor of the Monroe resolution to repeal the provisions of Illinois' so-called treason code under which the Hillsboro prisoners were held last year. These outvoted Senators—Menges of East St. Louis, Monroe of Collinsville, Kribs of Prairie du Rocher, Karraker of Jonesboro, Burgess of Fairfield, Clifford of Champaign and Smith and King of Chicago—deserve the commendation of their constituents. The majority of them represent Southern Illinois districts. Theirs is by far the oldest part of Illinois, and it may well be that the historic traditions of their region have made them more appreciative than their colleagues of the prime importance of freedom of thought.

A Great Adventure

JOURNAL OF A SOLDIER UNDER KEARNY AND DONIPHAN. By George Rutledge Gibson. Edited by Ralph P. Bieber. (The Arthur H. Clark Co., Glendale, Cal.)

GEORGE RUTLEDGE GIBSON, whose Mexican War journal here appears in print for the first time, was born in Virginia in 1810. During his early twenties, he moved to Vincennes, Ind., where he practiced law for some years. In the early '40s, he moved to Independence, Mo., then the most important outfitting point for the westward-bound caravans. There, in the fall of 1844, he established a weekly newspaper which lived but a few months. A second journalistic adventure, at Weston, Mo., was likewise unsuccessful.

At the outbreak of the Mexican War, Gibson was practicing law at Weston; but law being perhaps the least of the frontier's troubles, the picking seems to have been meager, and Gibson enlisted in the Army of the West, organized at Fort Leavenworth under the leadership of Col. Stephen W. Kearny for the conquest of New Mexico.

Leaving Fort Leavenworth on the last day of June, 1846, Kearny's force of 1700 men set out for Santa Fe, and we have here a vivid day-by-day account of what was truly a magnificent adventure, considering the time and the country. Following the Santa Fe Trail by way of Bent's Fort on the Arkansas near the site of La Junta, Colo., and thence southwestward through Raton Pass to Las Vegas and Santa Fe, the expedition did some rather prodigious marching, covering about 900 miles in 49 days through uninhabited country, some of it desert and most of it little better than desert.

Thirst, hunger, sore feet and sickness accounted for considerable grouching and grumbling at times, no doubt; but there seems to have been a spirit gloriously boy-like about the whole business—the sense of a world still young; of banners blowing in a wind of high emprise. For most of the men were volunteers, out for a free fling at hazardous living, and it appears that the disappointment was general when the long march ended without a battle.

Gibson had no illusion as to his literary gifts, and so made no effort at "fine writing"; and the "feel" of the great adventure comes through the commonplace entries the more effectively for that reason.

After occupying Santa Fe without a scuffle, Kearny set out for California with a part of his forces, ordering Col. Doniphan to proceed with his regiment to Chihuahua and join the American forces there. Gibson went with Doniphan, being in the fight at Bracito, near El Paso, and in the battle of Sacramento, near Chihuahua. In the spring of 1847, he was ordered to report to the commanding officer in Santa Fe, and made the journey with a small caravan of traders. Upon his arrival, at the end of June, he was mustered out of the service. After editing a newspaper in Santa Fe for nearly a year, he returned to Missouri in the spring of 1848.

The Gibson journal was presented to the Missouri Historical Society in 1873, when the author was living at Mattoon, Ill. For its appearance after all these years, students of Western history will be grateful to Ralph P. Bieber, associate professor of history at Washington University. He has performed a very considerable task in an admirable manner.

The volume is the third to be issued in the valuable Southwest Historical Series.

ALL GIANTS WEAR YELLOW BREECHES. By Vernon Patterson. (William R. Scott, New York City.)

BOOKS about childhood and books for children are constantly tumbling from the presses; but it is a rare author who can actually rediscover the wonderful lost world of the young, enter therein and write thereof with the unspoiled understanding of a native who has never strayed from home. Surely it would not require a very long shelf to accommodate all the books in English that successfully present the childhood world.

Richard Jefferies knew the way back, as his "Bevis" gloriously proves; perhaps no one ever knew the way better than he; and to say that a book on childhood deserves to be read by the lovers of "Bevis" is to say much. Vernon Patterson's "All Giants Wear Yellow Breeches" is really such a book.

The story begins with what may be called the vague prehistory of a little boy's life, and continues into the period of adolescence. From beginning to end, it is a joy to read. Many books can be sketched or described; but here everything depends upon the convincingness of the developing mood, the utter rightness of feeling in every detail; and accordingly, there is little to say about the book save that it richly deserves to be read.

Vernon Patterson is a newcomer in the writing world, this being his first book. He was born in a small Kansas town, was taken to California at the age of 7, went through high school there, and in 1925 was graduated from the University of California after having spent some years knocking about the world and serving in the war. He must now be nearing the age of 40.

MARY MAGDALEN. By Edith Olivier. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York City.)

SO FAR as the Gospel narratives are concerned, Mary Magdalen is a decidedly vague figure, so much so that as many as three Marys may have been confused, as some believe.

But if the Gospels furnished meager data on the life of her who washed the Savior's feet, numerous "lives," from the eighth century onward, most generously supplied the lack; and it is upon these that Miss Olivier, widely known as author of "The Love Child," "Dwarf's Blood," etc., has based her present life of the saint.

Truly it is a beautiful and a holding story that she tells with a fine sense of the deeper meanings involved.

Mary, the extremely wealthy heir to the castle of Magdala, marries the fisherman John, who immediately thereafter comes under the spell of the Nazarene and leaves his bride to follow the vision. Thereupon Mary plunges into debauchery. Finally persuaded by her sister, already a convert, to hear Jesus speak, Mary herself sees the light and follows the Master. After the crucifixion, she preaches at Ephesus and later makes her way to Southern France where she lives a holy life in the forest and dies at an advanced age, beloved of God and men.

THE POEMS OF JOHN CLARE. Edited with an Introduction by J. W. Tibble. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York City.)

JOHN CLARE, who for a few years of his unhappy life enjoyed a vogue as "the Northamptonshire Peasant Poet," was born in 1793, the son of a farm laborer, and died in an asylum in 1864. While serving as a "pot-boy" in a tavern, he came under the influence of Thomson's "Seasons" and began writing verses, for which he seems to have had a fatal facility.

His first volume, "Poems Descriptive of Rural Life and Scenery," caught on with the intelligentsia and the well-born, probably for reasons complimentary to neither the flatterers nor the flattered; and for awhile it seems to have been quite "the thing" to reveal one's superiority by professing great appreciation of the author's alleged "wood-notes wild." A second volume did well, but a third arrived too late to share in the passing fad.

Clare continued to produce with amazing fecundity, eating his heart out the while with his growing sense of neglect. Even his years spent in an asylum were highly productive.

Until 15 years ago, Clare remained merely a minor literary exhibit in exhaustive studies of English literature. But in 1920, he was rediscovered and revived, Edmund Blunden and Alan Porter issuing a selection of the peasant poet's work that year, and another in 1924. The present edition of two volumes, each containing more than 500 closely printed pages, is said to include all of Clare's work.

Very commonly, the revival of a neglected author results in a great over-estimation of his value, for the moment, and if a fashion results, even otherwise intelligent people are easily bowled over.

It seems hardly likely that Clare can be given another vogue, although extremely queer things do have a way of happening in our great literary center. If the poems were on the average very much shorter, even poorer than they generally are, and obviously "nutty" (which they certainly are not), then it would be decidedly easier to start the goose-gabble. Still, they are going in for quantity these days, and a few authoritative critics might start the big noise.

Here and there, a striking line stands out in Clare's verses; but he wrote too easily, vastly too much for his ability, his background and understanding; and even most of his touted nature work has a second-hand flavor.

AMERICAN GOVERNMENT AND POLITICS. By Charles A. Beard. (The Macmillan Co., New York City.)

THE seventh edition of a standard work already 25 years old, now revised throughout in keeping with current events, and definitely cast in the form of a textbook. Aside from its value to educational institutions, it is hardly probable that the average citizen, puzzled by the present state of affairs, could find any work better calculated to furnish the background essential to an understanding of what is occurring. The same author's masterly recent work, entitled "The Open Door at Home," might be read after studying the present volume.

ST. LOUIS JURIES OF LOW QUALITY, REPORT ASSERTS

IABILITY RATES HERE ARE HIGH

Six Recommendations Include Suggestion That Only Tax Payers Be Eligible to Serve.

There has been a growing conviction among lawyers, insurance companies and business men generally that Circuit Court juries here are not representative of the citizens qualified to serve as jurors, it is declared in a report made public yesterday by the Associated Industries of Missouri and the Chamber of Commerce. The report added that it was felt in the same circles that this situation was largely responsible for excessive verdicts rendered by juries in damage suits.

Clair S. Cullenbine, a lawyer, prepared the report on the basis of a study he made for the Associated Industries.

Pointing out that the biennial canvass for prospective jurors had been undertaken last week by the new Jury Commissioner, the report related that deputy commissioners would be sent to stores, office buildings, factories and business places in the central part of the city generally, in order to obtain the new list.

"It is vitally important that these men be given access to all places of business and that business men insist on their employes making themselves available for jury service," the report declared. It quoted a 1928 statement by Amos L. Seaman, former Jury Commissioner, who found that some establishments refused to permit the deputies to make the canvass.

Six Recommendations.

Recommendations for improvement of the quality of juries were made in the report as follows:

Require that jurors must pay taxes on real or personal property assessed for at least $250, in order to be eligible.

Permit any man conducting a business or employed in the city to be eligible for jury duty, not just residents.

Appoint capable young lawyers as deputy jury commissioners or enlarge the commissioner's staff so that well-trained employes could make a continuous jury canvass.

Urge the Board of Jury Supervisors—who are the 18 Circuit Judges, and the Circuit Clerk—to take an active interest in their duties, as prescribed by the statutes.

Conduct a publicity campaign to obtain well-informed public opinion.

Obtain co-operation of business men so that they and their employes will serve on juries when called.

Lawyers Complain.

"Lawyers who represent insurance companies and industries that are frequently made defendants in personal injury suits," the report continued, "have all complained of the poor class of jurors before whom they are required to try their cases. They have repeatedly said that some steps should be taken to remedy this situation. Insurance companies, while admitting the situation to be bad, maintain the attitude that it is a purely local problem and one with which the community itself must deal. They proceed on the theory that their rates can be adjusted to meet any condition, good or bad, and that their experience will be their only concern in the matter. Industry has recognized its plight but has come to regard the bad damage suit problem as a necessary evil to conducting business in a large city. However, an examination of other cities' positions convinces us that this conclusion is entirely erroneous and that most other cities occupy a distinctly more favorable position."

Liability Rates High.

In proof, the report cited standard public liability insurance rates for $5000-$10,000 limits on a unit basis in St. Louis and elsewhere. For store and manufacturing buildings occupied by tenants the annual rate here was $31.50, but ranged down to $7.50 in Detroit. For department stores the rate here was $416.50, ranging down to $82.50 in Detroit. For 5 and 10-cent stores the rate here was $1369.50, ranging down to $122.50 in Detroit. The comparison included 14 other large cities. Another table showed the relative high rates for liability insurance on automobiles here. St. Louis had the highest rates of all classifications cited except four.

"Bad" Damage Suit Situation."

The report asserted that the explanation of the state of affairs was "because we have an extremely bad damage suit situation and, further, one of the important factors in it is bad juries. There is much in the contention that our disadvantage is caused by unethical lawyers, but we must not lose sight of the fact that an unscrupulous lawyer cannot successfully prosecute his cases unless he can sell them to a jury."

Examination of verdicts by juries in personal injury cases in the first six months of 1934 showed an average verdict of $6186 in Circuit Court in the city, $3689 in Circuit Court in St. Louis County and only two judgments for the plaintiff in Federal Court, one for less than $1000 and the other for less than $6000. In Circuit Court in the city there were 121 judgments for plaintiffs, ranging from two for less than $500 each to 20 for $10,000 or more each, and 53 judgments for defendants. In the county there were 23 judgments for plaintiffs, ranging from five for less than $500 each to two for $10,000 or more each, and 10 judgments for defendants. In Federal Court there were the two judgments for plaintiffs and three for defendants.

High-Class Jurors Fewer.

A study of the occupations of men on the jury lists, comparing lists of 1921, 1925 and 1935, was included in the report, with this statement: "It is interesting to note that those men whom we classify as being higher type have steadily declined in numbers since 1921 and are now in a considerable minority, also that those whom we classify as poorer type men have increased to an alarming extent." The proportion of "first-line business men" on the lists decreased from 8.5 per cent in 1921 to 1.07 per cent in 1935; the proportion of junior executives, superintendents and foremen decreased from 15.2 per cent to 6.58 per cent; the proportion of trades workers and unskilled workers increased from 21.3 per cent to 47.84 per cent.

The report related that the Board of Jury Supervisors appointed the jury commissioner and his deputies and supervised his office. It said about 40 special deputies were engaged for the biennial canvass for a list usually containing about 65,000 names.

"The temporary deputies," said the report, "are practically the sole judge of any man's qualifications, as they are the only ones seeing the prospect and the only ones having an opportunity to pass on his qualifications. We can readily see that the type of men we have on juries is largely traceable to the type of personnel we have in the jury commissioner's office. The temporary deputies have, in their discretion, power to include or exclude those they interview. If we do not have the right type of men for deputies we, of course, cannot have the right type of juries.

Political Deputies.

"Originally, many young lawyers acted as deputy commissioners and in view of their education and training they are undoubtedly the best qualified persons to serve in this capacity. In late years, however, this practice has largely been departed from and the deputies are usually selected because of their political affiliations or personal friendship with the supervisors."

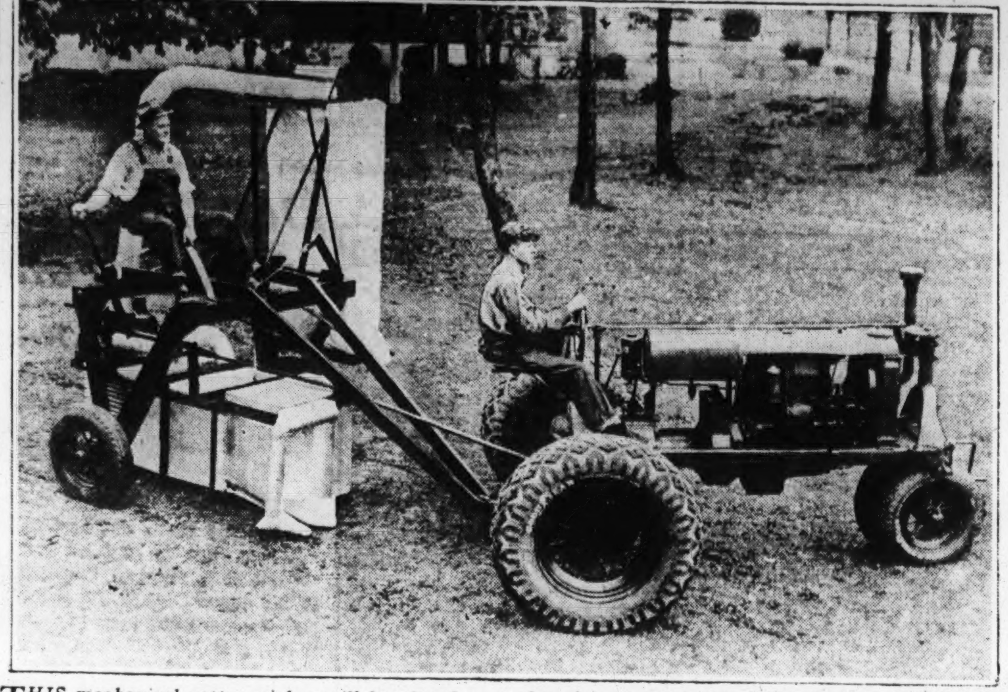
The report related that Seaman, who was jury commissioner for 24 years, in 1932 withdrew 10,000 names from the lists of men deemed unqualified as jurors because of their lack of education. The result, it was asserted, was "a noticeably better quality" of jury panels, but pressure was brought to bear on the judges and the 10,000 names were restored.

With the change of political complexion of the Circuit Court, putting Democrats in the majority on the bench, Seaman was dropped as jury commissioner and Patrick J. McNamara, labor leader and former Democratic City Committeeman, was made commissioner May 1. Five Democrats were appointed as his regular deputies.

St. Louis U. Debaters Get Medals.

Gold awards were made to the year's outstanding debaters at a dinner party of the St. Louis University Department of Forensics last night at the Hotel Melbourne. The Rev. Russell Wilbur, pastor of Notre Dame Church, who was introduced by Dr. Ralph B. Wagner, head of the forensic department, was the principal speaker. Others were the Rev. Fr. Knapp, Chancellor of St. Louis University, and Alphonse Eberle, dean of the School of Law.

New Machine That Picks Cotton



THIS mechanical cotton picker will be placed on the market next year, according to its inventor, John D. Rust, who exhibited it last week at the Cotton Carnival and National Cotton Show at Memphis, Tenn. The inventor expects it to harvest cotton at one-fifth the cost of hand picking. This would reduce cost of production and give American growers an advantage in competition with foreign growers who are threatening the American export market. The machine employs a new principle, a belt carrying the gathering spindles through the cotton plants without harm to stalks or leaves. Its success would abolish the seasonal jobs of thousands of laborers who now pick the South's cotton crop by hand.

The increase in importation of Japanese cotton cloth into the United States is one of the causes of complaint by American manufacturers. Although the volume is small as compared with the American production of cotton textiles, the rapid rate of increase seems to have caused alarm. In the first three months of 1933 imports of cotton goods were 9,543,000 square yards; in the corresponding quarter of 1934 this climbed to 14,026,000 square yards, and this year the corresponding figure was 23,908,000 square yards, the increase in two years being 150 per cent. About two-thirds of these imports are said to come from Japan.

Market Affected by Storing of 6,000,000 Bales.

The fact that the Government directly or indirectly holds some 6,000,000 bales of cotton pledged for loans is a disturbing factor in the market. Observers have asserted that if it expects to avoid a price break, the Government will have to continue to carry this cotton, paying substantial carrying charges, and in addition will have to be prepared to make loans on a comparable basis on this season's crop.

Critics assert the Government's price maintenance scheme cannot possibly succeed except at the cost of virtually the entire export market, which, as stated, normally takes 50 per cent or more of the entire production. Recalling how the Farm Board wheat stabilization scheme broke down in 1929, and how 10 years ago the British rubber price maintenance plan crashed under the force of external influences, the doubters see nothing but failure for this latest ambitious price-control scheme.

In the category of 12-cent loans, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration reports 1,206,594 transactions, involving 4,436,682 bales, for a total of $270,673,063. As of a recent date, repayments had been made in only 13,499 cases, involving 102,441 bales and $6,278,647. There remained outstanding, then, 1,193,145 loans, representing 4,334,241 bales and $264,394,415.

In addition to the 12-cent loans, there were outstanding as of a recent date advances at the rate of 4 cents a pound covering 1,949,949 bales in the so-called cotton option pool. These advances aggregated $38,998,994.

Carrying Charges Estimated At $34,800,000 a Year.

Carrying charges on cotton loans made direct by the Commodity Credit Corporation are said by the AAA to amount to 46.22 cents per bale per month. This is made up of 20 cents interest, 25 cents storage charge and 1.22 cents for insurance. There is some variation in the carrying charges on that part of the loans made by financial interests other than the Commodity Credit Corporation. It should be explained that a large part of the loans has been made by banks and other financial concerns on the basis that the Commodity Credit Corporation (the Government agency) is obligated to purchase the paper if it is offered to it.

If the carrying charges on all the cotton averaged as much as on the Commodity Credit Corporation part, the total cost would aggregate about $34,877,000 a year. Obviously the burden to the Government would grow with the extension of the time the cotton is held and the increase in the holdings.

A few weeks ago an uneasiness developed in the cotton market and in spite of the 12-cent loan price maintenance provision, the price declined substantially, quotations for a while being a cent or more under the loan figure. A statement by the Secretary of Agriculture that last season's loans would be extended and that a new loan probably would be announced for this season's crop contributed to restoration of the price to slightly above the loan level.

A suit questioning the constitutionality of the processing tax on cotton has been carried to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Boston by one of the New England mills. It is asserted in this suit that Congress had no authority to delegate to an administrative officer the power to impose taxes. The processing taxes are levied by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Davis Denies Decrease in Consumption.

In a recent statement defending the cotton processing tax, Chester C. Davis, administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, said domestic consumption of cotton in 1934, when the processing tax was in effect, was 400,000 bales greater than in 1932, when there was no tax. He thought this refuted the argument that the processing tax restricted consumption. He said the tax increased the price of overalls 8 cents, and of work shirts 3 cents.

Senator Jesse H. Metcalf of Rhode Island said in a prepared statement that since last August 71 cotton textile mills had closed, throwing 20,000 employes out of jobs. He declared the Government policy was "ruining both the cotton farmer and the cotton manufacturer."

Herriot Says Pact Is Aimed Against None of this pact for which we have worked for 10 years.

We have always thought that, despite the prejudices created by the new Russia, it was the duty of intelligence and in the interest of civilization to work toward bringing her back into European harmony. That France and the Soviet State solemnly before the world announce their desire to collaborate is the most important new fact. Some will say: "It is an extension of Communism."

But Soviet Russia, first as official friends with Italy and Turkey, knew how to keep external and internal politics apart. Never has Soviet Russia troubled their internal status. We believe, moreover, that that nation, directed by statesmen of the first order, will evolve more and more toward normal forms of democracy.

Thus the Franco-Soviet pact should meet the approval of all pacifists, of all those who accept the program of the League of Nations, namely organization of security by mutual assistance. It is directed against no one. It is directed only against the horrible idea of war.

ALDERMEN SET CITY TAX RATE AT $1.74 AGAIN

MAYOR DICKMANN TO APPROVE BILL

City's Newly Acquired Right to License Beer Sellers Looked On as Another Revenue Source.

By unanimous vote, the Board of Aldermen yesterday passed the annual tax-rate ordinance, fixing the municipal tax rates for 1935 at a total of $1.74 on the $100 valuation for the fourth successive year. The rules were suspended, in order to act immediately on a favorable report on the bill by the Ways and Means Committee. The measure will be approved by Mayor Dickmann.

The city rates have included $1.27 for general purposes since 1925, 39 cents for the bond sinking fund since 1932, and, for years, 4 cents for the Public Library and 2 cents each for the Art Museum and Zoo.

A majority of the Board of Education has agreed to fix the school tax rates for 1935 at a total of 88 cents, including 85 cents for general purposes and 3 cents for the school bond sinking fund, at the monthly meeting Tuesday night. Last year the rates were 84 cents for general purposes and 1 cent for the sinking fund.

State May Increase Rate.

The State rates, which aggregated 15 cents last year, may have to be increased to 16 cents, State Auditor Smith said at Jefferson City yesterday. Gov. Park has recommended to the Legislature that provision be made to pay interest and retirement of the $10,000,000 in penal and eleemosynary building bonds voted last year from general revenue. No action on this has been taken. Smith, whose duty it is to see that provision is made to carry the bonds, has been withholding certification of the State rates to the counties, while awaiting word from the Legislature. If the general revenue provision should not be made, he would have to order the 1-cent levy. He must certify the rates this month.

Division of the 15-cent State rate was: General revenue, 5 cents; blind pension fund, 3 cents; soldier bonus bonds, 6 cents; interest on seminary fund and school fund certificates of indebtedness, 1 cent.

The gross tax rate in St. Louis this year probably will be $2.77 or $2.78 on the $100 valuation, an increase of 3 or 4 cents over last year, depending on the State's action.

Consideration of the $29,359,650 budget bill for the city's new fiscal year was postponed yesterday until tomorrow by the aldermanic Ways and Means Committee. The measure, pending since April 26, struck a legislative snag last week when sharp differences over the appropriations developed between the committee and the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

Chance for More Beer Revenue.

It was learned yesterday that the Aldermen and the Board of Estimate, comprising Mayor Dickmann, Comptroller Nolte and Aldermanic President Mason, were thinking of the possibility that an appreciable amount of revenue, to help meet the demands for additional allowances in the budget, might be realized from the city's recently granted authority for licensing 3.2 beer establishments. The city may charge these places, which have been variously estimated to number from 1000 to 5000, as much as $62.50 a year each. It has been thought that the number would be reduced, however, with the prospect of this additional cost. The State law permitting cities to tax and regulate 3.2 beer places became effective last Monday.

Consideration also has turned to the possibility of developing new sources of taxation. A survey may be made of the list of about 80 such sources prepared last year when the revenue question was more serious than now. The Board of Estimate has felt that additional income should be provided before it could assent to increases in the budget.

The Aldermen want the jobs of 131 dismissed park laborers restored, which would cost $120,000 to $140,000 a year. They also want more money allotted the Board of Children's Guardians, which has sought at least $67,300 more. The Ways and Means Committee also has proposed some miscellaneous increases amounting to $15,404, but it has advocated certain reductions of other items.

"Handout", a Book on Washington

news about lotteries or obscene matter. There is no postal control over other material. The Federal Trade Commission does censor some advertising matter, usually quack medicines and get-rich-quick schemes, as unfair trade practices.

The author's comment on radio broadcasting are equally ill-informed. He insists that the new Federal Communications Commission obtained a life and death power over broadcasting stations when it changed the practice said to have been followed by the old Federal Radio Commission of granting licenses for three years. The old radio commission granted licenses for three and six months, and this practice has been followed by the newer commission. The author declares that a station must send a representative to Washington to renew the license. In almost every instance, these licenses are renewed by mail.

A great deal of misinformation has been written about the President's press conferences and the author adds to the existing stock. Joslin has asserted that President Roosevelt has been helped by a "good press" because, among other things, he flatters the correspondents by joking with them and by calling a few by their first names. In answer to this Stephen Early, the President's press secretary, has replied that President Roosevelt is able to take care of himself when confronted by the "cross-examination" of several hundred newspaper men and is willing to answer their questions extemporaneously. The author of "Handout" insists that there is a well-organized plan to protect the President from embarrassing questions, and flatly states that "it is an unwritten law that any White House scribe who wishes to ask the President a question at the coming conference must tip off Early, the President's press secretary, to that question at least one day in advance of the conference."

No Reason to Tip Off.

The 200 correspondents who attend the conferences will testify that this is not so. There is no reason for "tipping off" Early or anyone else. The conferences are held on Wednesday morning and Friday afternoon. Any Washington correspondent of ordinary experience can fairly accurately forecast an hour before the conference almost every question that will be asked the President. The President is an expert at dodging a question he doesn't want to answer and he can flash the much-publicized smile when refusing to comment. The conferences have gone on for more than two years and his adroitness and quick thinking have proved him equal to any emergency. He does not require written questions.

"Handout" credits President Hoover with originating the written question and answer conference. As every student in a school of journalism knows, the system was started by President Harding after his answer to a question contradicted an answer given at the State Department.

"Michael" seems to think that the written questions deprived the correspondents of an advantage. "The written question and answer system," he says, "gave the President a chance to think and prevented the press from catching him unawares and tricking him into revealing something he did not intend to announce at the time."

This would indicate that "Michael" believes it is the privilege or duty of a newspaper man to "trick" the person he is interviewing. Even unscrupulous reporters in Washington found out long ago that it does not pay to "trick" public officials or other prominent persons.

A Broad Statement.

"Handout" finds the White House reporters are subservient to the President because all of them are hoping that they will be selected to succeed Early as press secretary.

"White House scribes are human beings," the book observes. "A job on the White House secretariat pays much, much more than any of them draw from their newspapers and syndicates."

"Any of them" is inclusive language. At least some of the correspondents attending the conferences receive more than Early.

It may be noted that Early was guilty of broad language when he said that the President was open to cross-examination by the reporters. There is an unwritten law at the conferences. It is that the reporter shall not pursue his questioning if the President indicates that he does not wish to answer it. A reporter once tried to pin the President down for an answer and was rebuked by the statement that there would be no cross-examination.

The Roosevelt system has given the President a "good press," and he has made the most of his opportunities. The reporters know that he uses the conferences for his own administrative and political purposes. Every other President has tried to do the same thing. The picturesque Coolidge made good copy, but Hoover, who had been a rich news source while Secretary of Commerce, was a dismal failure at White House conferences. Although written questions were submitted, he refused to answer the more important ones. Many conferences were canceled and the reporters, other than those attached to the White House, quit going to the White House.

The Postal Surplus.

Like Frank Kent and other avowed critics of the New Deal and all its works, the author of "Handout" cites the news release by the Postoffice Department last summer on the alleged "surplus of $12,000,000 in the Postoffice Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934. That news release was typical of others issued by departments in the 'Roosevelt Government as well as in previous administrations. It put the best possible light on the activities of the department.

"Michael" neglected to get straight the chronology of this release. He quotes from the department's annual report that Postmaster General Farley claimed "a net operating postal surplus of $12,161,415.05," and declares that this "was greeted with paeans of praise from all corners of the nation."

Such was not the case. In July, 1934, the department issued a carefully worded news release indicating that the postoffice had a pre-audit "postal surplus" of about $5,000,000. Far down in the release was the information that the air and ocean mail and other subsidies had been subtracted from the expenditures before arriving at the surplus. Perhaps it was the intention of the department to leave the impression that the department was out of the red and would require no deficiency appropriation. But it was the duty of the Washington correspondent to find the catch, or if credit was due, to give it. The Post-Dispatch man found the catch.

At the end of his book, "Michael" gives the "who's who of propaganda," adding that it is made up almost entirely of those added to the payroll since March 4, 1933. It is an incomplete list, omitting many names that could be included, and including persons who, like Michael J. McDermott and Walter Foote of the State Department, who have been in the Division of Current Information for years.

Author's Conclusions.

"Under President Roosevelt," the author concludes," we find the newspaper staffs and syndicate offices of Washington stripped of their best men by the simple process of offering them higher salaries in the service of the Government. Furthermore, we find the personnel of every government department and agency crowded with trained newspaper men and women, all inducted into Government service since March 4, 1933, and employed under specially created titles. Their duties, investigation reveals, are to 'create' news and control its dissemination to the public."

As a Washington correspondent of more than 12 years' residence, the present writer can find much fault with the Government press agents. An arrangement entirely satisfactory to the reporters and Government officials never will be worked out. More than 500 reporters are entitled to admission to the Congressional press galleries and the White House conferences. The Associated Press has a staff of 71, the United Press, 29, the Hearsts services, 29 and the New York Times 18. The 500 reporters have their own sources of information in addition to the Government press agents. Republican, Progressive, and anti-administration Democrats are eager to help them if they can find anything the Administration is trying to hide or to exploit.

The New Deal has created a hundred or more Government agencies scattered over downtown Washington. The Government press agents prepare the news of their divisions and make it available to messengers and send it to the National Press Club. The most industrious reporter could not hope to cover all of them in a day.

An Old Practice.

"Prior to the advent of the present administration," the book says, "when a newspaper man wished information from any Government department, he went to the division or bureau chief handling the question."

That has not been so since the war. The channelization of news, far worse than at present occurred under Coolidge and Hoover in the Departments of Justice, State, War and Navy. Under the Hoover administration "leaks" were thoroughly investigated and the offending officials were reprimanded.

There has been a great deal of propaganda by this administration. The solution is not to close down the news of Washington by forbidding the departments to tell what they are doing—even if they are putting their best foot forward — but to meet it by the facts. "Handout" with its inaccuracies and absurdities, does a disservice by misrepresenting the situation.

ST. LOUIS WOMAN CRITICISES CARE OF MENTAL DEFECTIVES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 11.—The public day schools for mental defectives in St. Louis were praised as "the best on the continent," but the St. Louis Training School for the Feeble-Minded, a residential institution, was criticized for its alleged insufficient and politically appointed personnel, in a talk yesterday by Mrs. Owen D. Fender of St. Louis before the annual conference here of the Missouri Association for Social Welfare.

Mrs. Fender spoke on "The Care of the Feeble-Minded in Missouri," drawing part of her data from a study by Miss Thelma Brown, Washington University graduate student in social work. Care of mental defectives in the State is handled in two public institutions, the Missouri State School at Marshall and the St. Louis Training School, a city institution.

"At the St. Louis Training School, as in the Missouri State School," Mrs. Fender said, "there seems to be personnel enough for the upkeep of the physical plant and the farm but there is a distinct lack in the personnel of the teaching and supervisory staff. It is unfortunate that the economics in regard to personnel are practiced where the detriment is greatest. Appointments are purely political and the tenure of office dependent on the powers in office. The qualifications, as a result, are merely party allegiance. For the year 1933-34, the appropriation for salaries was $70,108, and for supplies and expenses, $41,815, a total of $111,923. With 540 inmates, the cost of upkeep is about $207 for each person."

WALTHER LEAGUE WORK PLAN

Lutherans Alarmed at Unemployment Among Youthful Members.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 11.—Alarmed at unemployment among members of the international Walther league of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, the league's committee on education and leisure time conferred here yesterday on a program to employ profitably the leisure time of Lutheran youth.

The Rev. A. R. Kretzman, league secretary, said the program, to include work projects for the unemployed, a nation-wide athletic program, and an intense campaign of Bible study, would be submitted to the league's international conference July 14 to 18 in St. Louis, for approval.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 12, 1935.

Pre-Season Program For Opera Dedication

Soloists From "Teresina" to Appear With Choruses in All-Musical Show Sunday, May 26.

ST. LOUIS will get its first glimpse of what the new Municipal Opera holds two weeks from today, when a special concert is held to dedicate the first unit of the reconstruction plan at the theater in Forest Park.

The show, beginning at 3 o'clock the afternoon of May 26 will be of an entirely musical character, presenting the augmented dancing chorus of girls, the new group of men dancers and the all-St. Louis singing chorus of 92, together with soloists and members of the cast of Oscar Straus' "Teresina," the operetta which will open the season on Monday night, June 3. "Teresina" will be having its American premiere at Municipal Opera.

The entertainment will be open to the public, with no admission charge, no speeches and only Ray Atwell and Leslie Adams serving as masters of ceremonies to introduce the various numbers.

Among the stars of "Teresina," who will take part in the dedicatory concert are: Evelyn Herbert, prima donna soprano; Robert Halliday, baritone; Adams, who is to play the role of Napoleon; Atwell, the comedian; Polly Dille, ingenue; Una Val, dancer; Rex Weber, the man who made famous that song "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime"; and Julianna, St. Louis dancer, who, has achieved a New York reputation, and will be seen in many of the season's productions. The program also offers two St. Louis favorites, Gladys Baxter, prima donna soprano, who appears as the Princess Borghese in "Teresina," and Charles Gallagher, basso, who was a member of the Municipal Opera casts in 1919, 1921 and 1928 and who is nationally distinguished as a singer, in oratorio and in recitals as well as being a favorite in light opera roles.

THE unit being dedicated is a reconstruction of Municipal Opera's stage, which brings the open air theater, for the first time, into direct relation to modern science, skill and artistic ideals in the production of modern musical entertainment. For the Municipal Theater Association, after 17 years of attempting to adapt its productions to a tradition of lighting, which grew up in the indoor theater, and served inadequately outdoors, this year determined to strike out boldly and create a new theater, which is designed particularly for the rapid tempos and the mechanistic rhythms of today. And this first unit, designed by Hugo Graf, is the beginning of a program which is in a sense experimental, but, which in the ultimate, is designed to give the utmost flexibility in movement and pace to modern musical productions.

The concert is made possible by the co-operation of the Musicians' Mutual Benefit Association, and the St. Louis Theatrical Brotherhood who donated their services for the purpose of the dedication.

New Chamber Music Series Next Season

THE St. Louis Chamber Music Society, which ended its first season this spring with indications that the organization is assured of increasingly enthusiastic public support, is going ahead with preliminary plans for the forthcoming season. Another series of three concerts is planned.

A campaign to secure new memberships is now in progress. It is intended to bring the number of subscriptions up to the prescribed maximum—a regular audience of 400. Scipione Guidi, concertmaster and assistant conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, will continue in charge of program arrangement and will follow the original policy as laid down at the time the society was founded.

While it is as yet too early to announce more than tentative plans, Guidi has given assurances that at least one of the important five late string quartets of Beethoven will be included. If sufficient financial support can be obtained, the programs will also include a performance of Stravinsky's "L'histoire de Soldat," a trio for piano, clarinet and violin.

The board of directors was recently enlarged by the addition of four new members. It now consists of Mrs. M. A. Goldstein, Mrs. Lionberger Davis, Mrs. O. K. Bovard, Miss Mary Bolland Taussig, Miss Martha Love, Miss Adelaide Mahaffey, Thomas B. Sherman, J. Lesser Goldman and W. J. Polk Jr.

Male Trios Featured At the Highlands

Harry Lange and Roger Fox will feature male trios at Forest Park Highlands this week. Lange's Commanders, in the free entertainment bill, beginning today, will have Eddie Pitts, Al Swenson and Frank Sedlac as vocalists in "Mirthful and Melodious Moments." In the ballroom Fox's musicmakers will present Art Lepper, Edward Erbs and Fox in harmony numbers, with June Curran and Lepper offering several juvenile vocal skits.

The Week's New Films

By Colvin McPherson

WHETHER "Mark of the Vampire" a Loew's State, makes sense is debatable. I have a kind of impulse, when class is over, to hold up my hand and ask why this was done or that, or what became of somebody who disappeared in the second or third reel. But the surprise ending is such a flabbergasting about-face that it would take too long to check up on the details. The fact remains that "Mark of the Vampire" grants the happy release from reality as long as it is on the screen, so why bother whether it makes sense, at least in this day and age? Tod Browning, widely experienced in the pseudo-chiropractic art of making a spine creep, goes after the idea with both hands. Mists drift, insects crawl, lights go out, chains rattle, old castle halls are silent to perfection, corpses play dead beautifully. And the crickets sing so realistically as to make even a sitter in the balcony imagine he is two levels lower than the Eighth Street tunnel. Then, just when the timid patron is about to start wondering if his own Cousin Fred's strange actions could mean that he is under the spell of the blood-suckers, the entire plot is shifted and "'Mark of the Vampire' starts getting reasonable. A little too late in the day for full success, that change in pace still provides an absorbing interest. "Mark of the Vampire" is definitely on the right side of the amusement ledger. The management extends a unique courtesy to its patrons by allowing no one to come in during the last five minutes. Also on Loew's bill are 'One New York Night" and a color cartoon, "The Calico Dragon." "One New York Night" teams up Una Merkel and Franchot Tone, as telephone girl in a big New York hotel and a guest from the West. Tone attempts to solve a murder mystery, with even the corpse eluding him at first. Una also is bent on tracking down her man, who is Tone. "The Calico Dragon" deserves praise for its amusing backgrounds, its unpretentious humor.

Stolen Harmony.

IRREGARDLESS of the possible amusement for Walter Winchell, a critic may say in all seriousness that Ben Bernie, as an orchestra leader, is a fine actor. In "Stolen Harmony," at the Orpheum, he makes Master George Raft and little Miss Grace Bradley look like two specialty numbers in the children's day follies. Such is to be expected, but Bernie gives his part the extra something which he has professed to find only in certain malt products. The plot wanders far afield. It starts in Sing Sing penitentiary, where Bernie finds George Raft playing a saxophone, and follows Bernie, his band and Raft as they go about the country playing one-night stand stage shows. In St. Louis, Raft comes under a cloud of suspicion when the Bernie treasury is robbed, but at least keeps an explanation. Somewhere between St. Louis and Kansas City (I figure Mineola, Montgomery County), the bus in which they travel is captured by a Dillinger gang and the ensemble forced to put on a command performance for the benefit of the assembled hoodlums. It is Raft who finally clears up everything and metes out justice here and there. Bernie's program, strung along the itinerary, clicks at the level of his radio efforts. One number, "Fagan, Youse Is a Viper," would have been a knockout if better photographed and recorded. A scene where the hoodlums talk about their penitentiaries as alma maters contains much clever humor. The gun battle finish looks familiar and of the vintage of gang movies. "Stolen Harmony" is tangled up with "Mary Jane's Pa," an Aline McMahon-Guy Kibbee comedy that should be the limit of such ventures. Based on the life of a tramp printer, it has countless technical faults, countless old wheezes and a child actress who talks the arms off the seats.

Party Wire.

A USUAL Hollywood version of one's home town is to be found in "Party Wire" at the Fox. For an out-and-out comedy, many flaws might be overlooked but for what is intended to be a serious drama, repeating the familiar story of the evil of small-town gossip, judgment must be on the merits of the case. "Party Wire" is merely mediocre in spite of fine performances by Victor Jory, Jean Arthur and Helen Lowell. Victor arrives home to take over the biggest business in town—a dairy—and immediately falls for Jean. Four old gossips listening in over Mr. Bell's useful little gadget hear something to which they give the worst possible interpretation. Jean is disgraced and when things look black enough, her papa goes into the woodshed and tries to take a dose of gun-shot. But his aim is bad and the wicked old sisters discover they were all wrong. Happiness ahead, then. The second Fox picture is "Ladies Love Danger," a dilution of the "Thin Man" idea. Gilbert Roland and Mona Barrie, who were teamed rather to mutual advantage in "Mystery Woman," are at the mercy of an implausible tale about several murders. (How many I do not recall off hand, but probably within game law limits for the day's bag.) Roland flutters about backstage at a theater, picking up clews and Mona becomes a bar-fly at his apartment. The Fox is showing, at some periods of the day, a hilarious short subject with Buster Keaton in it. It recalls, somewhat pitifully, what grand comedy Keaton had developed when the talkies came along and took audiences elsewhere. May his return to stardom be imminent.

G-Men.

JAMES CAGNEY, once one of the worst rats among movie gangsters, has gone so admirably straight in "G-Men," now in its second week at the Shubert, that he is likely to become a symbol of law and order. One other thing is plain. The movie-going public, from Junior, age 10, to granddad, likes a lot of gun-play and whether it is Dillinger or "G-Men" giving the works, makes no distinction. Cagney, incidentally, need not worry about having become a turn-coat. His brother, William, is still upholding the dishonor of the family as a gangster in "Stolen Harmony" at the Orpheum.

"THE BRIDE OF FRANKENSTEIN" is still at the Missouri. It was advertised as a "horror" picture but most of the populace will agree that it is the animated cartoon and "Men of the Hour," a hasty pudding, the horror film.

Tastes of Movie-Going Public Improve, According to Critics

IN THE motion picture industry, Film Daily, a trade publication, performs those services which the Literary Digest does in the field of national politics. Film Daily, for instance, is the publication which draws up, from the vote of motion picture critics, that annual summary known as the "Ten Best Pictures."

At this season of the year, its editors conduct a forum for those same critics, inviting their comment on phases of film production and compiling the answers to several set questions. Results from the present poll so far have shown several definite conclusions.

The critics, in one instance, said that the decency drive has not harmed the entertainment value of the movies. They stand about 50-50 on the question of a boost in prices. A 65 per cent majority is for elimination of double-feature bills in favor of balanced programs.

Most significant is that the critics see an improved taste on the part of movie-goers. Nearly all agree that what audiences are demanding is entertainment and not a few gaping glances at a star who has been built into box-office prominence. A striking decrease in fan-mail in the last year is cited as evidence that the screen play is the thing.

IN SUCH circumstances, it may be noted that the producers themselves have been following the trend, yet in a way detrimental to the screen. The critics complain that the emphasis on the play does not mean it should be duplicated again and again.

The glittering example of the influence one picture can have may be found in the case of "It Happened One Night," such an alchemist's dream of golden entertainment that it is still playing to return engagements. Its romance between a penniless young man and a wealthy young woman was seized upon immediately as a fine solution of the romantic problem today.

Its delightful carrot-eating scene has been duplicated in scenes where young men and women eat popcorn ("The Gilded Lady"), peanuts ("When Strangers Meet") and gumdrops ("Vagabond Lady"). Even weddings have changed, with the stroll up the aisle a time to discuss any perplexity.

"The Thin Man" also has been copied ad infinitum. Since William Powell and Myrna Loy began hanging onto bottles with infantile urgency, and finding a murder particularly good laughing-stock, the movie murders have all gone funny. Drinking now occurs long before the wake and long after. Coroners have become either prototypes of Ned Sparks or Groucho Marx.

If the producers wish to keep pace with the more exacting audience, they probably will find it well to lay to rest several other old situations which are now no more amusing than anything else mummified.

THERE is, for instance, that trick of having the love-hungry hero gaze at feminine radiance, while the lady herself gives a flower or horse or Mont Blanc the once-over. The lady says, "Lovely, isn't she?" And the ogling Romeo, agrees, deceivingly, "I'll say!" all the while knowing they're not talking about the same thing.

Somewhere the film canners got a laugh out of an audience by having a pair of lovers hold up traffic to carry on their sweet communion. It has obtained a chain-letter circulation.

In the last class of cuteness is the bad-timing of movie laughter, with the two performers still in hysterics after the audience has straightened its face. Too many dancers in love remain on the floor after the music has stopped, too many servants peek through keyholes and fall inside when the door is opened.

Granting that it is the unalienable right of every young thing to cry on a bed when her feelings are hurt, the custom seems to have gone beyond the unique. A suggestion is that feelings be hurt in an airplane, in an elevator between floors or in a swimming-pool.

But worse than the dust storms of this spring is the new name for woman-kind. "Toots"!

The Jooss European Ballet will appear in St. Louis next season, under auspices of the Civic Music League, which has just announced the modern dance ensemble as its fifth attraction.

The Jooss Ballet came to the United States two seasons ago for an extensive tour, but proved so popular in New York that it gave 50 performances there and returned to Europe. Its "Green Table," a satire which attracted worldwide attention, will be featured on the Civic Music League program, with a romantic ballet, "A Ball in Old Vienna" and "Impressions of a Big City," ballet with music by Alexander Tansman.

Day of Broomstick Bird Gone From Film Studios

Property Man Bewails Passing of Era When Ostriches Were Created on Spur of Moment.

By H. H. NIEMEYER.

HOLLYWOOD, May 11.

TEMPUS fugits out here in this lazy California climate just as does back in Missouri and men keep fugiting with it, though bit more slowly. Changes creep into the picture business mu to the disgust of the old timers who don't care much for new idea For one thing the prop boy—he may be 60 years old or more but is still a prop BOY—isn't what he used to be. We were talking th other day to Fred Warrington who is the head prop artist at one the large studios. He was going over a lot of blue order sheets telling him what properties to prepare—and giving him days, week even months, to get them together.

"It's too easy," wailed Warrington. "Here is a long list things to dig up for the coming picture 'Captain Blood' and the cas isn't even assembled yet or even chosen. Before it is out of the hand of the typewriting department the property boys know exactly wha will be wanted. We get the orders and we fill 'em. There's nothin to it. The romance has all gone out of the business. But there wa a time—" and a far away look came into Warrington's eyes as he began reaching into the past.

"Sixteen years ago I was prop boy for Educational Films," h said. "We were making a picture called 'Robinson Crusoe.' Lloy Hamilton was the star, Jack White the director and the gag man wa Lloyd Bacon.

"Gag men were important in those days. No one ever thought writing a script. The company went out on location without th slightest idea of what the stor was going to be. Before ever scene, the gag man and the directo figured out what they would do next. That made it hard for the prop boy.

"The prop boy was everything. He was set designer and set dresser, carpenter, seamstress, makeup man, assistant director and powder man. On the side he was an actor. I it was a picture with children i it, he kept milk and bottles in hi prop box and fed the babies.

"On the morning I refer to, White and Bacon suddenly decided to put Robinson Crusoe in the picture. There was no one to play the part, so they picked me. Naturally I had brought along no costume for Crusoe. Maybe we didn't know when we started out what the comedy was going to be, I don't remember. I dug around in my truck and found some goat skins, got a needle and thread and in half an hour I was Crusoe. But I also was the prop man. I acted part of the time and made props part of the time. We needed cocoanuts. I went down to a little restaurant and bought some soup bowls. Two soup bowls covered with plaster made very fine cocoanuts. Along about 4 o'clock Bac and White decided they wanted a ostrich.

"NOW a prop boy is the original 'yes man.' There is no such word as 'no' in his vocabulary even today. When I was told to get an ostrich there was nothing to do but get one. There were no ostriches in Santa Monica so I made one out of broomsticks, canvas, wire and plaster. Then I drove into a canyon, found a hous with a chicken yard and in a little while had all the ostrich feathe I needed. It wasn't a very good looking bird but that didn't make any difference. White then wanted ostrich eggs. Two soup bowls covered with plaster made an excellent egg."

That wasn't the only time Warrington had to use his ingenuity. On one occasion, his company was making a comedy in Santa Barbara. A bath tub was needed, one of those old tin tubs so popular on Saturday nights in the Gay Nineties. In an ancient hotel a number of the tubs were located, but the management refused to sell or rent them. They needed the tubs for the guests. Immediately Warrington and another member of the company became guests. They registered and went to their room. the middle of the night they disconnected the tub, lowered it out of a window and departed with it. After the bathtub scene was shot, they sent back the tub and a check to cover the rental.

"That never happens now," said Warrington, and he seemed regretful. "In 'Page Miss Glory' they needed bathtubs for the hotel sequence. The prop boy didn't steal them. He sent us an order and we went to the finest plumbing store in town. You see, this business losing its glamor."

Modern methods have taken the fun out of the prop boys' profession, Warrington said. But pictures have improved. When a company goes out on location these days all the props needed are carried in a four or five-ton truck. The prop boy knows when he starts out what the script calls for in the way of props. And every prop is correct as to detail and period. Soup bowls don't become cocoanuts any more. Suits of underwear don't become dummies.

"But the modern prop boy wouldn't know how to make a motorcycle climb a telephone pole," said Warrington. "He couldn't produce in a moment's notice a car that would fold up like an accordion. He couldn't play Robinson Crusoe or produce out of his hat an alarm clock that would explode. And he certainly wouldn't be called upon to get a tin bathtub through a hotel window."

The Municipal Theater stage as it will look this summer with the new $25,000 lighting towers. From a drawing by the architect, Hugo Graf.

The Municipal Opera's New Fifty-Foot Light Towers

Modern in Design They Will Light the Stage More Completely, Eliminate Shadows and at the Same Time Provide a More Striking Frame for the Stage

By ELLWOOD DOUGLASS

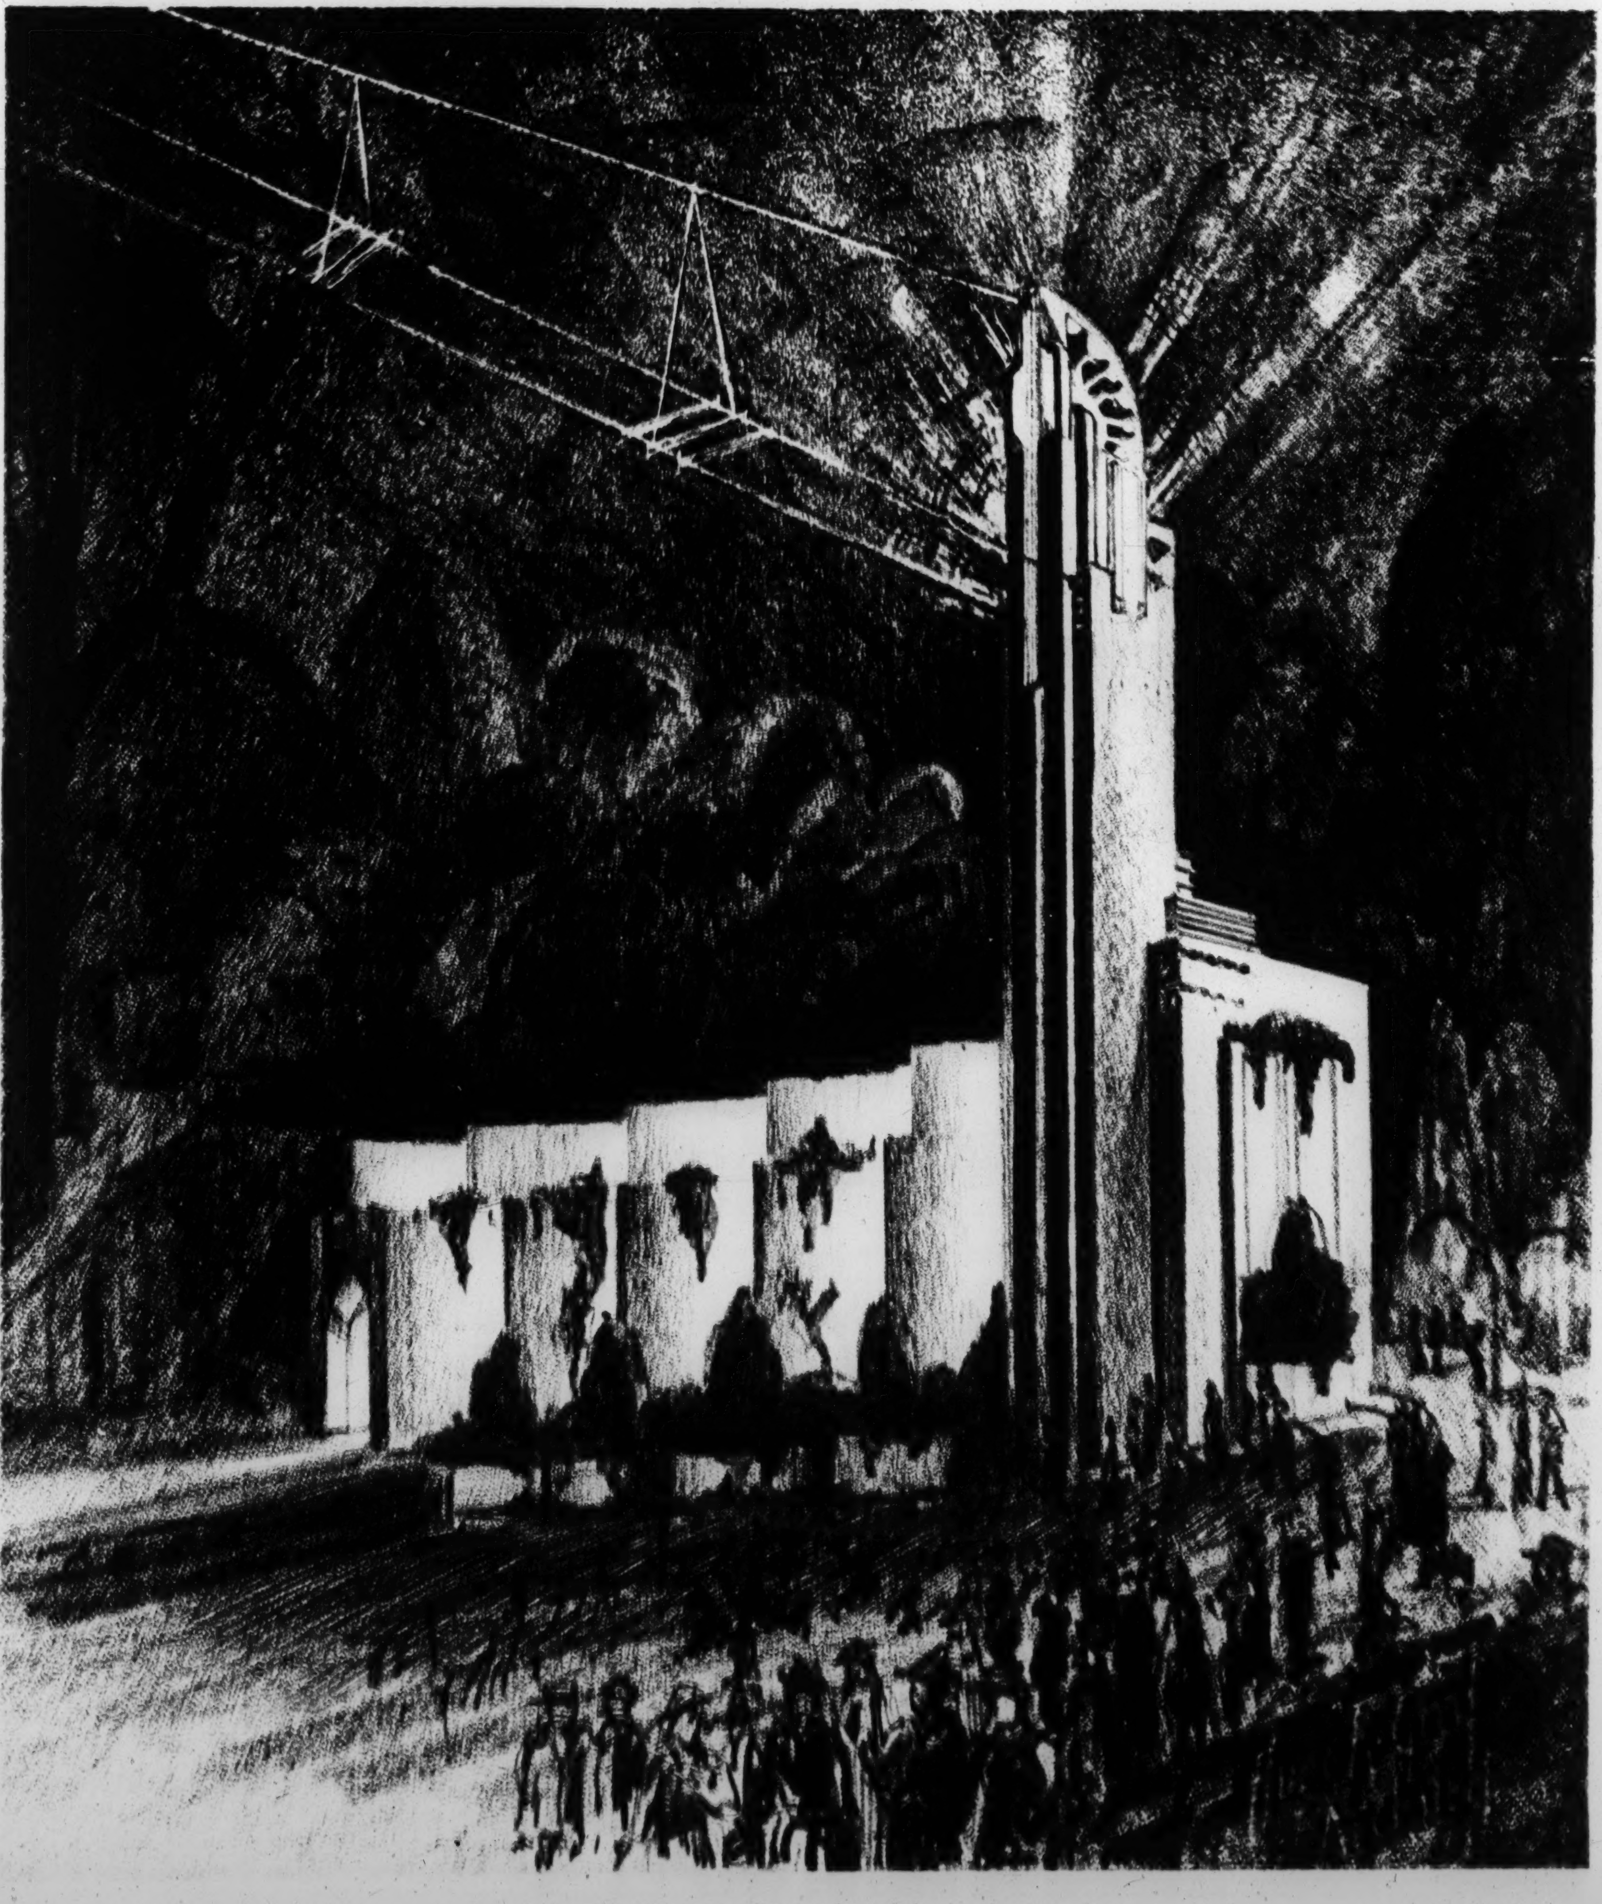
Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff



One of the modernistic towers, from a detailed drawing by the architect.

THE Municipal Theater is going modern. In a pair of 50-foot light towers flanking the proscenium it has become the first open air theater in this country to forget about the Greeks and turn to the planes and masses of a later trend in design.

Its object, however, is not a display of modernism. The aim rather is simplicity and efficiency. The modern aspect is no indication that the stage furniture of the seventeenth season, opening June 3, will look, for example, like the modernistic houses at the Chicago fair. The tower design is "functional"; as, says Hugo Graf, the architect, "all architecture ought to be."

Immediately, its function is to eliminate the "flat" lighting that indoor theaters outgrew decades ago and to provide an illumination that will do away with shadows and bring out the full roundness of contours on the stage. In meeting that requirement, the architect has designed the towers to bring out the full possibilities on the vast stage—and the accentuated technique of suggestion that characterizes some modern stagecraft is only one of them.

The towers are truly a long way from the dog-kennel and cracker-box school of design that characterized that stage nearly two decades ago. But their modern simplicity was selected as fitting in with a medieval stage as well as the modernistic. And in more than appearance they are calculated to allow a new freedom in doing away with artificial scenery, where occasion offers, and relying on the scenic assets provided by nature in the Forest Park theater.

For one thing, the towers bring the far corners of the stage, and even the bridge at the rear, for the first time in range of the main lighting system. That bridge has been made part of the show only once or twice in the past 16 seasons of opera, and just remembering the difficulties makes Ralf Toensfeldt, director in charge of lighting, grin ruefully and shake his head.

Traditionally chief among the natural assets have been the twin oaks. Much of their effect has been sacrificed to the necessity of bringing the wings nearer to stage center, so that the stately trunks were hidden and the green boughs stuck up over the tormentors at the sides. This was required not only by the revolving stage, installed a few years ago, but by the exigencies of promptly clearing the stage. The new towers provide double exits at each side, so that, on occasion, the full 150-foot width may be used—with the oaks intact.

Just as great an improvement was considered for situations which demand a great deal of construction on the stage. The new towers provide a mass and balance at the sides which was lacking in the old 18-foot light "towers." The effect is to minimize the distracting influence of the tree-tops where they have no part in the setting and to bring the stage into proper focus.

The towers were designed by Graf only after first-hand study of modern theater equipment which took him from Radio City to the Hollywood Bowl. Construction began in early spring and is to be completed this week at a cost of about $25,000.

They are, as Toensfeldt says, just one step, though a major one, in the evolution of the theater that began as a natural hillside with the Shakespeare Tercentenary production of "As You Like It" in 1916.

THE old 18-foot towers threw a concentrated blast of light directly in the performers' eyes, flattening contours, accentuating angles, casting great shadows that stretched in two directions toward the rear corners of the stage.

Spotlights in the new towers are 40 feet high, well about the "critical angle" of the actors' vision, which is 15 degrees above the horizontal. "Rounded" illumination, smoothing out the flattened surfaces and angular shadows of the old lighting system, is provided by floodlights scattered along the entire height of the towers.

Central overhead lights are provided on a new and unobtrusive cable bridge swung between the towers, with a catwalk for making direct adjustment. Formerly it was necessary to set the lights and then hoist them aloft. Amplifiers also are suspended from the bridge, a little higher and nearer the audience than formerly, with expected improvement in acoustic effects.

As shown on this page, each tower is flanked by "setback" cubicles about seven feet wide. The set-back portions extend seven feet higher than their respective bases, which range from 13 to 16 feet tall. The cubicles, steel and concrete surfaced with stucco, are finished in a neutral gray-green, assuming any desired tint from indirect colored lights to be turned on as the stage is darkened in intermission.

The American Girl Who Is Becoming a Bullfighter

Portia Portar.

Why Eighteen-Year-Old Portia Portar Has Been Practicing the Perilous Art of the Sword and the Banderillo.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

MEXICO, D. F.

A GROUP of corrida enthusiasts were treated recently to the spectacle of a slim young American girl standing in the sunlit sand of a plaza de toros, making passes at a short-tempered bull. She made the passes with a cape, and succeeded in irritating the bull considerably. He attempted in an eminently satisfactory manner to murder her.

The girl began with three veronicas, the traditional pass which is designed to acquaint the matador with the fighting style of his adversary, such as whether the animal follows the cape or hooks to one side. Her feet firmly fixed, she ran the cape slowly with her arms close to her body, in the approved fashion. Then she executed the gaoneras, a ticklish business, in which the body is exposed to the horns while half the cape is extended behind the back to attract the bull. Finally, she did the revolveras, a slow, whirling pass intended to tire the animal.

It was quite graceful and conventional and dangerous. The bull that kept rushing at the girl was only a 2-year-old, lacking the weight and fighting ability of a mature animal, but it didn't lack belligerency and was capable of inflicting as much damage as anyone would care to assimilate. And the girl with the cape was just learning the game; she was facing a live bull for the first time, testing how well she had learned some of the fundamental maneuvers of the matador's art. The bullfighting experts and fans who had been invited to witness this exhibition in a private bull ring in the suburbs of Tacuba and to criticise the novice's style did some hearty cheering for Miss Portia Portar.

Eighteen years old, dark and pretty, Miss Portar came here to dance and remained to study bullfighting. Three times since that private demonstration at Tacuba she has faced a young bull in the ring, and each time has shown improvement in the technique of gracefully and conventionally avoiding being killed by her opponent. Between these tests she has continued to train with a dummy bull, manipulated by men thoroughly acquainted with the battle tactics of the fighting animals. All beginners train in this way.

Two views of Miss Portar in training as a bullfighter.

According to her teachers, she has shown remarkable aptitude in learning the ancient art of cape and sword, although it will be some time before she can hope to appear in the regular plazas de toros.

Miss Portar is the daughter of a former St. Louisan who, before her marriage, was Angela Wirfs, daughter of E. J. Wirfs, manufacturer, now retired. An uncle of the girl, E. J. Wirfs Jr., lives at 3011 Lafayette avenue, St. Louis. As a child Miss Portar used to visit at her grandfather's home, which was then in suburban Glendale.

For some years Mrs. Portar has been a dancing instructor, and her daughter is a professional dancer. Portia has appeared on the stage in Europe and South America as well as the United States, and, in addition, has won prizes for musical compositions. She came to Mexico City, chaperoned by her mother, to do solo dancing at the casino known as the Foreign Club. Seeking further advancement in her art, she got the idea of learning something helpful from the sport that accounts for a good deal of death in the afternoon.

"I took up the study of bullfighting," she explains, "to learn the steps of a dance, but became fascinated with the art and decided to attempt to perfect myself in it, although I know that no woman has ever been able to compete on equal terms with men in the plazas. If possible, I hope to compete in a novillada (novice bullfight) within the next month.

"Even if I cannot master the art sufficiently to take it up as a profession I am sure that I will profit from my studies. The art of bullfighting and the art of dancing have much in common."

Her instructor is the famous Frascuelillo, a retired matador, whose real name is Jose Romero. Most of the leading matadors of the present day have studied under him, including Lorenzo Garza, the Monterrey youth whose sensationally risky style made him a hero in Mexico during the season just passed, and who was paid 20,000 pesos for each of his last two performances.

IN ADDITION to teaching Miss Portar use of the cape, Frascuelillo is showing her how to place the banderillas, the decorated darts stuck into the bull's back to goad him on after he has charged the horses; instructing her in the use of the muleta, the small red cloth with which the matador dominates the bull in preparation for killing him, and demonstrating the correct method of using the sword.

As yet she has fought only with the cape, but she intends to go through the whole routine of the bullfight as soon as her instructor says she is sufficiently skilled.

There is no suggestion of masculinity in Miss Portar, even when she is facing a bull. Black-haired, graceful, Latin in appearance, she recently won in competition with a dozen native Mexicans a contest in nearby Santa Anita, in which she was chosen the most beautiful woman wearing the "china poblana" costume, native to the State of Puebla.

Unless she decides to devote herself exclusively to bullfighting she hopes to make a trip around the world "to dance around it," she says, but "taking time off to shoot lions in Africa."

"$10 a Week for Life or $10,000 in Cash?"

The Interesting Alternative Facing the 1000 Employes of the Bank of England, Who Are Being Thrown Out of Their Jobs.

LONDON.

"WHAT'LL you have—$10 a week for life, or $10,000 cash?" Precisely that question, with obvious difficulties and equally obvious compensations, faced 1000 London clerks last month as they were forced out of their jobs at the Bank of England by American-made bookkeeping machinery.

The "Old Lady of Threadneedle Street," rather than put them out without a dime—despite the world-wide custom to that effect—offered them their choice of the £2 weekly stipend, or £2000 in a lump. Even with this comparatively generous gesture, however, the transaction means a handsome profit for the bank.

Stipends and lump payments—the bank has already calculated them by life expectancy tables, and so have the labor papers—total $12,550,000. But the savings to the bank on the average $30 weekly wage of the 1000 clerks will run to $1,500,000 in a 50-week year—enough to make good the $12,550,000 "gift" in little more than eight years, and to save the bank, at the end of the 37-year average life expectancy of the discharged clerks, a total of $42,950,000.

The clerks are young, 26 to 34 years old, so that the choice was doubly difficult. And in relation to age their decisions were especially surprising, for it was not the younger clerks, with the longest life expectancy, but the older who chose the life income.

Even at the average age, 30, the stipend had advantages to make the least improvident think twice. If he lived out his expected span, he would be assured of $19,240, nearly twice as much as the cash offer.

Actually, 700 took the lump payment and only 300 accepted the weekly income. On April 1 the first 300 were laid off, and, as the book-keeping and calculating machinery is put in operation, the others are to go. All have made their choice—and with a deal of public advice by the wealthy.

Sir Henry Austin, manufacturer of small motors, said he'd take the $10,000 and buy a partnership in a going business. They lacked experience in anything but banking, he pointed out, and to start their own business would be admirable, perhaps, but foolhardy."

Sir Henri Deterding agreed with him about the $10,000, but pointed out that, on the other hand, an assurance of $10 a week would enable a young man to take one of those positions with rotten pay but a future. He seemed to think that desirable. "We are too afraid today," said Sir Henry, "of doing something for the future."

H. Gordon Selfridge, formerly of Marshal Field's and now London's best known department store proprietor, spoke for the pension and a start out in the Empire—South Africa, or maybe South America. Alexander Korda disagreed with him about the choice—he preferred the cash—but agreed about the Empire.

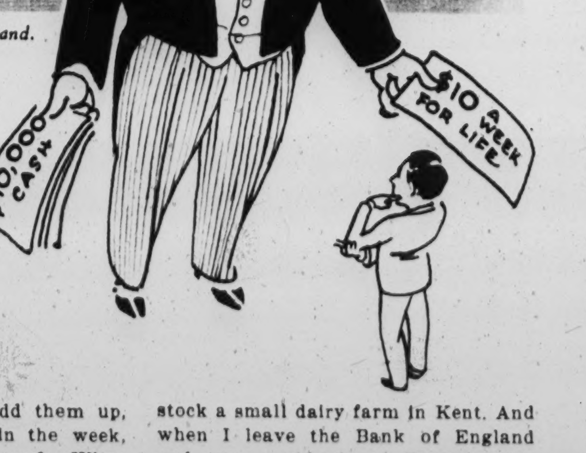
"Heavens alive!" said Sir Harry Brittain, capitalist, "I'd take the £2000 and do my best to make two million!"

But the clerks had ideas of their own. Only three of them felt like tackling the Empire. Four decided to try their hands in the United States—one at Detroit, another in some Gulf port, two on the Pacific coast.

"I'll tell you what £2000 means to us," said one of the clerks, a note examiner. "It means a new life It means a breakaway from work which crushes your spirit and belief in yourself.

"I'm not blaming the men who voted for the two-pound pension. Most of them are the older clerks, getting on to thirty-four or five and so burdened with family responsibilities that they are afraid to take a chance.

The Bank of England.



"Do you know what the life of a bank clerk means?—what it means to come into an office on Monday morning, to write figures in a ledger, and add them up, and do that every day in the week, and every week in the year? When you have done that for as long as some men you clutch at the chance of a regular income.

"But most of us looked at things differently. Look at me now.

"With £800 ($4000) I shall buy and stock a small dairy farm in Kent. And when I leave the Bank of England and turn my back on Threadneedle street I shall go down there and pitch into work with all my spirit, which is something you can never do in a job where you have to wait and wait to fill a dead man's shoes."

One is buying an apple-orchard in Oxfordshire; another a nursery near Worthing, and a third is turning to art.

Most of them, it appears, are going "back" to the soil—a career with which their training with "The Old Lady of Threadneedle Street" had not the remotest connection, and one which many observers expect to end in bankruptcy.

Perhaps the inner forces that lead them to the land are expressed in these bits from verses "To a Bank Clerk," by Lechmere Worrall, published in a London weekly:

To you who toil amidst the gold of

* * * * * *

To you whose meager pay for all this guardianship
So ill befits your breadth of charity
Pause, then, consider in thy wise
  inthinking
All that thou guardest cannot buy...

The blue of the skies on a summer day,
The smile of a child in dreamless sleep . . .

* * * *

The song of a bird on a morn in Spring,
The golden glow of a sunset eve,
The sheen of a dragon-fly on the wing,
The strands of a web that spiders
  weave . . . .

I see fair temples where great banks have stood
And in the place of cramped and hoarded gain
Palaces of plenty where the meek may seek
A rate of kindness unalloyed by pain.

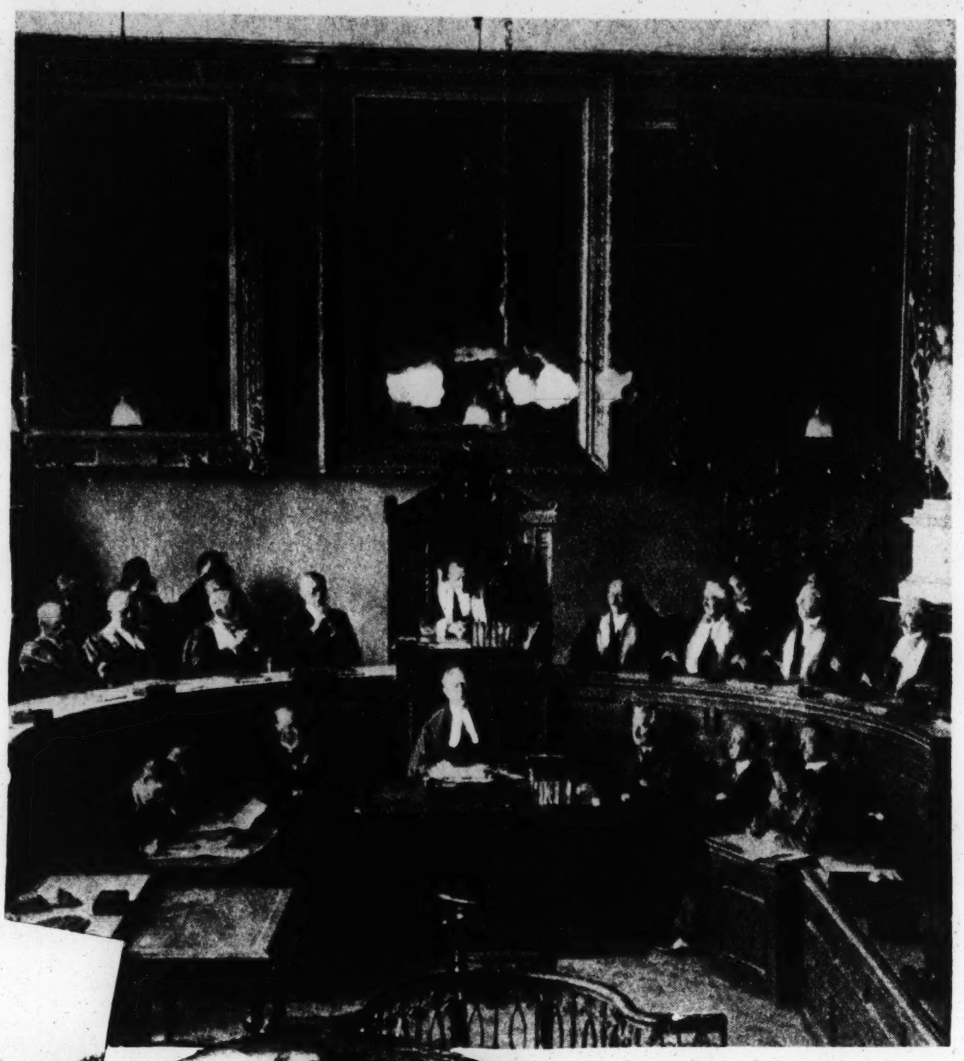
The Ancient Isle of Guernsey Condemns Its First Murderess

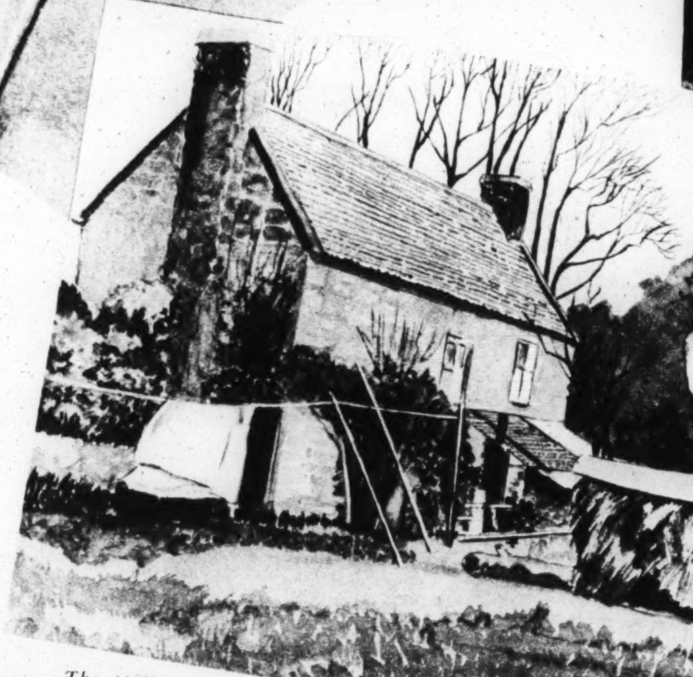
Madame Gertrude de la Mare.

By a Curious Legal Procedure That Is a Mixture of Modern and Archaic Justice, the Jurats of This Spot of Land in the English Channel Sentenced Madame Gertrude de la Mare to Death on a Charge of Killing Her Employer.

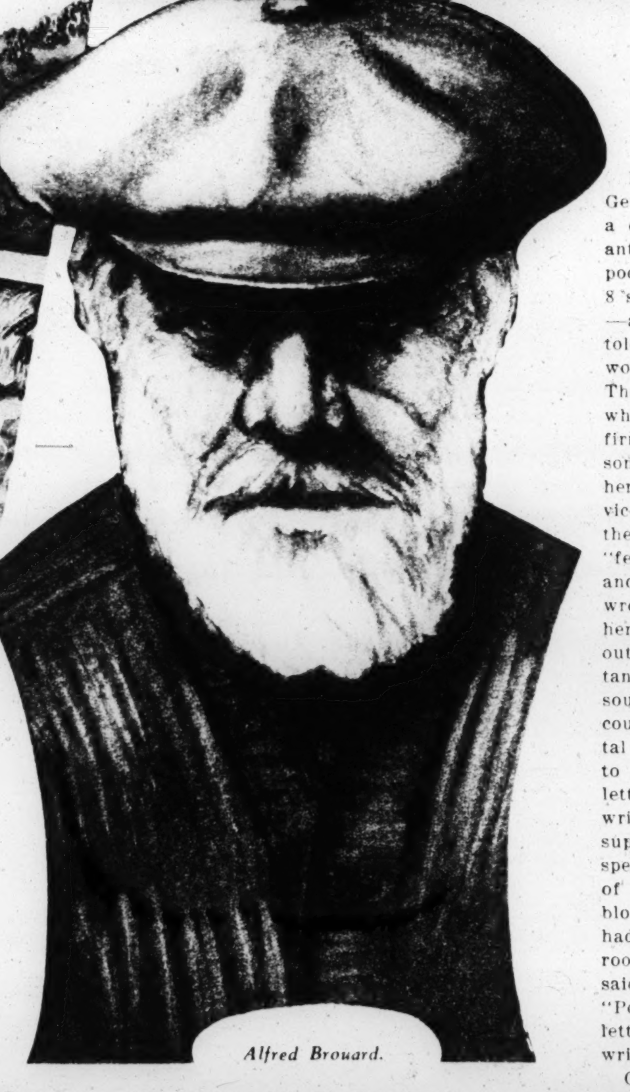


Courtroom where Mrs. de la Mare's trial was held.

Another view of Madame de la Mare.



The scene of the crime.



Alfred Brouard.

LONDON.

THE Island of Guernsey, which has been under the reign of law for centuries, had a new legal experience the other day. It convicted of murder and condemned to death a woman; it was the first time a woman had even been tried for that crime.

An obscure and lowly person, a humble toiler who, in the ordinary course of events, would never be heard of outside her own neighborhood, was the one responsible for the addition of this page to Guernsey history. Mrs. Gertrude Elizabeth de la Mare, who kept house for an elderly farmer and worked in his fields at need, was found guilty of having slit his throat and was condemned to hang for it.

Sharing public interest with the principal figure in the unique trial was the machinery of justice itself, part of a system which reflects both the French and English influences, to which the island has been subjected, and both modern and archaic ideas.

A sunny bit of land, about 25 square miles in area, lying in the English Channel, Guernsey was once a part of Normandy. It was attached to the English crown in the thirteenth century in the reign of King John of England. Largely agricultural, it is known throughout the world as the place of origin of the breed of cattle that bears its name. Despite British sovereignty, French is the official language of the island, and relics of the Norman feudal system appear in its local government. With several other of the channel islands, it forms a governmental division called the Bailiwick of Guernsey. A feature of the judicial system is that the trial juries are composed of a group of men who are selected for life and known as jurats. They are presided over by the Bailiff, whose position is similar to that of Judge. The jurats and Bailiff have administrative as well as judicial functions.

On the morning of February 6 of this year, police were summoned to the farm of Alfred Brouard at Le Camp Joinet, and found the farmer, who was 76 years old, dead in his bed, his throat cut. A bread knife a foot long was on the floor beside him. On a chest of drawers in the room was a letter marked "Police." It read:

Dear Sir: I am just leaving you a few lines to let you know I am doing this, as there is no blame attaching to Mrs. de la Mare. I know it is going to be very hard for her. Now the reason why I am doing so. I am always suffering and I know that I am a worry to the public and a worry to myself. One thing I strongly object to, that is, no relations to go into the house. They did not come before and I do not want them to go and worry her. I have made my will in favor of my housekeeper. I would never have found one to do what she has done for me. She had her faults but we all have. I hope the Lord will forgive me.—A. Brouard. Funeral arrangements to be left to Mrs. G. E. de la Mare."

Into the room where the dead man lay came Mrs. de la Mare. A rather comely, vigorous woman, 27 years old, she had been housekeeper for Brouard for more than two years. She was separated from her husband, Herbert, and their small daughter lived with her. It was the housekeeper who had the police called to the lonely farmhouse.

Looking down at the still figure on the bed, Mrs. de la Mare said: "Poor old man. What a fool! You have not got enough worry to go and do a thing like that."

Police Sergeant Charles le Lievre scrutinized her carefully. "Well," he said, "your clothes look all right." The woman faced him. "Yes, you can look at my clothes, you will not find any blood on them." After a moment she went on: "The old gentleman always used to say he would either hang himself or cut his throat. If it was not my bread knife I don't think I would take it as bad as I do."

A LITTLE later she told the policeman, "Mr. Brouard is always sharpening the knife." Then she spoke to her little daughter in the island patois: "Tell the constable what Mr Brouard used to say about Mummie's knife." The child clung to her dress and murmured, "Butcher."

"I suppose she is frightened," the mother said. "What she wants to say is that Mr. Brouard used to say every time he sharpened the knife that we would be able to butcher ourselves with it."

Before the day was over Mrs. de la Mare went to the Midland Bank, where Brouard had an account, and told the manager, Arthur E. le Masurier, of her employer's death. She gave the banker what purported to be Brouard's will, which stated, in part: "In case anything happens to me during such time Mrs. Gertrude de la Mare is in my employed I leave everything to her, furniture, money catel and everything else, now the house building and the five fields I leave also to her but if by law she is not entitle to it the property must be sold and her to have half the money rents due to me is to go to Mrs. Gertrude E. de la Mare."

Mrs. de la Mare was quite calm during her visit at the bank, even after the manager told her he could not sign the will, since Brouard was dead, and that he would have to turn it over to his solicitor or the police. Before she left, she remarked: "I hope you do not think I killed him."

Guernsey police nosed through the whitewashed farmhouse at Camp Joinet, examining, measuring, searching. A detective from Scotland Yard joined them. And presently Gertrude de la Mare was arrested, charged with murdering her employer and forging the purported will. In due time she went on trial before the Royal Court of Guernsey, sitting at St. Peter Port, the chief town of the island.

Rather like a scene from a costume play, to modern eyes, was the courtroom where the struggle for the life of the accused woman was waged. Here was the majesty of the law in full dress. In a semi-circle sat the 11 jurats—Guernsey's permanent jury—wearing purple robes. In the middle of the semi-circle was the Bailiff, A. W. Bell, presiding officer of the court. The attorneys in the case were: The two Crown officers of the island, A. J. Sherwill, the Procureur Delegue (Attorney General), and G. J. P. Ridgeway, the Controle, or Solicitor-General, and Advocates H. H. Randell and W. H. Arnold for the defense. The lawyers wore somber black gowns and bonnets like those of French barristers.

Proceedings began with a prayer—the Lord's Prayer, read in French by the Clerk of the Court, called the Greffier. Then Mrs. de la Mare was led through an underground passage from jail, and entered the courtroom. Beside her was a uniformed nurse in white headdress, who acted as warder. The indictment, to which the prisoner had pleaded previously, was read. It was in French, and it accused "Gertrude Elizabeth le Page, a native of the parish of Castel, separated from Herbert de la Mare, her husband," of having "either alone or with accomplices—in a condition devoid of the fear of God—feloniously killed and murdered Alfred Brouard." The forgery charge also was recited.

At the end of the first day's hearing the ancient convention known as the "Vue de Justice" was observed. The court journeyed by automobile—incongruous note—to the Brouard farm, and at the scene of the killing confronted the prisoner with a "reconstruction" of the death scene. In the dim light of the shuttered bedroom where Farmer Brouard died, Mrs. de la Mare explained to the court her version of how she discovered the body of her employer.

A POLICE officer impersonated the dead man, disposing himself on the bed at the prisoner's directions, in the attitude in which she said she saw Brouard when she went to awaken him on the morning of February 6. The knife was placed where she said she saw it that morning. In detail she explained and demonstrated the tragic tableaux, relating that as she climbed the stairs to call "the old gentleman," she saw the knife on the floor of his room; that she stepped just inside the room, peeped around the door, saw that Brouard was motionless, went to her own bedroom, got her child and went downstairs.

The grim business took two hours.

In contrast with this and other archaic forms observed in the trial were such modern touches in the evidence as test tubes and microscopic slides and the testimony of medical and handwriting experts.

It was brought out that Gertrude de la Mare had been a capable, hard-working servant to Brouard, and had been poorly paid—her wages were 8 shillings (about $2) a week—and poorly fed. She had been told that "the old gentleman" would reward her in his will. There was, too, a suggestion, which lacked definite confirmation, that Brouard had some sort of financial hold on her which kept her in his service. It was the prosecution's theory that she finally became "fed up" with the situation and killed her employer and wrote a spurious will to free herself from his service without losing the expected inheritance. The Crown counsel sought to show that Brouard could not have inflicted the fatal wound on himself. It sought to show that the will and the letter to the police had been written by the housekeeper. In support of this contention, Inspector W. R. Schulpher, head of the island police, exhibited blotting paper which he said he had found in the woman's room. It bore ink marks said to correspond to the word "Police" on the envelope of the letter purporting to have been written by Brouard.

On a dressing gown belonging to the housekeeper police said they found hairs similar to those in Brouard's beard—similar to those found on the bread knife; mounted on slides they were shown to the court.

One of the medical experts presented by the prosecution was the noted Sir Bernard Spilsbury, who has testified in many English criminal cases. He was allowed to testify against Mrs. de la Mare only after spirited objection by defense counsel on the ground that he had not been admitted to practice on Guernsey and had no more standing as a medical expert in that court "than a medicine man or witch doctor." The Procureur Delegue admitted that Sir Bernard might be subject to a fine for aiding him, but he hardly expected to prosecute him for it. The Bailiff said: "There is no disputing the qualifications of Sir Bernard Spilsbury. If he does give evidence today it is possible that he may commit an offense, but in a case of this kind we are trying a person on a charge of murder, and we think the court should have the very best evidence at their disposal." So he overruled the defense objection, and the jurats sustained him. So Spilsbury gave learned opinions concerning the cut in Boruard's throat, the scrapings from walls and ceilings, shown in test tubes, and told why he thought the wound was not self-inflicted. Dr. Roche Lynch, Home Office analyst, also testified for the prosecution.

One of the most damaging witnesses against the woman on trial was her mother, Mrs. Victorine le Page. She said that on February 3, three days before the killing, her daughter told her she had found Brouard with his throat cut. "She was very upset that afternoon," the mother said. "I said, 'Surely you are mad.' It was because of the look on her face. She stared at me in a funny way."

Before Mrs. le Page had finished her testimony it became evident that the defense would try to prove Mrs. de la Mare was insane. In response to questions from a defense lawyer, the mother said Gertrude as a child had "suffered with her head" and had had laughing and crying fits.

A few days later, when the accused woman was testifying, she became amused at a translation of a phrase in patois as "For goodness sake," and the progress of the case in which her life was at stake had to be halted until she finished laughing.

Mrs. de la Mare gave her testimony in slightly accented English, occasionally changing to patois to repeat bits of conversation. After telling of finding the body of her employer, she said: "I cannot say I really liked the old gentleman, but I did not dislike him. I do not think I can say I was really unhappy with him."

SHE denied she had told her mother of his death three days before it happened. She explained the finding of Brouard's hair on her dressing gown by saying he sometimes wore it. She denied she had written the will or the letter to the police. "No," she declared, "and I will always swear to it I have not . . I know that One who is above me knows I have not done it. I have quite satisfied myself that He is to be my judge and no one else." She denied flatly that she had killed her employer and she denied that she was insane. In answer to the direct question, "Did you cut Mr. Brouard's throat?" she said:

"I can honestly say that I did not. I have tried in the cell and in court to imagine myself, to see whether I could possibly have done it. I have tried all ways, but I know I have not done it. It would be impossible. To tell the honest truth, I would not even kill a mouse."

But the purple-robed jurats of Guernsey did not believe her. After listening for two weeks to evidence for and against her, including considerable testimony designed to show that she was of unsound mind, they voted her guilty of murder. And the Bailiff put on a black bonnet and sentenced her to be hanged.

With head bowed, Gertrude de la Mare heard the sentence. "I am quite prepared to face God," she said then, "because I know I have not done it."

The Greffier wrote the judgment in a ponderous "Book of Fate." He put the book back on a shelf where reposed similar volumes containing records of the Royal Court of Guernsey back to the fifteenth century.

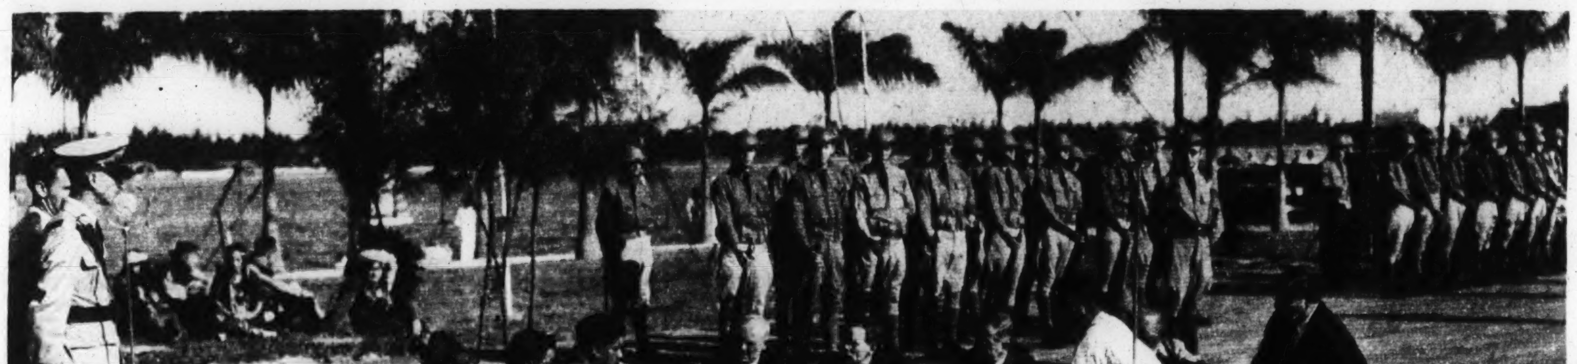
The SEMINOLES ARE STILL a REBEL NATION

Theoretically at War With the United States, These Unconquered Florida Indians Are Now Contesting the Washington Government's Effort to Take More Land From Them.



The pow-wow at West Palm Beach, when members of the Seminole Tribe conferred with U. S. Government officials. The man in his shirtsleeves, stooping, at right, is Sam Tommie, Indian spokesman. Next, from right to left, are Secretary Ickes, John Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs; and James L. Glenn, Seminole agent.

MIAMI, Florida.

IN the southern part of Florida there is a tiny socialistic nation which is not part of the United States and is theoretically at war with us. Its citizens number not much more than 500—men, women and children. They owe no allegiance to the United States Government, pay no taxes, escape the draft in case of war. They are neither protected by State and Federal laws, nor do they have to abide by them. They have their own laws—unwritten ones—their own customs and language. Until very recently they still had slaves; it is possible that they still do; no one seems to care, much. If one of their citizens is murdered, his murderer will not be tried by a Florida court, but by the council that governs his peers.

And this is nothing new, nothing that seems likely to come to an end. It has been going on since long before America was the site of a Caucasian nation. The little independent settlement within the United States borders is merely a survival of an Indian tribe that once claimed the territory between the Atlantic coast and a line not far from the Mississippi River. It is the remainder of the great Creek Nation, the only part which preserves its autonomy and continues rebellious against the settlement of America by Europeans. It is called the Seminole Tribe—though not by its own members, for Seminole means runaway or coward, and that is the last word one could logically apply to that little, smouldering, embittered island of independence where it is still not quite admitted that such a thing as the United States exists.

Those of the Seminoles who have not been persuaded to emigrate to Oklahoma have been pushed farther and farther to the wall, and while they have not diminished in numbers, have, in fact, increased from 208 in 1881 to their present population, it seems likely that their territory, at least, will be diminished still farther if the present movement to drain the Everglades continues. That is what they discussed with a member of the Cabinet one day not long ago, as they squatted on a board walk in West Palm Beach.

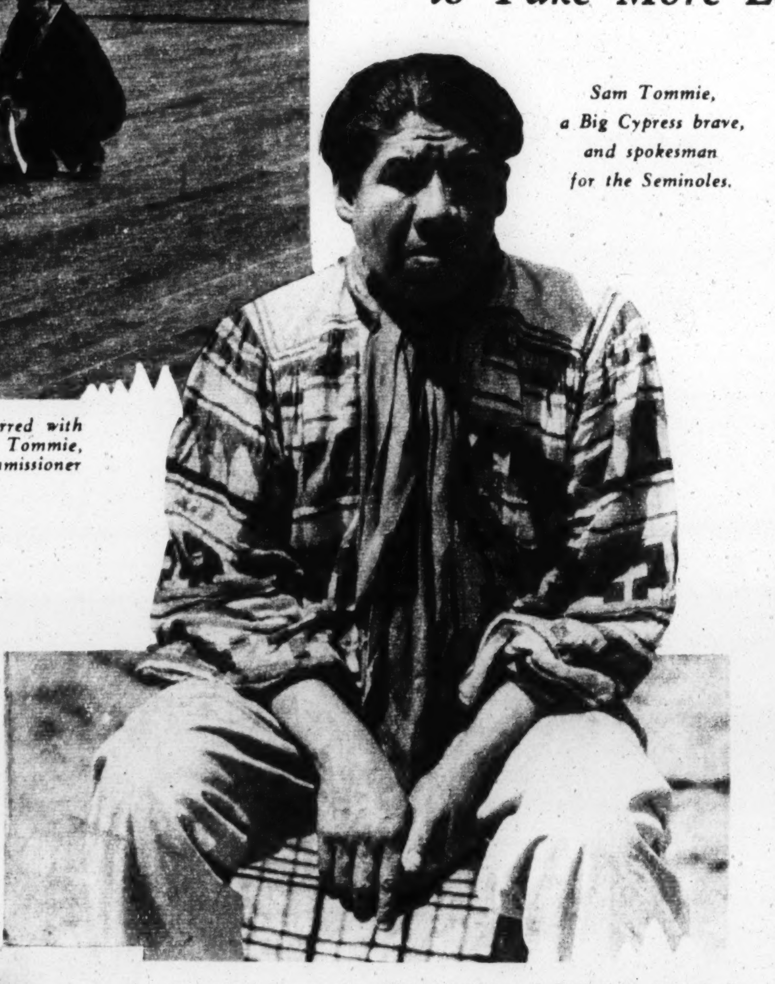
Secretary of State Harold Ickes had to make a special trip to Florida for this curious diplomatic conference with the Seminoles. He and John Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, had to tuck their legs under them (the Secretary was wearing white flannels) and try to find out exactly what it is that keeps these proud tribesmen surly and unwilling to have anything to do with the Government they represent, what, if anything, could be done to placate them.

The Indians had had the matter under discussion for some three months. The Indian agent who is delegated to take care of their interests for the Government, James L. Glenn, helped them draw up a sample petition, for the Indians themselves are too contemptuous of American civilization ever to have learned how to write, or even to speak fluent English. Glenn's first suggestion, that the Seminoles pledge allegiance to the United States, was indignantly rejected. They finally agreed that if the land they were now occupying were taken over they should ask an annuity of $15 a month. Ickes was amused, called this "the Townsend clause" of their proposal.

BUT the chief point of discussion was the question of land. At the very beginning of the pow-wow one of their braves, Charlie Billie, suggested mildly that if the United States wanted a policy on this question they might turn back to the arrangement that already existed—a treaty they had made with General Alexander Macomb in 1839. This would give the Indians all the land south of a line extending west from Jupiter—a section some 200 miles long that now includes Palm Beach, St. Petersburg, Miami. The treaty still exists, or at any rate the paper it is printed on does. It was published in full in a St. Augustine newspaper at the time.

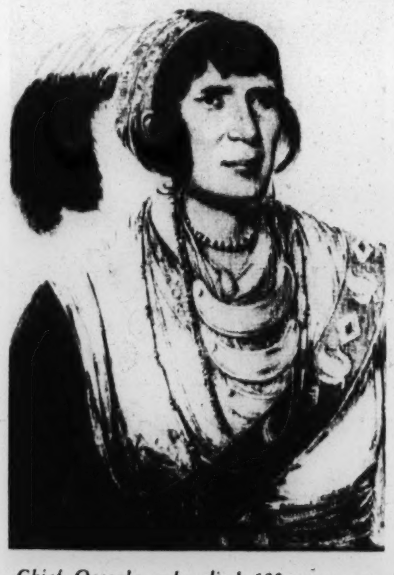
But a more reasonable agreement was finally arrived at by these proud men, who have repeatedly turned down offers of financial aid or civilized comfort, at one time suggesting that if the Government wanted to give away anything, they might give it to the poor whites, who looked as if they needed it. The assembled subchiefs finally agreed to accept tracts in Fort Drum Swamp, St. Lucie County, Big Cypress Swamp and to the north of Lake Okeechobee. Whether this will be ceded to them or not remains to be seen. They have no reason for being especially optimistic.

For the story that lies back of these copper-colored primitives and that calm request for the playground of American millionaires couldn't be called a lesson in the moral loveliness of civilization. They have repeatedly stated in their broken English that the reason they will have none of it is that they don't care for lying, stealing, cheating; that they want to go to heaven. And when they make that statement, they do it without smiling, though they know how to smile, as well as how to keep a promise, hold a hot coal on the wrist, live at peace with the world. The Florida Seminoles are the "noble savage" of legend and Rousseauian philosophy.



Sam Tommie, a Big Cypress brave, and spokesman for the Seminoles.

The Seminoles have been rebels for a long time. They left the Creeks about 1750 to go to the Spanish colony of Florida and become an independent tribe. Like the Spaniards, they later refused to return the fugitive slaves who were forever escaping from Georgia. Instead they took them under their protection, allowed them to work for them in return for this privilege, finally took to keeping them as slaves or tribesmen. There have been rather many instances of Indians marrying maroons. The Seminoles felt no responsibility for returning the runaways to Georgia. In 1816 General Andrew Jackson determined to teach them a lesson.



Chief Osceola, who died 100 years ago defying the white man, and whose aims are still revered by the present Seminoles.

An expedition under Colonel Duncan Clinch was sent to the Indian district with orders to blow up Blount's Fort, which refugees regarded as a safe asylum. Indians and Negroes rushed inside when the expedition appeared without warning. A gunboat planted a shot within the magazine. There were 334 people in the fort; 270 were instantly killed. Thus began the First Seminole War. The War Department has kept absolutely no record of the taking of Blount's Fort. The following years saw enough of depredations and burnings by the Indians so that incident could be forgotten.

When America bought Florida from Spain in 1839 a treaty with the Seminoles was arranged—not a very good one for the Indians, for they had to give up all their cultivated land and retire to the interior. In return for this the United States promised "protection against all persons whatsoever." That part of the treaty was never observed. Slave-catchers seized the Indians' Negroes, stole their horses, destroyed their property. When they petitioned for redress, they were told they might move to Arkansas, if they liked that better. Some of their chiefs went there. Their horses were stolen by the Pawnees; they were attacked. They came away hating the country. Despite which a few chiefs without full authority were persuaded to sign a treaty agreeing to evacuate Florida, not knowing this meant they would have to live with their ancient enemies, the Creeks. When they found this out, and also that they must leave their Negro slaves, all refused. The Government sent troops to execute the treaty.

That began the Second Seminole War, which cost the United States $10,000,000 and 765 men, largely because in the beginning the invaders provided the Indians with one of the greatest generals in the history of guerilla warfare—Chief Osceola. They did this very efficiently by sending the chief's wife into slavery on the ground that one of her grandmothers was the descendant of a Negro. Osceola's immediate retaliation was the killing of an American general and a lieutenant. Then the Seminoles avenged further wrongs by wiping out an entire company of 110 men under a Major Dade; only one man escaped death. The United States sent 41,000 men under seven generals into Florida against these Indians—altogether about 1000 in number. After two years they captured Osceola by a variation of ordinary military tactics.

GENERAL HERNANDEZ was encamped in the wilderness near St. Augustine. The Indians sent a messenger to him suggesting a peace conference. The General accepted—sent back messages, presents, a peace pipe. Osceola and some of his minor chiefs came to the camp bearing flags of truce. American officers met him, demanded without preliminary greeting that the Indians give up all Negroes in their protection. Before Osceola could answer, armed soldiers rushed in. He was knocked down with the butt of a musket, bound and taken to Fort Marion. Later he might have escaped with some of his chiefs. "It is for those to feel shame who entrapped me," was his only explanation for not using the hole in the wall his men made for him. He died there a year later. And the war went on for five years, until 1841, when William J. Worth, who was made a Brigadier-General for it, succeeded in making friends with Chief Wild Cat.

Afterwards most of the Seminole survivors (about 540 were killed) emigrated to Oklahoma. Aside from a few sporadic outbursts, Florida settled down. In 1856 occurred the last big deportation. In the end only a tiny group was left hiding in the Everglades, proud and bitter men who believed themselves to be descendants of the Aztecs, contemptuous of those who agreed to move out of Florida.

Those who live in Florida today preserve their tribal customs jealously. The men dress in gay tunics. The women wear brightly colored dresses. Their dwellings are open pavilions, in tiny, cultivated clearings in the swamplands. The men are handsome, very tall, erect and graceful. They are industrious and their moral standards are high. They are extremely affectionate toward their children. Until recently, at least, they practiced polygamy and they have always had liberal divorce laws. But irregularities of any kind are rare.

THEIR Green Corn Dance is the occasion for a meeting of the various clans from their scattered settlements. It takes place about the beginning of July and lasts four days. Probably no white man has ever seen it, though the ritual isn't kept secret. The celebration is a combined New Year's feast, day of purgation and atonement, spring festival and circuit court meeting.

The trials which take place at the Corn Dance are considered valid by State authorities. A few years ago when a brave killed a squaw during a drunken brawl, he was acquitted at the Green Corn council after his purgation—an ordeal to which all must submit. Civil authorities made no attempt to bring him to trial.

On another occasion a Seminole was brought before the council on an immorality charge and sentenced to die within three months. His executioner was secretly appointed, stalked the Seminole with a rifle and killed him about a month later.

The Seminoles no longer have a "great chief," having abolished that title, as reminiscent of warfare, but a clan chief named Tony Tommy tried, in 1928, to take the title and confer with the President to the end that the Seminoles become United States citizens.

He was shouted down by his fellow tribesmen. Even now they have no respect for the United States for the land they have been given, they say, has frequently been usurped. It is only since 1917 that they have had legal title to any land at all, though several large grants have been given them—only to be snatched away by speculators. At present they have a 100,000-acre reservation, of which only 5 per cent is tillable. In 1898 a Government commission selected 835,000 acres for them and the Florida Legislature made the grant. Within a year the tracts had been seized somehow by white squatters. A Congressional committee has officially reported that the Seminoles are legally entitled to about 5,000,000 acres—the present play spots of the white man.

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

ROBERT ELLIOTT

HE HAS KILLED MORE THAN TWO HUNDRED PERSONS in BEHALF of SOCIETY

NEW YORK.

PHYSICALLY, Robert Elliott is a gaunt figure of the death he has brought to more than 200 persons strapped in the electric chair, yet no more so than any number of elderly men who might be found on the streets of any community. Hawk-nosed and solemn, he is soft-spoken and kindly in manner. Meeting him face to face, it is difficult to conceive of him as the official executioner for five states—New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Massachusetts.

With him an electrocution is just another job in his trade of electrician, and a well-paid one. He gets $150 each time he shoots artificial thunderbolts into a taut body in behalf of society. On several occasions he has executed four men inside of 20 minutes, netting a total fee of $600. Traveling expenses are extra.

Nor is his job any remote control affair, a mere pushing of a button in another room. He must face the hooded figure. When the last buckle is latched and the time for the State to exact its penalty has arrived, Elliott must watch for his most advantageous moment and spin the wheel which sends the terrific voltage into the sitter's body. He must note the reaction of the first shock and gauge the needed voltage of the second and third shocks. It is a grisly business at best, one would say, but Elliott professes not to find it so.

"I don't even know who the man is, half the time," he says. "I never see him—I'm careful not to—until he steps up to the chair, and as soon as the job is finished I beat it. There's nothing depressing about it. You go into the jail, do your job and you're out again in no time at all."

A sample evening in Elliott's profitable side line begins in his two-story frame home in Richmond Hill, Queens, where he sits down to dinner with his wife and daughter. As the Elliott's discuss the day's news over their meal a man is pacing a death cell in Sing Sing while a priest or a minister or a rabbi tries to console him. Maybe the prisoner, too, sits down to a dinner, one of those elaborate last meals condemned men order but rarely eat. He knows that a few minutes after 11 p. m. he will be a seared corpse. This is not conducive to good digestion.

Elliott bids good-by to his family, takes the subway to Manhattan and boards a train for Ossining. He arrives an hour or so early and inspects the chair mechanism with the practiced eye of the technician. He sees that the leather headgear which is to mask the prisoner is soaked well in a bucket of brine. This assures perfect electrical contact. Then he goes out, alone, to an Ossining restaurant and orders a sandwich and a cup of coffee. A glance at his watch tells him the time has come (they always execute a few minutes after 11 on Thursday nights in Sing Sing) and he gets up, pays his check, nods to the cashier and walks back to the death house.

The church-like pews in the execution room are packed with the official witnesses—reporters and others—who wet their lips nervously as they stare at the blocky chair squatting there with arms outstretched. Elliott comes in a rear door and takes his post at the wheel switch. There is a shuffling of feet in the "dance hall," the tight little passageway leading from cell to death room, then the macabre procession comes abruptly into the brightly lighted room. The prisoner blinks at the strong lights and walks like a robot to the chair. Sometimes his legs sag and he has to be placed in it.

AFTER that it is a matter of seconds. While drilled guards expertly buckle the straps and the ankle electrode, the clergyman bends close for a few last words of consolation and a blessing. The dripping headgear is clamped in place. All step back. That is Elliott's moment. In an instant there is a whining sound, as of a circular saw biting into a tough piece of wood. The prisoner convulses in a desperate leap at his straps.

"They never suffer, although it may appear so," Elliott says. "They never know when the current hits them. I keep my wits about me and work the current in and out steadily, but quickly enough to paralyze the brain instantly."

"I might as well do the job as somebody else. Someone has to do it and it might as well be me. I always try to do it as mercifully as possible. I'm just an electrician and I need the money."

The reason so many states employ Elliott is that many other executioners have bungled their jobs. Elliott hasn't bungled one yet. While an ordinary execution doesn't bother him, the thought of a bungled one haunts him. He has a craftsman's pride in his technique.

Despite his denials, two jobs affected him deeply. One was the electrocution of Ruth Snyder, sashweight murderess, in 1928. Elliott's hand was steady on the control wheel, but he had a nervous breakdown afterward. The other was the execution of Irene Schroeder in Pennsylvania in 1931 for the murder of a State trooper. And again his nerves gave way afterward.

His daughter, Gertrude, 25, did not learn of his avocation until she was 15, attending an art school. It was a shock at first, but she said: "I am not ashamed. Father isn't doing wrong." His wife thinks him a maligned man.

Months after he had executed Sacco and Vanzetti in behalf of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Elliott's house was bombed on the night of May 18, 1928, throwing the family out of bed and half-wrecking the home. Police at first thought it the work of radicals, but later came to believe relatives of some executed gangster had done it. Many threats of death have come to Elliott.

Yet 800 applications for the executioner's job at Sing Sing swamped Warden Lewis E. Lawes when John Hulbert, fed up with killing 120 persons in 12 years, retired.

The man selected for the assignment says that one of his fondest hopes is that capital punishment will some day be abolished all over the United States. J. A.

NEW HOPE for 'TYPHOID MARY'

Incarcerated Since 1915 as the Most Dangerous of Germ Spreaders, She Now Sees a Chance for Freedom Through a New Ray Discovery.

Mary Mallon today.

By JACK ALEXANDER

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

HOPE has come to embittered Mary Mallon in her prison on North Brother Island that the magic of the X-ray may bring commutation of the life sentence society imposed upon her a generation ago, after she had been stamped the most dangerous of all spreaders of typhoid fever.

But the commutation, if such it proves to be, comes belatedly, for Typhoid Mary, as she is known, has been bedridden for the past two years as a result of a paralytic stroke which deadened her right side. Even if the ray treatment, which is to be given this summer, proves successful, Typhoid Mary will return to the world, from which she has been exiled so long, a helpless old woman.

The ray technique is the discovery of scientists of the University of Illinois. It consists of applying the ray to the gall bladder and spleen of the bacillus carrier and killing off the billions of bugs harbored in those organs.

The mystery of Mary Mallon's real identity, aside from the medical aspects of her case, has long intrigued those who have come in contact with her. No one but Mary knows whether this is her true name, and she, through shame at being made a symbol of pestilence, has steadfastly concealed it. Some think she was born in Ireland, others believe she is British. She appears to be about 65 years old. Somewhere she has relatives who have not seen her since she left home around the turn of the century to make her way in the world. If they know of her present plight, they have never given any indication. Nor does she want them to, for she feels deeply her pariah status.

Mary Mallon was a cook by occupation and her sole offense was that she was born a typhoid carrier. She never had the disease herself, but she transmitted it easily to others. From underneath her clean fingernails oozed germs that struck households down. When she was first captured, newspapers caricatured her as a demon rolling human skulls from her lethal hands into a cooking vessel.

This was in 1907. Three years before reports had come to America of the discovery by Dr. Robert Koch, great German bacteriologist, that nonsufferers might carry typhoid germs and pass them on to others. This news stimulated to immediate activity Dr. George A. Soper, then a sanitary engineer for the New York Department of Health.

A true scientific detective, Dr. Soper began applying the new discovery to a number of typhoid outbreaks he had been assigned to solve—in Mamaroneck in 1900; in 1902 in the home of J. Coleman Drayton at Dark Harbor, Me., where seven persons were infected; in 1904 in the home of Henry Gilsey, at Sands Point, Long Island; in other cases at Oyster Bay and Tuxedo Park. One death had resulted. One element made all the outbreaks match up—a plump, competent cook named Mary Mallon had prepared the food for each household.

Mary, neat and pleasant, had no inkling that she was a carrier, but she saw an evil omen in the bad luck that dogged her trail, and the omen made her hard to apprehend, because she made a policy of clearing out when the disease began breaking out all around her. Dr. Soper put a squad of men on her trail and the investigators, with the aid of employment agencies, traced her to a house on Park avenue. Dr. Soper assigned Dr. S. Josephine Baker to make an examination of the cook.

In the spring of 1907, Dr. Baker called at the house. She was rebuffed by the cook, who refused to consent to an inspection. Returning next day with three policemen and a batch of internes, Dr. Baker forcibly invaded the house and took the cook away, biting and kicking, to Willard Parker Hospital. Tests showed conclusively that she was loaded with typhoid germs and that anyone eating food she had touched would probably become infected.

Dr. Baker begged the cook to submit to surgical removal of her gall bladder, then the only suspected organ, but Mary Mallon put her foot down flatly. It was just a devious trick to murder her, she said. So she was sent to Riverside Hospital on North Brother Island, a barren spot off the Bronx, washed by the lapping waves of the East River.

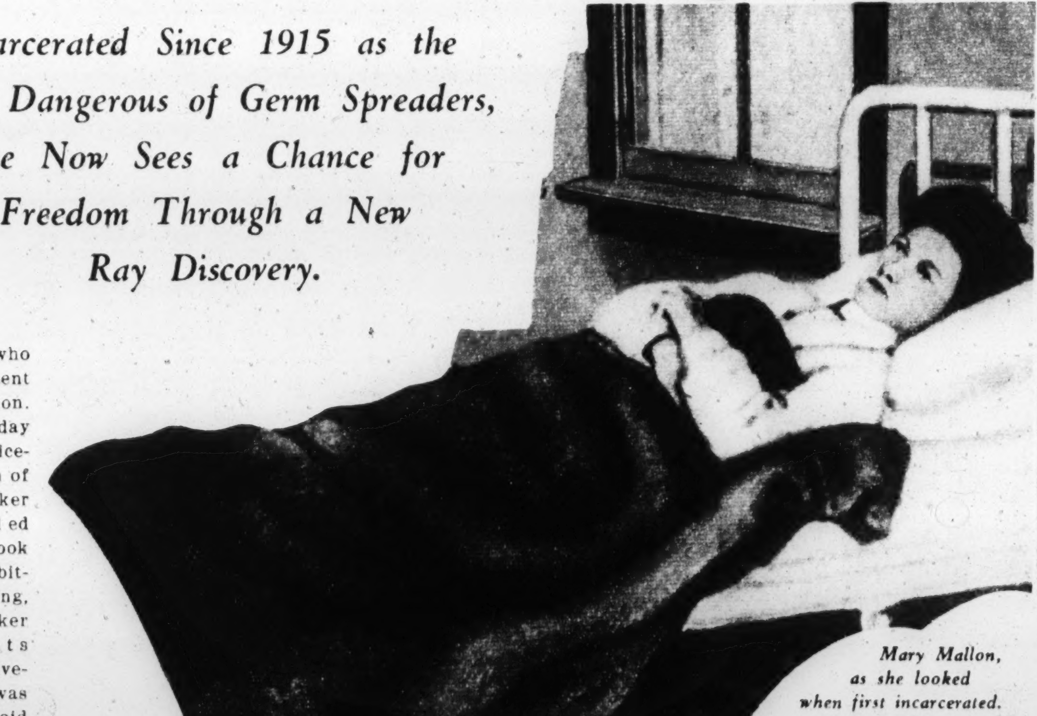
IN 1909, through a lawyer obtained by friends, Mary went into Supreme Court, Manhattan, in an effort to gain her freedom. She told the court that she had been treated like a leper, cloistered with only a dog for company, and given her food on a tray shoved under a door.

Her attorney declared: "This woman has been a victim of circumstances in having been employed in homes where typhoid broke out, the disease having been unquestionably the result of conditions with which she had nothing to do. If the mere statement that a person is infected with germs is sufficient, then that person can be taken away from his or her home and family and locked up and imprisoned for life on North Brother Island."

The court upheld the City Charter provision under which persons dangerous to public health may be isolated, and returned Mary to incarceration.

A year later she was released by the Health Department on her promise that she would never again resume the only occupation she knew. The clemency was opposed by several physicians whose judgment was verified within a few years. For a time Mary kept to her promise. Then typhoid broke out in a hospital in Newfoundland, New Jersey. Mary had fled from the kitchen and disappeared before the arrival of New York authorities.

Next the dread disease descended upon the Sloane Maternity Hospital in New York City. Twenty-five patients were stricken. Two died. A Mrs. Brown, working in the kitchen, was identified as Mary Mallon. Dr. Baker again got on her trail. When Mary left the hospital, carrying a bowl of gelatine dessert, she was followed. The path led to the home of a friend in Corona, Queens, to whom the good-hearted cook was carrying the delicacy she had prepared with her own loving, deadly hands. Once she was inside the friend's home, the place was surrounded by a posse of police, and Mary was recaptured. That was in 1915. North Brother Island has been her home ever since.



Mary Mallon, as she looked when first incarcerated.

Still trying to help her, Dr. William H. Park, City Bacteriologist, tried hyper-immunization. By hypodermic injection and pills he sought to shoot billions of typhoid germs into her already loaded system. He found that instead of swallowing the pills, the sullen Mary was throwing them away, and gave up the experiment.

MARY'S attitude toward her harsh lot underwent a marked change in 1923. From a morose, ingrown person, she was transformed into an alert individual, anxious to learn and serve. A smart idea by a member of the hospital staff caused the improvement. This doctor decided that if Mary were given laboratory work to do, she would forget her fate. It worked beautifully. Mostly her duties consisted in preparing specimen slides for the pathologists, jotting down records and doing various odd jobs. Although not brilliant, she proved a steady learner. As a member of the laboratory staff she received $60 a month. With her pay she indulged a whim for trinkets and bought books about laboratory work.

They built her a cottage 20 by 20 feet, with a lawn and a big elm tree, and furnished it. It was a pretty place, with green shingled walls and clean white trimming. Here Mary cooked her own food (no one else could eat it), entertained her visitors from the outside and sewed clothes out of bolts bought for her in Manhattan. A yellow mongrel dog was her faithful companion. When he died four years ago, Mary perceptibly began to fade. In 1933 the stroke leveled her and she had to give up her cottage and return to a cot in the hospital.

Incarceration within four impersonal walls she cannot call her own has once more sunk the lead of bitterness into Typhoid Mary's heart. But, with her new background of laboratory experience, she no longer fears doctors and she is beginning to hope the X-ray will be her admission ticket into the wide world, if she can overcome the effects of the paralysis.

Mary is one of 344 known typhoid carriers in New York City. The residence of each is a pin point on a large map in the offices of the Health Department. When an outbreak occurs, investigators check up on the activities of every carrier within a certain radius. By this process of elimination, they invariably find the culprit. Repeated offenses against the one rule for carriers—don't handle food to be eaten by others—brings one penalty—incarceration. At the present time, only one other carrier, a man, is a prisoner on North Brother Island.

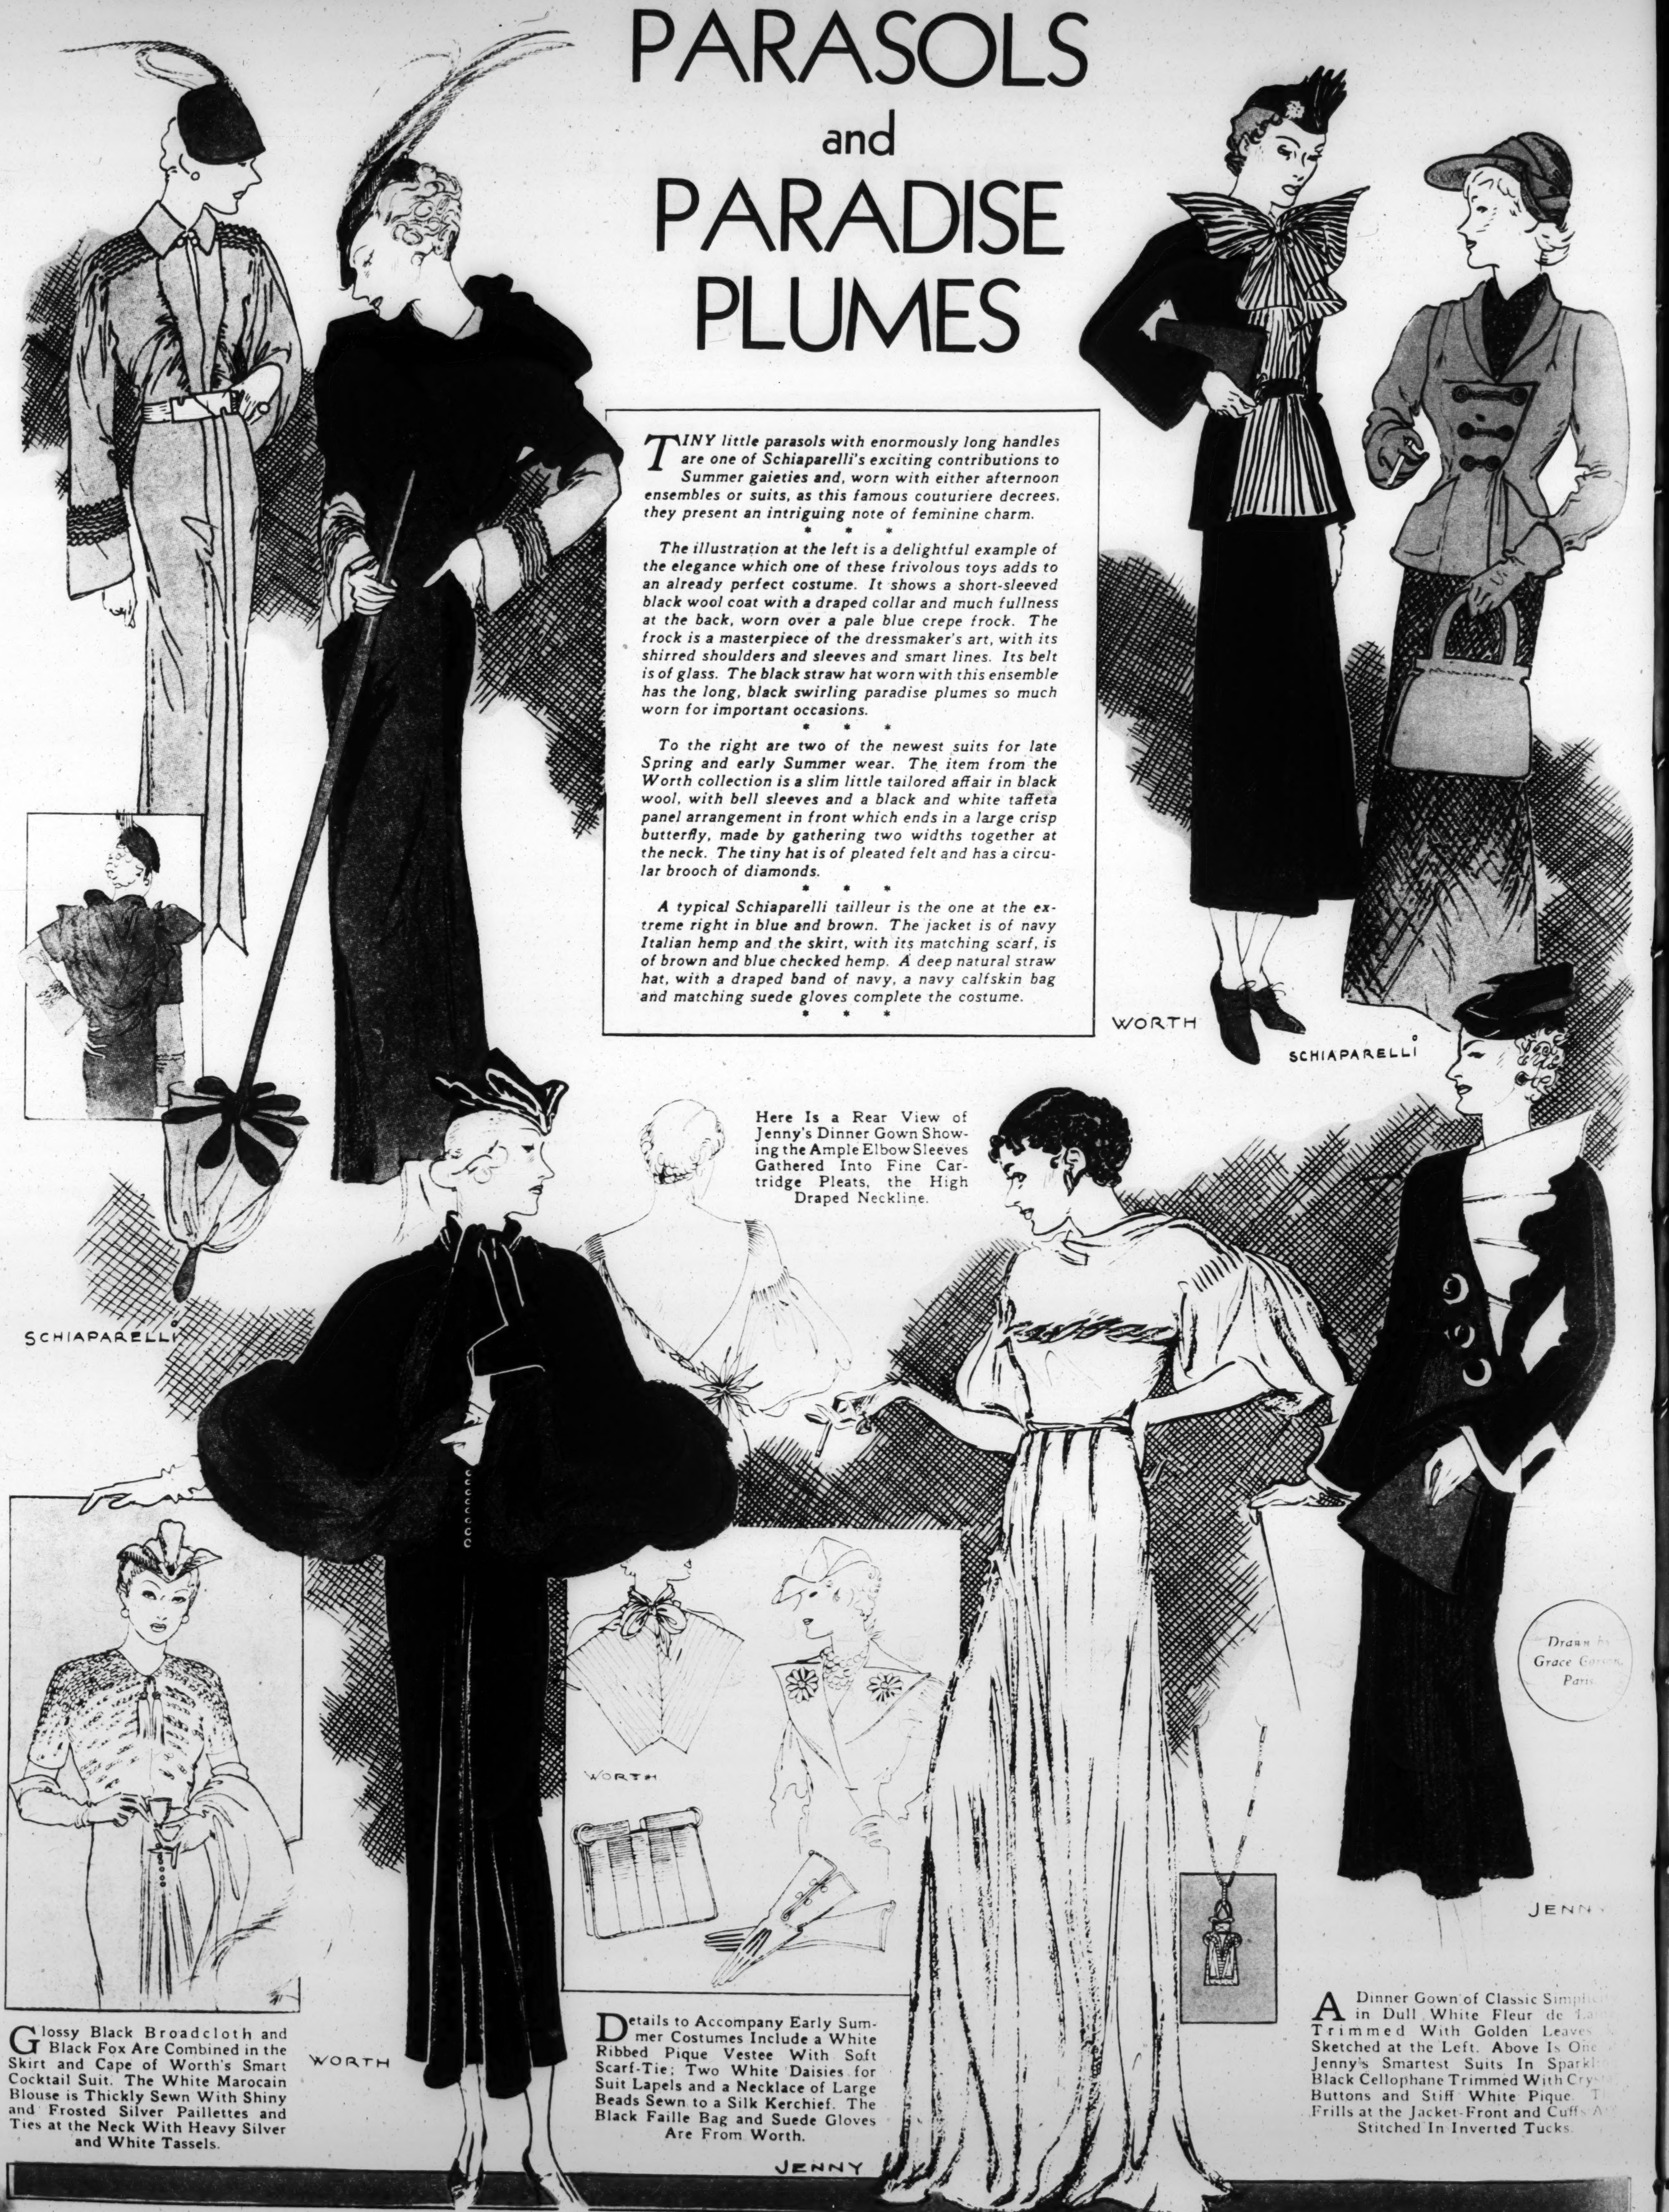
PARASOLS and PARADISE PLUMES



TINY little parasols with enormously long handles are one of Schiaparelli's exciting contributions to Summer gaieties and, worn with either afternoon ensembles or suits, as this famous couturiere decrees, they present an intriguing note of feminine charm.

The illustration at the left is a delightful example of the elegance which one of these frivolous toys adds to an already perfect costume. It shows a short-sleeved black wool coat with a draped collar and much fullness at the back, worn over a pale blue crepe frock. The frock is a masterpiece of the dressmaker's art, with its shirred shoulders and sleeves and smart lines. Its belt is of glass. The black straw hat worn with this ensemble has the long, black swirling paradise plumes so much worn for important occasions.

To the right are two of the newest suits for late Spring and early Summer wear. The item from the Worth collection is a slim little tailored affair in black wool, with bell sleeves and a black and white taffeta panel arrangement in front which ends in a large crisp butterfly, made by gathering two widths together at the neck. The tiny hat is of pleated felt and has a circular brooch of diamonds.

Here Is a Rear View of Jenny's Dinner Gown Showing the Ample Elbow Sleeves Gathered Into Fine Cartridge Pleats, the High Draped Neckline.

Glossy Black Broadcloth and Black Fox Are Combined in the Skirt and Cape of Worth's Smart Cocktail Suit. The White Marocain Blouse is Thickly Sewn With Shiny and Frosted Silver Paillettes and Ties at the Neck With Heavy Silver and White Tassels.

Details to Accompany Early Summer Costumes Include a White Ribbed Pique Vestee With Soft Scarf-Tie; Two White Daisies for Suit Lapels and a Necklace of Large Beads Sewn to a Silk Kerchief. The Black Faille Bag and Suede Gloves Are From Worth.

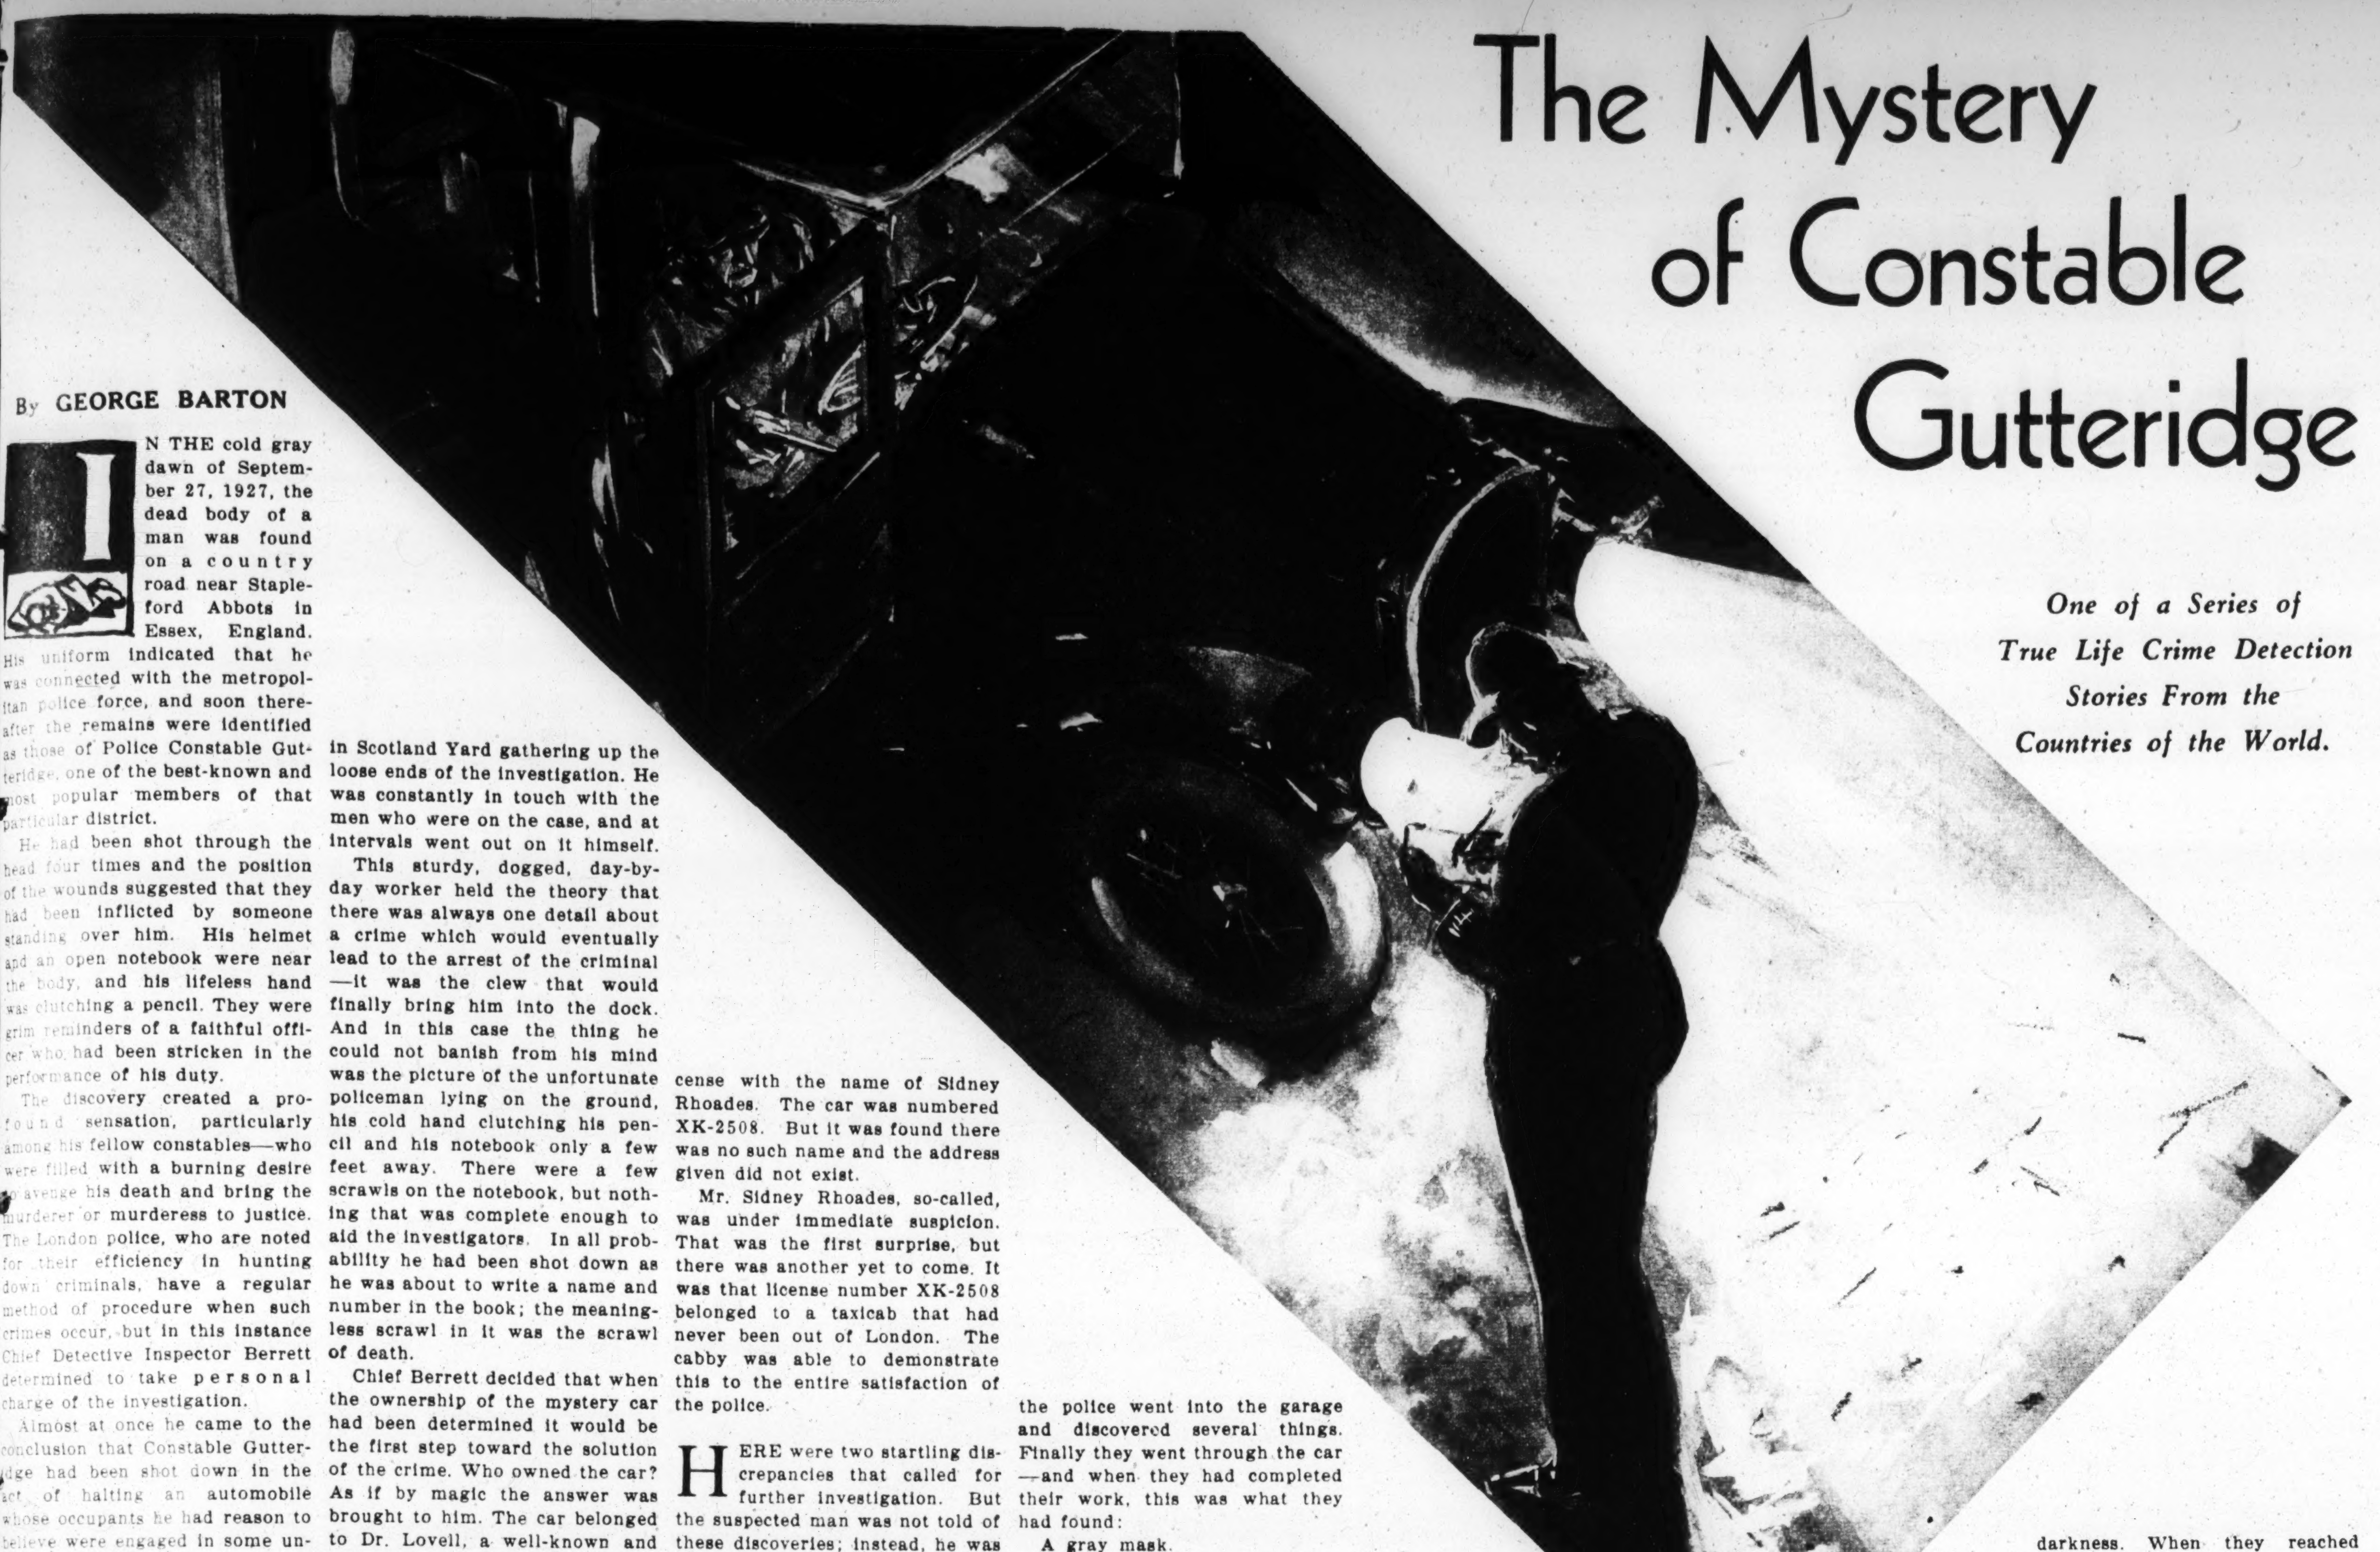
The Mystery of Constable Gutteridge

One of a Series of True Life Crime Detection Stories From the Countries of the World.



"Constable Gutteridge pulled out his notebook and pencil."

By GEORGE BARTON

IN THE cold gray dawn of September 27, 1927, the dead body of a man was found on a country road near Stapleford Abbots in Essex, England. His uniform indicated that he was connected with the metropolitan police force, and soon thereafter the remains were identified as those of Police Constable Gutteridge, one of the best-known and most popular members of that particular district.

He had been shot through the head four times and the position of the wounds suggested that they had been inflicted by someone standing over him. His helmet and an open notebook were near the body, and his lifeless hand was clutching a pencil. They were grim reminders of a faithful officer who had been stricken in the performance of his duty.

The discovery created a profound sensation, particularly among his fellow constables—who were filled with a burning desire to avenge his death and bring the murderer or murderess to justice. The London police, who are noted for their efficiency in hunting down criminals, have a regular method of procedure when such crimes occur, but in this instance Chief Detective Inspector Berrett determined to take personal charge of the investigation.

Almost at once he came to the conclusion that Constable Gutteridge had been shot down in the act of halting an automobile whose occupants he had reason to believe were engaged in some unlawful enterprise.

There was an autopsy; the bullets were removed and subjected to expert examination. One of the first things demonstrated was that they had been fired with the aid of black powder. Also, the marks of the firing-pin were found on each cartridge that had been fired. These marks are just as individual as fingerprints. The investigators were convinced that the weapon with which poor Gutteridge had been killed was a Webley pistol. These were slight clews, to be sure, but they gave the police something to work with.

IN the meantime, news of the murder had been broadcast, and two hours after the finding of the body a most important discovery was made.

A clerk in Brixton, a suburb of London, found a Morris-Cowley car parked in the yard back of his house. Being, like most Britishers, a methodical person, he immediately notified the authorities of the find. The police were there in record time.

They found that the radiator of the machine was still warm; that was proof conclusive that it had not been there many hours. The clerk had never seen the machine before and was certain that it did not belong to any of his family or friends. The left fender was bent, indicating that it had been in an accident. There was blood on the running board on the right side of the machine. Under the driver's seat they found an empty cartridge case, marked "R. L-4."

The sight of this gave the police a thrill—and for a very good reason. It corresponded precisely with the caliber of the bullets which had killed the policeman!

While this was going on the detectives at Scotland Yard were losing no time. The search not only took the police into every part of London but also into all of its suburbs. Whitechapel was literally fine-tooth-combed; and the same was done to all other disreputable sections of the English metropolis.

In the midst of all this, the cartridge that had been found in the [illegible] of the mystery car was being subjected to a scientific examination. It was discovered that it was the kind of cartridge that had been withdrawn from the army soon after the beginning of the war in 1914. Inspector Berrett recalled this very vividly because it was used with a flat-topped bullet.

Several days went by and the murderer was still at large, but the authorities felt they were making progress. Chief Detective Inspector Berrett sat in his office in Scotland Yard gathering up the loose ends of the investigation. He was constantly in touch with the men who were on the case, and at intervals went out on it himself.

This sturdy, dogged, day-by-day worker held the theory that there was always one detail about a crime which would eventually lead to the arrest of the criminal—it was the clew that would finally bring him into the dock. And in this case the thing he could not banish from his mind was the picture of the unfortunate policeman lying on the ground, his cold hand clutching his pencil and his notebook only a few feet away. There were a few scrawls on the notebook, but nothing that was complete enough to aid the investigators. In all probability he had been shot down as he was about to write a name and number in the book; the meaningless scrawl in it was the scrawl of death.

Chief Berrett decided that when the ownership of the mystery car had been determined it would be the first step toward the solution of the crime. Who owned the car? As if by magic the answer was brought to him. The car belonged to Dr. Lovell, a well-known and highly respected physician of Billericay. He had visited police headquarters and identified the machine as one that had been stolen from the garage of his house on the night of the crime. He had notified the local authorities as soon as he learned of his loss—but, of course, it was some time before the complaint reached Scotland Yard.

Dr. Lovell said that he had left a number of medical instruments and a few packages of bandages in the car after making a sick call on the night before the murder. These articles had been taken away with the car.

Detective Inspector Berrett received the information with outward calmness, but he had a feeling that these telltale articles might play an important part in the investigation.

He was right, for in precisely two weeks after the murder the unexpected happened. There are times when crime-hunters seem to be up against a dead wall in their investigation; then the god of chance opens a door for them.

This is what happened in the Gutteridge case. It was the undefined or unknown course of events not subject to calculation. The incident, or accident, that led two men straight to the gallows was a motor collision in a part of London far removed from the scene of the Gutteridge murder. To all intents and purposes it was one of those routine things undeserving of serious consideration. The constable on the beat strolled over to the offending car and called for the customary information.

The driver showed him a license with the name of Sidney Rhoades. The car was numbered XK-2508. But it was found there was no such name and the address given did not exist.

Mr. Sidney Rhoades, so-called, was under immediate suspicion. That was the first surprise, but there was another yet to come. It was that license number XK-2508 belonged to a taxicab that had never been out of London. The cabby was able to demonstrate this to the entire satisfaction of the police.

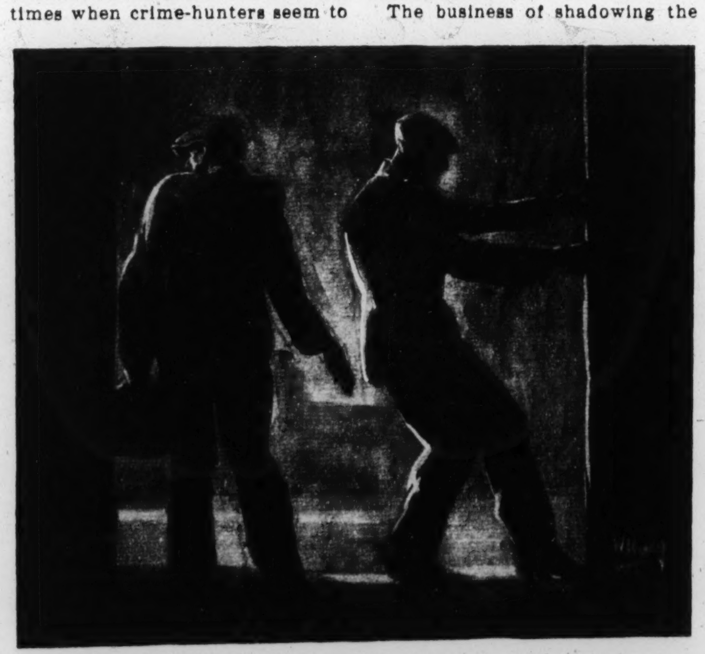
HERE were two startling discrepancies that called for further investigation. But the suspected man was not told of these discoveries; instead, he was permitted to go about his business.

But Scotland Yard was on the job at once—Sidney Rhoades was followed to Clapham Junction; it did not take long to learn that his real name was Frederick Guy Browne and that he was a garage keeper on the North-cote road; later it was found that he had an employe by the name of W. H. Kennedy. They would leave their place of business early in the morning and return late at night.

They were followed day and night and soon the police made an important discovery. The two men were engaged in the stolen-car business!

With the evidence he had in hand, Detective Inspector Berrett was now convinced that these men were responsible for the murder of Constable Gutteridge. But his common sense told him that a false or premature move would ruin his case, so he adopted a waiting policy.

The business of shadowing the men was continued without interruption and a close watch was kept on their garage. At dusk one evening Guy Browne was seen coming out of the garage carrying a suitcase. He was about to get in his car when the signal was given; four plain-clothes men appeared instantly and told him that he was under arrest.



"They would leave their place of business early in the morning and return late at night."

There was nothing timid about Browne, but this unexpected assault disconcerted him. He turned pale, but managed to say:

"Well, what is it all about? What do you want?"

He was told that he would have to be searched; and as the odds were against him, he submitted as gracefully as possible. After that the police went into the garage and discovered several things. Finally they went through the car—and when they had completed their work, this was what they had found:

A gray mask.

Twelve revolver cartridges.

A jimmy and a flashlight.

A fully loaded Webley revolver.

A bag containing seven skeleton keys.

A pair of Spencer-Wells forceps.

A six-chambered revolver.

The last-named revolver was loaded with flat-topped cartridges marked R.L.-4. This, it will be recalled, corresponded exactly with the kind believed to belong to the empty cartridge case found in the car that had been stolen from Dr. Lovell of Billericay.

This loot was not precisely the kind of stuff that is carried around by law-abiding citizens—and the sight of it piled in a heap seemed to weaken Browne's iron nerve.

"Well," he exclaimed, "you've got the stuff—and now I suppose you're going to get me!"

It was a slip of the tongue; he recovered himself almost instantly and became the typical crook defying the law. While two of the policemen were taking Browne into custody the others made a more detailed search of the garage. They were rewarded by finding another pair of forceps, a tube of ethyl-chloride, a metal containing scalpels, a package of boric lint and a roll of soft cloth used for making bandages.

There were some of the articles which Dr. Lovell had left in his car. Thus the police had linked Browne with that car, and had linked the car with the murder of Constable Gutteridge.

ONE of the officers said quizzically: "What's the idea of all the medical supplies? Are you running a hospital?"

"Certainly not," was the quick reply. "That is part of the garage equipment."

But the police did not accuse him. Although they were confident of his guilt, they adopted another method of proving it. Under the instructions of their chief, Browne was simply arrested on the charge of stealing an automobile and placed in a cell.

The next move on the part of the police was to get Kennedy, the partner, employe and possible accomplice of Frederick Guy Browne.

Kennedy seems to have been a singularly simple-minded person. He had fled the moment the officers got on the track of Browne. That in itself was a confession of guilt. His next mistake was in the manner of his flight; he went to Liverpool and seemingly made no secret of the fact. The investigators learned this when they went to his lodgings.

Two Scotland Yard men were sent after him and at once got in touch with the local police officials. The Liverpool police had a description of their man, but their task was not entirely devoid of difficulties. Liverpool is not London; but it is a populous city, the second seaport in the United Kingdom, and it has its rough quarters.

They traced Kennedy to the address at which he proposed to stop, but he had left there to take lodging down near the docks. This was finally located and was guarded front and rear. Then the pursuers settled down to wait.

The hoped-for moment came sooner than they expected. One morning Kennedy opened the door of the house and jauntily walked forth. As he reached the sidewalk one of the detectives touched him on the arm.

"Good morning, Mr. Kennedy."

He smiled amiably at the salutation.

"Good morning," he replied. "But you have the advantage of me. I don't think I know you."

"Possibly not, but we might as well get acquainted. I am from Scotland Yard."

"Very well," he answered. "I'm ready to go with you."

That very morning they returned to London. Kennedy was turned over to Berrett and the other officials interested in the Gutteridge murder. He was informed that he could make a statement if he wished, but was warned that anything he might say would probably be used against him at the trial. Without any ceremony, and to their amazement, he proceeded to make a complete confession of the part he had taken in the tragedy.

He told all about his relations with Browne and said that they were engaged in the business of stealing and selling cars. They had met with a fair degree of success and gradually they relaxed their caution. They had never been caught, and assumed that they never would be.

On the occasion in question they had been watching the movements of Dr. Lovell and found he was in the habit of parking his car so carelessly that almost anybody could get into the building. Late on the night before the murder they had entered and secured the automobile without any difficulty. Then they started in the direction of Clapham Junction.

Browne was the driver, and he went at a speed which defied all of the motor regulations. Just as they approached Stapleford Abbots in Essex, the form of a man appeared in the country road and commanded them to stop. Browne put on the brakes. As he did so, Police Constable Gutteridge appeared at the side of the car and asked them where they were going at such break-neck speed. He got no satisfactory reply to his question, and adjusting his lantern he pulled out his notebook and pencil for the purpose of taking down the license number.

AT that instant Browne suddenly drew his Webley pistol and fired at the officer's head. Gutteridge swayed for a moment and fell to the ground. As he partly arose, Browne took aim and fired at him a second time. This time Gutteridge dropped to the ground unconscious. In spite of the fact that the policeman had been fatally stricken the assassin deliberately fired two more shots into the prostrate man.

Then he calmly took the wheel and the car sped away in the darkness. When they reached Brixton they ran the car into the back yard of a little house there and abandoned it. They proceeded on foot to Clapham Junction and went to bed.

Browne did not show the least remorse over his crime, but was at his garage the next morning doing business as usual. Kennedy assured the police that he had nothing whatever to do with the killing of the policeman.

Upon being asked why he had not interfered when the murder was being committed he said he was so taken by surprise that he hardly realized what was going on. He said that Browne was in a terrible frenzy and acted like a madman. Kennedy intimated that if he had made the slightest protest he, too, would have been slain by the infuriated man.

Browne and Kennedy were formally charged with the murder of Constable Gutteridge and shortly after placed on trial. Both men pleaded not guilty.

There was much speculation regarding what distinction the jury or the Court might make between Browne and Kennedy, but when they had agreed upon their verdict, it was to announce that they had found both of the defendants guilty. Thereupon the Judge formally sentenced them to hang by the neck until dead.

Automobile accidents, particularly, are growing more frequent every month. It is unwise to gamble with fate when the next moment may bring disaster.

The protection afforded you by this straightforward policy is backed by the huge resources of the North American Accident Insurance Company, the largest and oldest exclusive Health and Accident Insurance Company in America. The company has paid out over $20,000,000 in claims—it is under the direct supervision of 46 State Insurance Departments.

Men and women who are interested in this form of protection are urged to write a letter or postcard for an unusual illustrated Booklet entitled "Cash or Sympathy" sent absolutely free. Write to North American Accident Insurance Company, 729 Title Building, Newark, N. J.

THE CHARACTERS

BILL BUNNY—A kind little rabbit.
DR. H. HOOT—The local physician.
SAPPHIRE—One of the little people who live inside the earth.
ALABASTER—High priest of these little people.

For generations and generations the mole folk have been miners, spending most of their time underground. As a result their eyes are weak and they can see but very little. Mr. Mole is no exception and he is very dissatisfied with his lot. He would do anything to have good eyesight. Some time ago he stole the eyes from an idol worshipped by a little people who live inside of the earth. But alas, while he searched for a doctor to put them in his own head, the eyes were stolen from him. Now the old miner believes that these same little people from whom he stole the eyes are the ones who took the eyes from him, and that they gave them back to their idol. But Miner Mole is determined to have those eyes, and he has decided to go down and get them. Bill Bunny feels sorry for the old miner and is afraid he will get in trouble. We see Bill, Mr. Mole and Dr. Hoot talking as

THE PLAY BEGINS

BILL BUNNY—Please, Mr. Mole, think what you are doing. Those little people are very angry and they may kill you if they catch you. (Bill holds him so he can't get away.)

MR. MOLE—I'm not afraid. I've lived all my life underground. I can take care of myself.

DR. HOOT—Let him go if he wants to. If he gets hurt he can blame no one but himself.

BILL BUNNY—(Letting go.) Well, if you must go, I hope no harm comes to you. (Mr. Mole gruffly thanks him and picking up his pick and shovel starts down into the earth.)

MR. MOLE—(Stopping just inside the tunnel.) Gosh, those fellows don't know what a good miner I am. (He lights his miner's lamp and throws his pick and shovel over his shoulder and hurries along.) I'll be back with those eyes in a hurry. (He walks for a long time, then, as he rounds a curve in the tunnel, a lot of angry little people surround him with long, pointed spears.)

SAPPHIRE—Throw up your hands. (Mr. Mole obeys.) Now march on and keep your hands up. (Mr. Mole marches along. And a moment later Mr. Mole is led into the temple where sits the idol.)

MR. MOLE — (Surprised.) Where are his eyes? Why didn't you put them back?

ALABASTER—(Raising his sword.) How could we put them back when you've got them? (Mr. Mole explains that the eyes were stolen from him, too. Alabaster is surprised. But Mr. Mole convinces him.)

ALABASTER — Very well, Mr. Mole. But you will return with me and my men and find them. (Then to his men.) Tie his hands behind his back!

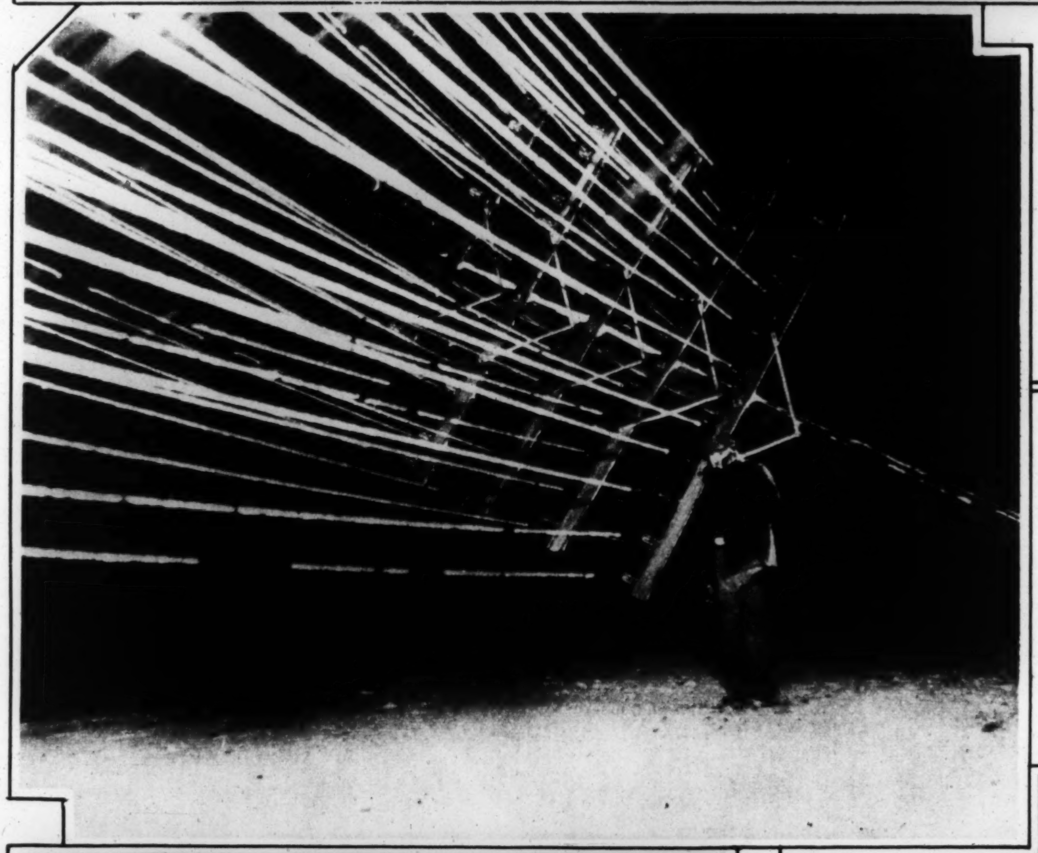
THE ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

THE BEST HOOP ROLLER
At Wellesley College, Massachusetts, the winner of the annual contest is traditionally supposed to win the first husband. This year's star roller, Miss Genevieve Knupfer of Brussels, Belgium, had never rolled a hoop before. Miss Ellen Webster, Senior class president, is shown rewarding her with the symbolical bridal bouquet.



MINNESOTA MAY DAY
A blizzard was the Minneapolis version of the first day of a month traditionally associated with balmy zephyrs and spring flowers. This is what happened to telephone and power lines.

HUMAN CHAMOIS
A guide at The Dells, in Wisconsin, jumps the gap between two rocks known as Lovers' Leap, for the amusement of tourists, to whom the spot is pointed out as the setting for a legendary Indian's tragedy.

BRIDGING THE FURY OF NIAGARA EDDIES
Owing to mild weather the workmen who regularly rebuild the little wooden bridge at the Cave of the Winds for summer tourists have begun their jittery job earlier in the season than ever before.

TENNESSEE LEGALIZES CHILD MARRIAGE
The Legislature recently repealed old laws setting an age limit for marriage. The first result was 12-year-old Perlie Mae Wood's wedding in Knoxville to Willie Broyles, a relief worker. Perlie's impotently indignant mother sent the child's dolls to her new home.

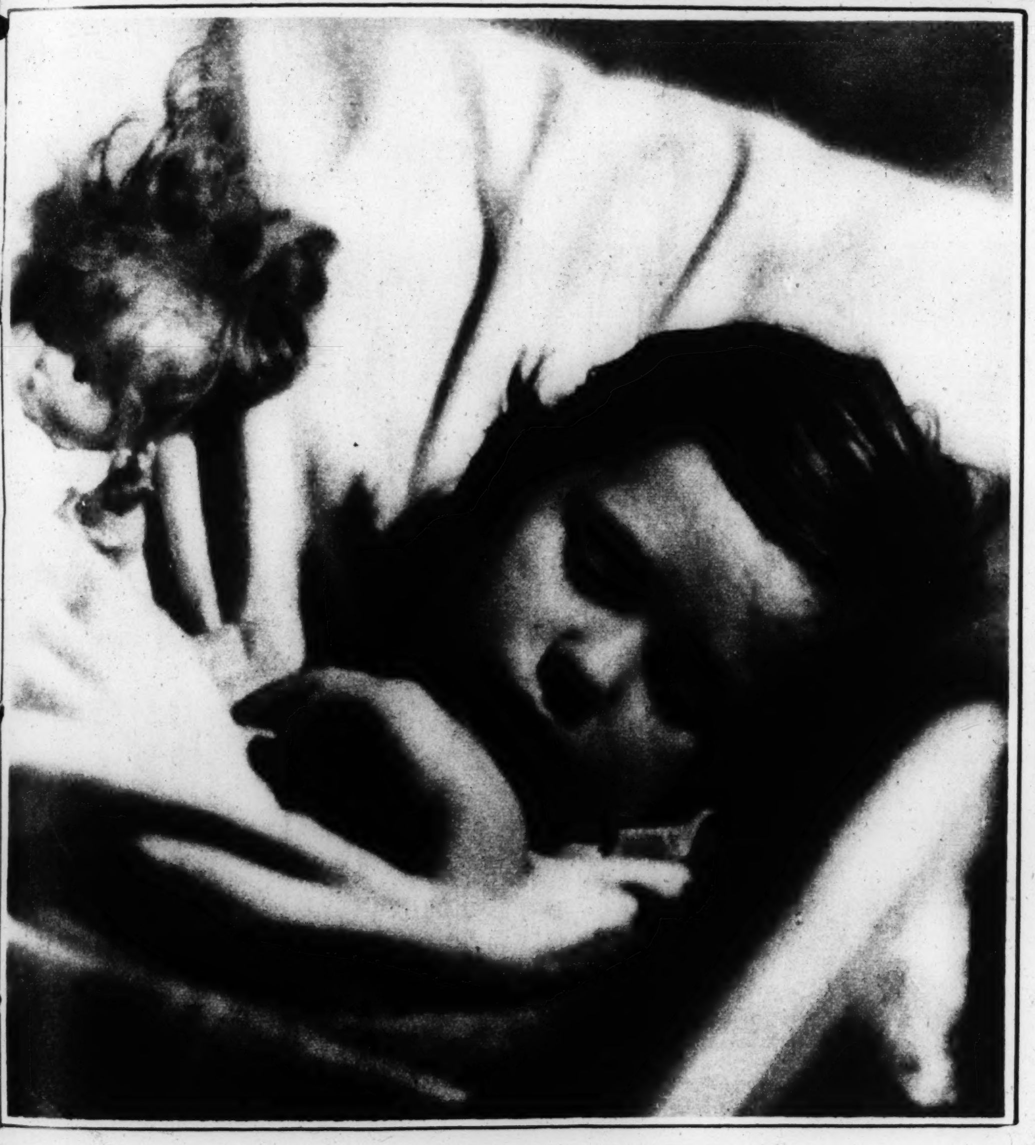
STUDIES IN FACIAL EXPRESSION

A Page of Photographs by Amateurs

Contributions are invited by the Sunday Editor and paid for at regular rates if accepted. Only five-by-four prints (or larger), with name, address, return postage and description of the subject, can be considered. Future pages being planned will include the following types of pictures: Action photos, glimpses of the stage and concert platform, scenes in scientific laboratories, incidents in public places, men and women at work. Pictures with artistic merit and human interest are always in demand. Further information will be sent if requested by mail.



AT PEACE WITH THE WORLD

PORTRAIT OF A WOMAN KNITTING
Aside from the intent expression of the sitter's face, this photograph is interesting for its unusual angular design. It was made by F. H. Below Jr. of Faribault, Minnesota.

AT THE EDGE OF THE EVERGLADES
A slightly embarrassed little Seminole Indian boy grins mischievously as he poses for his picture. The photograph is by a St. Louisan, R. Marlin Perkins.

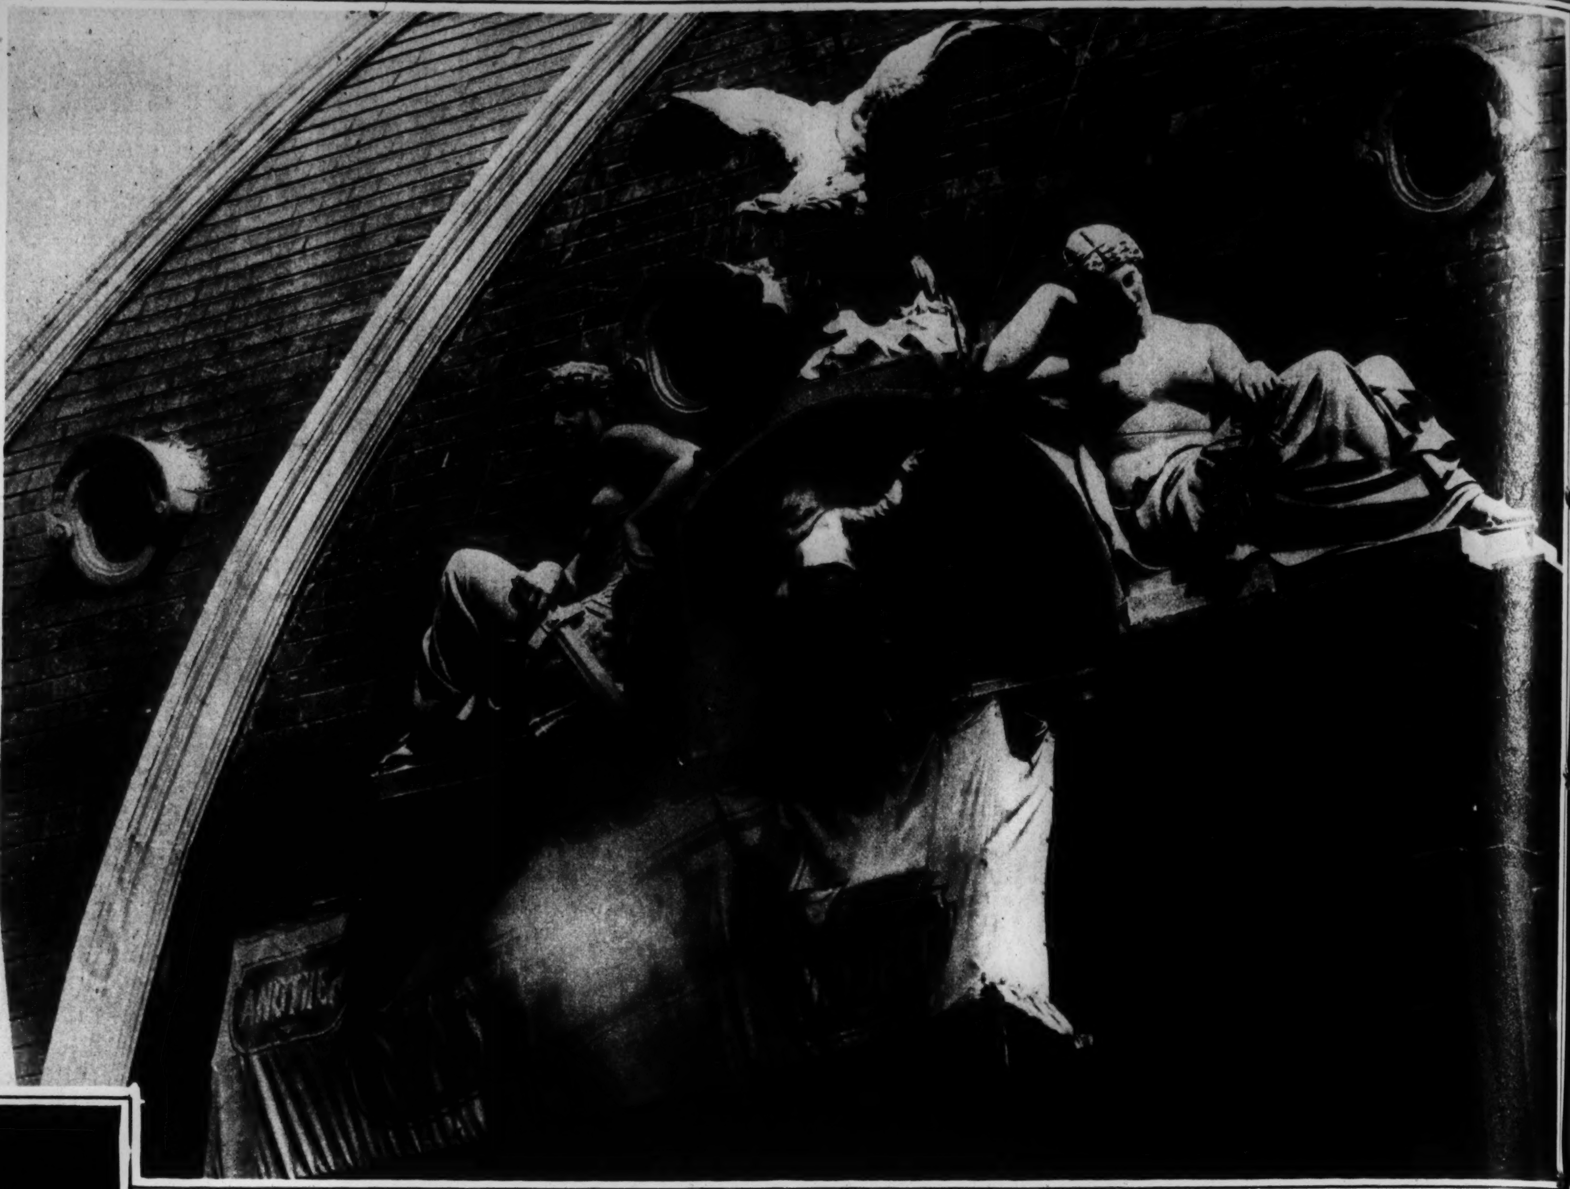
SOUTHERN GALLANTRY IN NEW YORK—Conductor Walter Damrosch salutes Mrs. William Gibbs (whose father, Paul Cravath, is one of the directors of the Metropolitan Opera House) during a moment of backstage frivolity at the Opera Ball, which featured a pageant, "Magnolia and Orange Blossoms—A Romance of Old Louisiana."



ART DISCOVERY IN ST. LOUIS—Workmen engaged in sand-blasting the Postoffice Building, in the heart of downtown, brought to light this group of neo-classical statuary by Daniel Chester French. Although they had been on exhibit for decades, the statues were effectually concealed by soot.

"FOR HAD YE BELIEVED MOSES, YE WOULD HAVE BELIEVED ME" . . . Symbols of the Jewish and the Christian religions headed a procession of 200 clergymen who participated in a joint service at Riverside Church, New York. Those carrying standards were: The Reverend Lawrence P. Hosie, the cross; Rabbi David de Sola Pool, the decalogue; Rabbi A. L. Weinstein, the six-pointed star.

IN STANDARD'S RESEARCH LABORATORIES

. . where engineers work, plan, test, develop . . . TO SAVE YOU MONEY

The very excellence of today's Standard Oil products is a constant challenge to Standard's great staff of research engineers and chemists. Their work is never done. Their only assignment is to drive incessantly toward something still better—to discover how each product can be made to do a more-and-more efficient job at less-and-less cost to you.

A large group of these engineers, assigned to manufacturing, are also constantly at work formulating new refining methods—developing equipment which can take the "spoonful" lots of improved products that come from the laboratories and amplify them—produce them in quantities sufficient for the demands of Standard's great mid-west market.

Out of the ceaseless work of these specialists has come advance after advance—in gasoline unmatched in abundance of usable Live Power—in motor oil without peer in giving clean, long-lived lubrication. The truth is that Standard Oil has been a pioneer in virtually every major development in gasoline and motor oil.

That record of advancement is more than a matter of pride to Standard Oil men. It is your guide to VALUE. The familiar sign of "Standard" marks the place where you can get full value for your money—and something more.

HO HUM! WELL JO, I MET A MAN TODAY WHOSE GREAT-GREAT-GRANDFATHER WAS IN THE LIGHT BRIGADE WITH NAPOLEON AND..
NAPOLEON WASN'T IN THAT AFFAIR.
OH NO? MAYBE IT WAS TWO OTHER GENERALS ON A WHITE HORSE, EH?
OH GEORGE BUNGLE, WHY ARE YOU SO DELIBERATELY TRYING TO START SOMETHING WITH ME WHEN YOU KNOW I'VE HAD A BAD DAY?
EVERY NIGHT YOU HURL YOURSELF INTO THIS HOUSE AND STAND HERE LIKE THIS, WHILE YOU START SOME LONG-WINDED STORY OF...
HURL MYSELF IN?
YES SIR! I'LL SHOW YOU HOW YOU LOOK BANGING THE DOOR OPEN AND SWAGGERING IN HERE. I'LL START IN THE HALL.
AHUM!
WHOOIE!
GEORGE, WHY DID YOU SHUT THE DOOR WHEN I CAME OUT IN THIS HALL?
YOU SLAMMED IT AFTER YOU. I'LL OPEN IT. ONE SECOND.
IT'S STUCK! IT WON'T... HEY, DON'T KEEP RATTLING THE KNOB.
HOLD YOUR HORSES. I'M TRYING TO GET IT OPEN.
IT'S STUCK! YOU DID THAT WHEN YOU SLAMMED IT.
IN OTHER WORDS FOR DARING TO SPEAK UP TO YOUR ROYAL HIGHNESS, YOU WON'T OPEN THE DOOR, EH?
NO SIR! I HAD NOTHING TO DO WITH THIS DOOR GETTING STUCK. YOU YOURSELF DID THAT WHEN YOU..
HEY DON'T KICK ON THIS DOOR! I ALMOST HAD IT OPEN A MINUTE AGO!
OPEN AT LAST... AND SHE'S GONE. WELL...
OH OH! WHAT WAS THAT NOISE..?
THE DOOR SLAMMED SHUT. SUCH LUCK.
AND I HEAR HER HAMMERING ON THE BACK DOOR.
I'LL HAVE TO GO AROUND THERE, TOO.
WHOO! TRUDGING DOWN AND UP THESE STAIRS IS..
GEORGE? WHY ARE YOU COMING UP THOSE BACK STAIRS INSTEAD OF..?
WHAT, BOTH OF US LOCKED OUT? OH! OH!

HA! WHAT KEPT YOU SO LONG?
THE PEOPLE DOWNSTAIRS COULDN'T FIND THE KEY. I GOT A BUNCH FROM THE DRUGGIST AT THE CORNER
INSIDE AT LAST. SUCH A HULLABALOO OVER NOTHING.
NOTHING IS RIGHT.

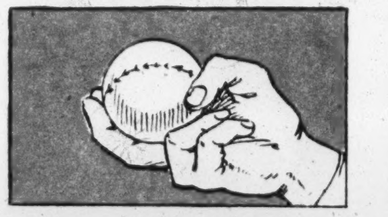
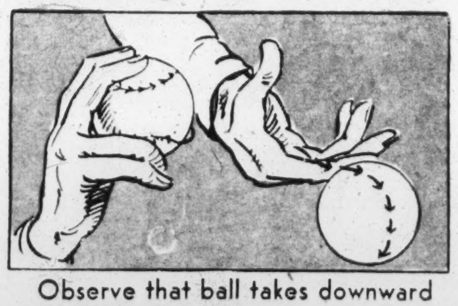
How To Throw Curves

Gripping The Ball



Note the bent thumb and position of fingers and thumb with relation to seams of ball.

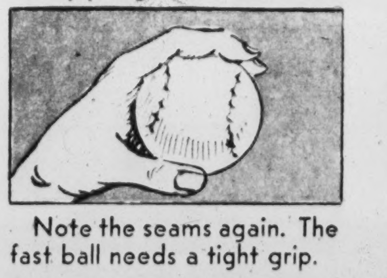
Delivering The Curve Ball



Observe that ball takes downward spin off the forefinger.

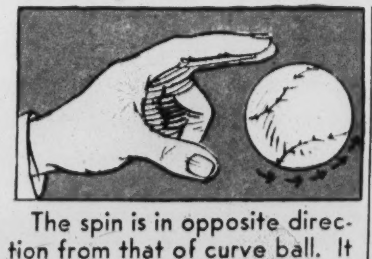
The Fast Ball

Gripping the Fast One



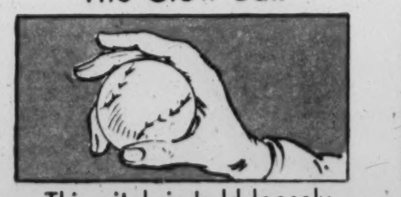
Note the seams again. The fast ball needs a tight grip.

Letting The Fast One Go



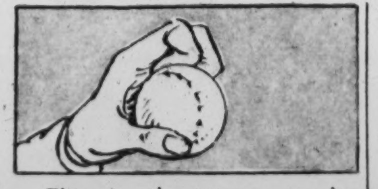
The spin is in opposite direction from that of curve ball. It is released off finger tips.

The Slow Ball



This pitch is held loosely and is delivered with very little spin.

The Knuckle Ball



This is the proper grip for the knuckle ball.

If You can develop a good fast ball and a good curve, you won't have to worry about trick deliveries. The main thing is practice!

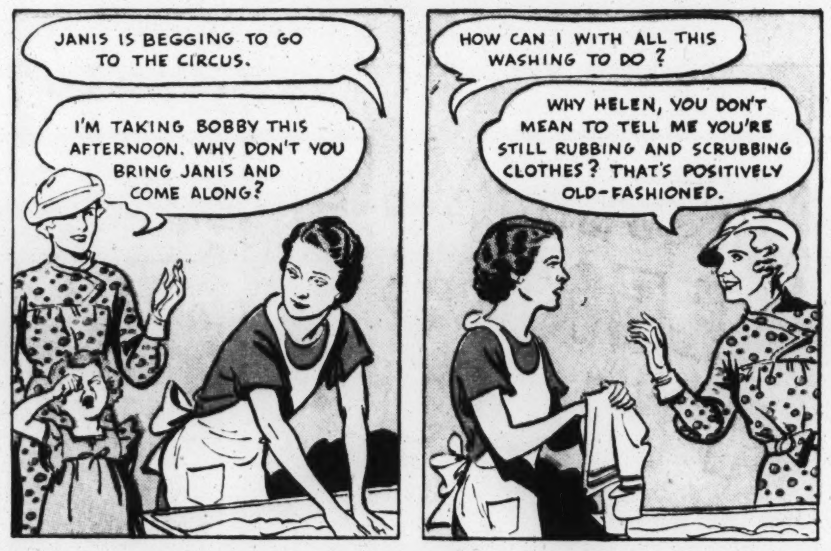
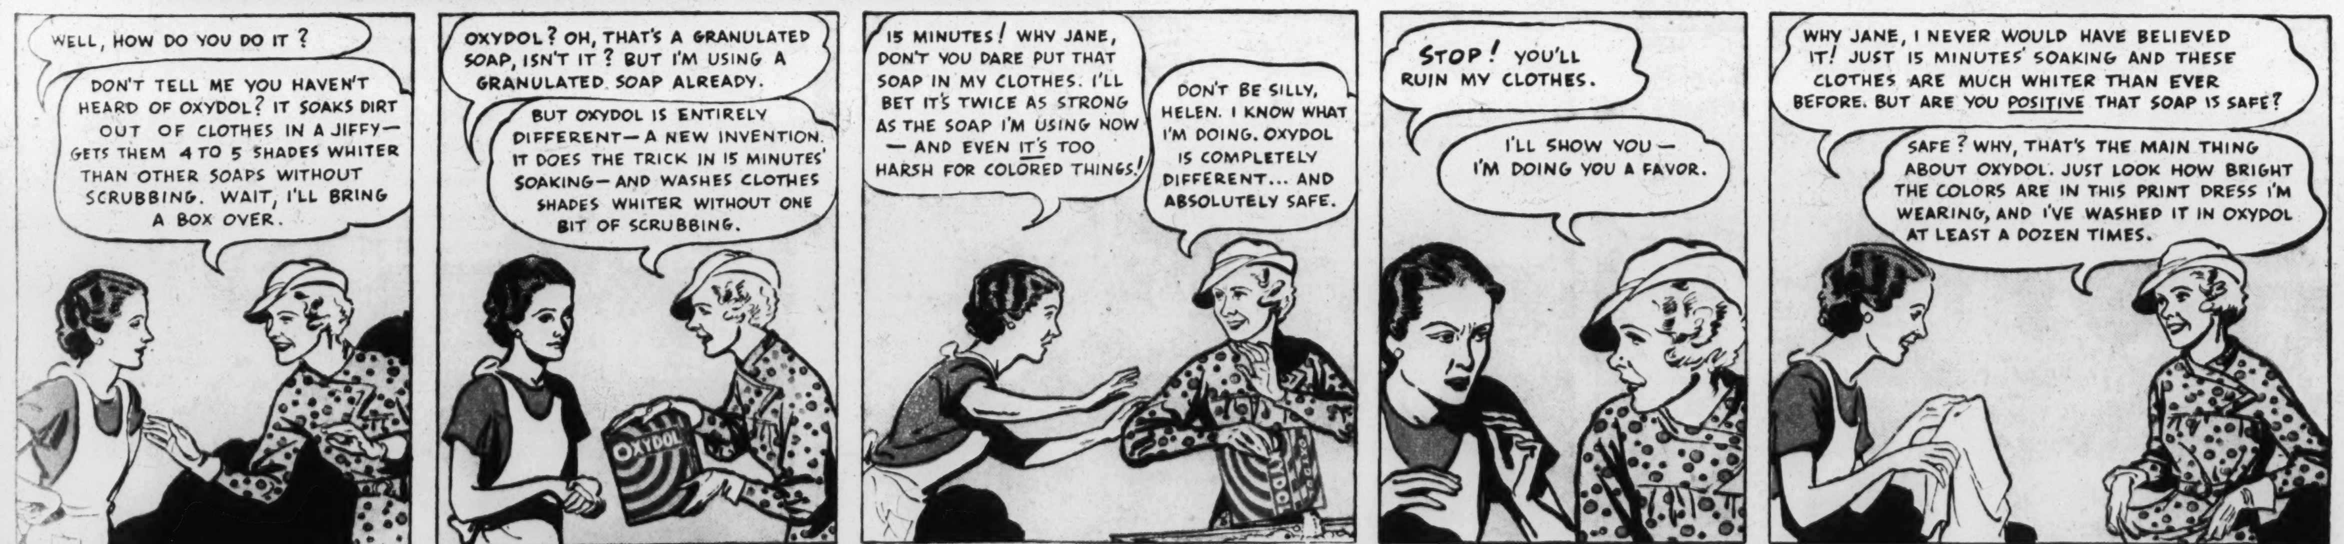
EVEN LADIES HAVE "TIFFS"
STOP! DON'T YOU DARE!
I'LL SHOW YOU!

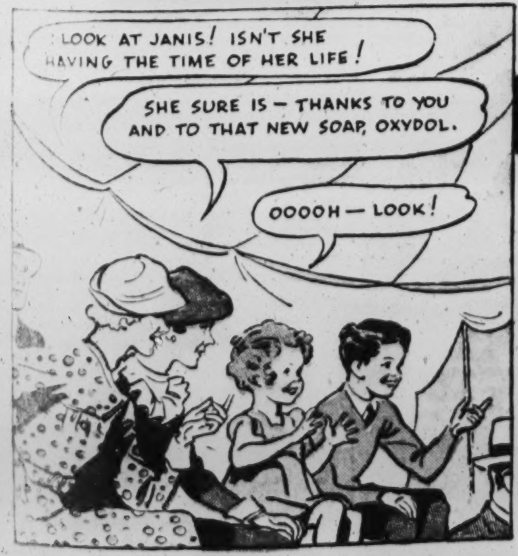
"IMPOSSIBLE," THOUGHT HELEN-BUT IT TOOK ONLY 15 MINUTES FOR JANE TO OPEN HER EYES.



JANIS IS BEGGING TO GO TO THE CIRCUS.
I'M TAKING BOBBY THIS AFTERNOON. WHY DON'T YOU BRING JANIS AND COME ALONG?
HOW CAN I WITH ALL THIS WASHING TO DO?
WHY HELEN, YOU DON'T MEAN TO TELL ME YOU'RE STILL RUBBING AND SCRUBBING CLOTHES? THAT'S POSITIVELY OLD-FASHIONED.



WELL, HOW DO YOU DO IT?
DON'T TELL ME YOU HAVEN'T HEARD OF OXYDOL? IT SOAKS DIRT OUT OF CLOTHES IN A JIFFY—GETS THEM 4 TO 5 SHADES WHITER THAN OTHER SOAPS WITHOUT SCRUBBING. WAIT, I'LL BRING A BOX OVER.
OXYDOL? OH, THAT'S A GRANULATED SOAP, ISN'T IT? BUT I'M USING A GRANULATED SOAP ALREADY.
BUT OXYDOL IS ENTIRELY DIFFERENT—A NEW INVENTION. IT DOES THE TRICK IN 15 MINUTES' SOAKING—AND WASHES CLOTHES SHADES WHITER WITHOUT ONE BIT OF SCRUBBING.
OXYDOL
15 MINUTES! WHY JANE, DON'T YOU DARE PUT THAT SOAP IN MY CLOTHES. I'LL BET IT'S TWICE AS STRONG AS THE SOAP I'M USING NOW — AND EVEN IT'S TOO HARSH FOR COLORED THINGS!
DON'T BE SILLY, HELEN. I KNOW WHAT I'M DOING. OXYDOL IS COMPLETELY DIFFERENT... AND ABSOLUTELY SAFE.
STOP! YOU'LL RUIN MY CLOTHES.
I'LL SHOW YOU — I'M DOING YOU A FAVOR.
WHY JANE, I NEVER WOULD HAVE BELIEVED IT! JUST 15 MINUTES' SOAKING AND THESE CLOTHES ARE MUCH WHITER THAN EVER BEFORE. BUT ARE YOU POSITIVE THAT SOAP IS SAFE?
SAFE? WHY, THAT'S THE MAIN THING ABOUT OXYDOL. JUST LOOK HOW BRIGHT THE COLORS ARE IN THIS PRINT DRESS I'M WEARING, AND I'VE WASHED IT IN OXYDOL AT LEAST A DOZEN TIMES.



LOOK AT JANIS! ISN'T SHE HAVING THE TIME OF HER LIFE!
SHE SURE IS — THANKS TO YOU AND TO THAT NEW SOAP, OXYDOL.
OOOOH — LOOK!

IT'S ALMOST UNBELIEVABLE BUT IT'S TRUE! READ THESE FACTS—MAKE THIS TEST!

New Million Dollar Granulated Soap Combines Safety With Utmost Speed. At Last A Safe Fast-Washing Soap That Actually Loosens Dirt Out of Clothes In 15 Minutes' Soaking—Gets Them 4 to 5 Shades Whiter Than Other Soaps Without Scrubbing or Boiling.

New and Improved OXYDOL is different from any bar, flake, chip or ordinary granulated soap you ever used. Different in the way it's made and in the results it gets.

Due to its patented process of making, OXYDOL dissolves instantly in hard or soft water, and does these things:

FIRST—gives thick, 3-inch suds, rich as whipped dairy cream. Suds that go to work on grease, dirt and stains—in any water—2 to 3 times faster than less modern soaps.

SECOND—sets up a unique, new "soak and flush" washing action. 15 MINUTES' SOAKING loosens dirt out so it flushes away—without scrubbing or boiling.

You cut washing time 25% to 40% in tub or machine. You save long hours of soaking, scrubbing and boiling—you get clothes clean and white without washboard wear and tear.

And yet, due to its special formula—its special protective combination of mild soap ingredients—OXYDOL is safe. Absolutely safe to hands, colors, and fabrics!

Accept FREE Trial

Send name and address to Procter & Gamble, Dept. D10-48, Box 1801, Cincinnati, Ohio, and we'll see you get a regular 10c package (enough for 2 full washings) absolutely free. Or to avoid delay—get OXYDOL tomorrow from your own grocer.

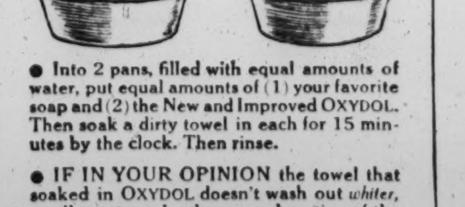
If This Test Fails in Your Home



- Into 2 pans, filled with equal amounts of water, put equal amounts of (1) your favorite soap and (2) the New and Improved OXYDOL. Then soak a dirty towel in each for 15 minutes by the clock. Then rinse.
- IF IN YOUR OPINION the towel that soaked in OXYDOL doesn't wash out whiter, smell sweeter, take the unused portion of the package of OXYDOL back to your grocer with this ad and get your money back.

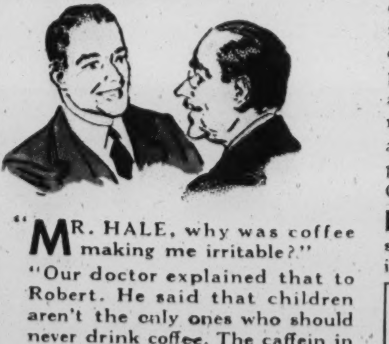
CONGRATULATIONS, JOHNSON! WE'VE BEEN HEARING FINE REPORTS OF YOU LATELY! YOU'RE A REAL ASSET TO THE ROAD!
THANK YOU, SIR — SINCE I SWITCHED TO POSTUM MY HEADACHES AND INDIGESTION HAVE QUIT, AND I'M SLEEPING LIKE A ROCK!



"MR. HALE, why was coffee making me irritable?"

"Our doctor explained that to Robert. He said that children aren't the only ones who should never drink coffee. The caffein in coffee affects many grown-ups, too —it can make them nervous, cause indigestion, or keep them awake nights."
